ANNOUNCEMENT.
Hood River, Ore., Jan. 16, 1906
Editorial:
I wish to announce through the columns of your paper that I shall be a candidate at the primary election to be held in April of this year for the republican nomination for representative in the legislature from Wasco county. If I should receive the nomination and be elected I shall, to the utmost of my ability, serve the interests of Wasco county, and especially the interests of the western portion of the county and Hood River Valley. A. A. JAYNE.

We are indebted to the Oregon Lumber Company for a thermometer and barometer. This is something we need for it is now possible for us to discern the exact temperature of an area and also to tell whether the storm brewing is of sufficient intensity for us to "stand pat" or rush the victim to the cold storage plant in the vicinity.

As candidates for County Commissioner G. R. Castner and the present Commissioner, H. J. Hibbard, have announced themselves. Both these gentlemen are well and favorably known in Hood River and in the county as well and both have many friends. The contest between them is purely a friendly one and they are willing to submit to the will of the majority.

The political pot is commencing to boil and the cigar store politician is in his glory. It is as natural for the average American to take to politics as it is for the average woman to say "no" when she means "yes." Politics is a profession and not a trade, and the man who goes into it with the big stick as his weapon can be depended to come out of the melee with a razor for future use.

In another column we publish an article containing valuable information to intending voters. It will repay them for the reading, as it defines the registration provisions and tells you what you can do in this matter and what you cannot do and retain your right to vote. It likewise gives the dates of the opening and closing of registration and for filing petitions and other information which you will find valuable. Look it over.

The proposed meeting of the fruit growers of Hood River valley to be held in K. of P. hall, February 10, is right in line with the progressive ideas of Hood River to strike while the iron is hot. While the information and stimulus of ideas is exerted by the conventions held at La Grande and Portland are still in the minds of the gentlemen who attended those meetings no doubt much can be learned by their fellow growers that will be useful. You should attend and make it a success.

It is with pleasure and esteem that the Glacier announces the privilege to be allowed to support our distinguished townsman A. A. Jayne for the nomination for Representative. The announcement of his candidacy was co-incident with his statement of purpose to again make an effort, if nominated and elected, to accomplish the passage of the Cascade County Bill. Neither introduction or eulogy of Mr. Jayne is necessary. His work in the interests of the bill at the last session of the Legislature speaks for him, and speaks most eloquently.

BIG MEETING FOR HIGH SCHOOL PLAN

J. W. Ackerman, State Superintendent of Schools, will arrive in town tomorrow and Saturday morning at 10 o'clock will speak at a meeting to be held in Artisan's Hall on the high school plan when delegations will be present from Mosier, Pine Grove, Frankton, Oak Hill and the other districts and at which time Superintendent Ackerman, Prof. Wiley and others will address the meeting.
It is asked by the school directors and those who are interested in the matter that every one who can, be at the hall on Saturday and give as much encouragement as possible to this movement. It is not expected that the school will be built today or tomorrow, but it is pointed out that it soon must be.

ODDITIES OF ENGLISH

PUZZLES OF PRONUNCIATION THAT ONE MEETS IN ENGLAND.

Proper Names That in Sound Have Little in Common With the Way They Are Spelled—Welsh Names a Source of Unfailing Confusion.

English as it is spelled and pronounced in the United States is certainly confusing to a degree to any foreigner, but in old England his lot is still harder when it comes to proper names.

"If," said an English writer, "the amiable foreigner is driven to the verge of distraction by the 'rough' and pronouncing words ending in 'ough,' and cannot for the life of him see why, if 'ough' spells 'koff,' 'though' should not be 'thof' and 'rough' 'sof,' what must be think of our phonetic eccentricities in the pronunciation of place names, which are such a sore puzzle even to ourselves?"

"Why, for instance, in the name of all that's reasonable, should we have to say Amesbury when we write and mean Almesbury, and, when we are in Lancashire, inquire the way to Oost' when it is Overstone we mean? These are mysteries which are not even revealed, one would think, unto babes and which certainly make the upgrown man feel foolish.
"If you happen to be in Suffolk and want to find your way to Waldringfield, near Ipswich, you must avoid at any cost pronouncing the word as it is written. You will be looked at as a freak or a foreigner, but ask for Wunnerfi and you will be sent on your way rejoicing. One may be prepared to find that Belvoir is pronounced Beaver, but who is to know that Aspatris, in Cumberland, is only recognized locally as Spethy? You may ask the native the nearest way to Aspatris till you are black in the face and he will stare blankly at you for your pains, but breathe the word Spethy and you will get your direction quickly enough.
"Little Urswick is a place unknown to thousands of Lancashire folk who are familiar enough with the village of that name, but call it Liosick, and their faces will brighten at once with intelligence. Pontefract is not recognizable to the southern ear, as Pomfret, but why should Keighley be known locally as Keethley and not as Keeley, which is the obvious rendering?"

"But the North county has no monopoly of odd pronunciations. Go to Devonshire and ask for Brithembotton. The odds are you will be told there is no such place. Brimbottom they know right well, and that is the place you really want. Thurlstone, by a similar or worse perversion, becomes Drizzelcum, which may or may not be a tribute to the dampness of its climate. There is in Gloucestershire a village called Churchdown, which for some inexplicable reason is always spoken of locally as Chosen. The good people of Churchdown appreciate the joke as much as anybody and tell you how, when the trains were asked to stop there, some one said, 'Make they Chosen people joyful!'"

"Congresbury, in Somersetshire, is known far and wide as Coombsbury, and, shades of our Norman ancestors Hurstmonceaux, in Sussex, has long degenerated on the lips of many to Hursmonceaux. St. Oyth is a name that ought not to present any lingual difficulty, but its favorite form in the district seems to be Toosy, and, while the educated man has long been reconciled to call Greenwich 'Greenidge,' there are many who still persist and they are right, though it sounds strange to the ear in pronouncing the name as it is spelled."

"Chelmsford, in Suffolk, has been cut down to the more convenient Chelmsford, and Sandiaca, a small town in Derbyshire, is Sandiker to those who know what they ought to say. Welsh names are a source of unfailing confusion to the Englishman, whose tongue refuses point blank to grapple with them, and yet some of them at least have made simple enough, such as Rhudbaxton, in Pembrokeshire, which as Rhudbaxton is simplicity itself. In Hertfordshire the formidable Sawbridgeworth has been reduced to the handy compass of Saper, but what shall we say of Woodmancote, which to the good people of Gloucestershire is often known as Uddenmuckat?"—New York Herald.

The Turkish Woman.
Until a Turkish girl is eight years old she is free to run about and play the same as her brother. After that time she is regarded as a grownup. She leaves school and puts on a veil. She is forbidden to run about. No man except her father or husband is allowed to look upon her face, and she is not permitted to go into her father's part of the house. Her parents begin to arrange for her marriage—she has nothing to say in the matter. She must be married by the time she is eleven, and her husband will probably be about seventeen. In Turkey an unmarried man or woman is unknown. Such a state is looked upon as disgraceful. When the wedding arrives the ceremonies last a week. The wedding dress is a most gorgeous affair, often costing $1,000, being embroidered in gold and pearls. The prettiest part of the ceremonies takes place one evening, when the girl friends of the youthful bride entertain her family. Each takes a lighted candle and, forming a procession with the bride as leader, march about the grounds among the lower beds, through the trees. All are in bright colored dresses, and their hair hangs over their shoulders. Songs are sung, sweet musical chants are heard and the scene suggests nothing so much as a bit of fairyland itself.—Washington Star.

Considerate.
After the tea things had been cleared away the young wife came over and sat on hubby's knee, put her plump arms about his neck and kissed him half a dozen times.
"Well, what is it now?" he queried.
"A new dress, dear," she answered.
"But don't you know that times are awfully hard just at present?" he queried.
"Of course I do," she replied. "That's why I want to give the poor dress something to do."—Detroit Tribune.

MAKING PIPE ORGANS.
Interesting Work That is Done in the Voicing Room.
Both the metal and wooden pipes of a pipe organ are made on the selfsame principle of the willow whistles that every man made when he was a boy, and so, after all, a pipe organ, the mightiest musical instrument yet invented, is but the evolution of that primitive pipe of Pan, the willow whistle.
The most interesting place in an organ factory is the voicing room. Up to the time the pipes enter this room they are as dumb as broomsticks. Here the breath of life is breathed into them, and they are made to speak, each in the voice intended by its maker. Here the big fat pipes are taught to thunder out their diapason and those scarce the diameter of a slate pencil and one-half an inch long to utter their shrill whistle and the others the thousands of varying tones between. And not only must the pipes of one stop speak correctly as individuals and members of their own particular family, but they must be in accord with all the hundreds of others in whose midst they are to live. To see that they do this is the work of a man whose ear is keen to the slightest variation and who must know why a pipe does not speak as it should and how to make it. One by one the pipes are set upon the wind chest standing here with the bellows and all the internal mechanism of an organ properly adjusted and with a keyboard in front of him the voicer tests each one. By changing the size and shape of the aperture through which the wind passes he governs the tone until it is exactly what it should be, a task which only a man with the nicest sense of sound can accomplish.
