LUMBER BUSINESS WILL BE FACTOR

IN UPBUILDING OF HOOD RIVER

Big Mills With Enormous Capacities Will Soon be in Operation and Valley Timber Utilized.

While the residents of Hood River and valley are occupying themselves with the cultivation of strawberries and apples another industry is being built up and enlarged upon in the vicinity of Hood River that is going to mean thousands of dollars to this city.

This resource is in the large tracts of timber laying back toward Mount Hood on both the east and the west sides of Hood River. On the east side the purchase of 17,000 acres of timber land two miles beyond Winans city by the Oregon Lumber Company and the erection of a huge mill there with a capacity of over 200,000 feet per day means the employment of from 500 to 600 men. To gain any adequate idea of what this enormous structure with its adjacent power of over 2,000 horse power means it is necessary to visit the proposed new town site and examine it. Two mile, it may on the coast will have a larger cap city than this new one of the Oregon Lumber Company which will be run by electricity, lighted by electricity and can if necessary be operated night and day. To operate the mill will require but 1,200 horsepower, so that there will be a surplus horsepower of 600 or 800, which can be utilized for any other purposes that the lumber company may see fit. With a railroad, which is fast being gotten into condition to run regular trains over it, it would be possible to establish any kind of a factory or industry at Dee by utilizing that surplus power and shipping the finished product from there to any part of the country.

The clearing away of the timber in this section will also mean the opening of many valuable acres of land that can be used for orchards as the oil is rich and deep. On the bench above the mill is a stretch of land that it is said will make as good land for the cultivation of apples as there is anywhere in the valley. Six or seven miles back from the terminus of the new railroad would place growers no further away than those who are living in other districts out on the east and west side and are compelled to haul their fruit to the O. R. & N.

As to the railroad its benefits are already beginning to be felt by residents along the line. The Glacier man, through the courtesy of President Eccles and Manager Early of the Oregon Lumber Co., took a ride over the line Sunday and predicts that when the road is fully completed and comfortable accomodations provided for the public it will become most popular as a ride for visitors and tourists to this city. The scenic attractions along the Hood River between this city and the Y are well worth a trip over the road. Going farther up the line some of the finest orchards in the valley can be seen, giving the visitor an impression of what some of the best kept and most prolific apple trees and the accompanying homesteads in the famous east side apple belt look like. Passing on through Odell, the school house of which can be seen in the distance from the train, the road goes through a fine stretch of country, arriving at Winans City where it again strikes the river and the scenery becomes wild, rugged and picturesque. Arriving at the new lumber town the immense frame of the new mill greets the eye and the roar of the great torrent of water pouring through the gate of the dam falls upon the ear.

Above the dam a railroad bridge has already been constructed over which the logging road will run to the mill. At one side a large fish ladder is in course of construction, which is being hewn out of the solid rock and when placed in position will be as permanent as human hands can make it. Passing over the bridge and ascending a steep incline we arrive at the logging camp where we are the guests of Charley Bell at a dinner served by Mr. and Mrs. Nelson, that is so good and bountiful that the Glacier man feels that he would like to stay on forever as he is informed that this is a regular occurrence at the Hotel Nelson.

The writer is invited after dinner by Mr. Bell to step back aways and take a look at the tall timber, but Manager Early says it is getting late and that we must start for town. Going back to our open air vestibule, we are joined by W. Fike, M. M. Hill, Mr. Newman and a friend who accompanied them and who had boarded the train at Mr. Fike's on the way out and started for home. Now and then we took on a passenger or let one off, showing that the residents along the road are beginning to appreciate the conveniences of it. At Odell we picked up a car of wood for Hood River and as we passed along the people living in the nearby houses could be seen with their faces glued to the window panes or out in the yards watching the passing of a means of transportation that is destined to mean much for them in future.

The new mill of the Stanley-Smith company on the other side of the valley is nearing completion. Its capacity is said to be 150,000 feet per day. Its construction is in charge of one of the most experienced lumber mill men on the Pacific coast. Everything about the construction of this mill is of the latest and most improved pattern. The machinery and appliances about it are being built with a substantiality that provides for an enormous outlay of money and insures the utilizing of every stick of timber within the reach of the mill. It is expected to commence operation at this plant within a few days. The main mill will not be put in operation but an auxiliary plant that is in attachment. This mill will also have an electric plant and will be lighted with electricity and can be run the full 24 hours if desired.

The timber supply near it is said to be sufficient to last for good a many years and it will employ in the neighborhood of 300 men when in full operation. The lumber will be marketed through its flume which it is said will be enlarged to accomodate the greater capacity of the new plant. Many new automatic appliances have been installed there which will save much labor and expense. With this mill in full operation in addition to one or two smaller mills that are projected Hood River will become no small factor in the lumber business in the state of Oregon.

Hon. A. A. Jayne's Platform.

To Simeon Bolton, County Clerk Wasco county, and to the members of the Republican party and the electors of the County of Wasco, comprising the Twenty-ninth Legislative District in the state of Oregon,

I, A. A. Jayne, reside at Hood River, Wasco county, Oregon. I am a duly registered member of the Republican party. If I am nominated for the office of representative in the legislative assembly, at the primary nominating election to be held in the county of Wasco, the 20th day of April, 1906, I will accept the nomination and will not withdraw, and if I am elected I will qualify as such officer.

If I am nominated and elected, I further state to the people of Oregon, as well as to the people of my legislative district, that during my term of office I will always vote for that candidate for United States Senator in Congress who has received the highest number of the people's votes for that position at the general election next preceding the election of a Senator in Congress, without regard to my individual preference.

I further say that if I am nominated and elected I will faithfully and to the best of ability work for the interests of Wasco county, and every part thereof.

I believe in the letter and spirit of the primary election law, and will in every honorable way encourage carrying out its provisions.

I desire printed on the official ballot after my name the following words. "Will vote for peoples choice for Senator."

A. A. JAYNE,
Candidate for nomination.

SCHOOLMASTER IS DECLARED NOT GUILTY

A case in which G. W. Brown, principal of the Frankton school was charged with assault and battery for punishing one of the scholars named Virgil B. Jones, occupied the attention of Recorder Nickelsen and a jury last Friday afternoon.

The charge was that Mr. Brown had unreasonably whipped the boy and his father had Brown arrested. The case attracted wide spread interest at Frankton and in this city and when the time for the trial arrived the city hall was packed to overflowing. Brown has always borne a good reputation at the school and had many friends at the trial. The boy also had a good many sympathizing friends in the audience.

The case was called at 4 o'clock. E. H. Hartwig was the attorney for Jones and Frank Menefee, of The Dalles, assistant prosecuting attorney, represented the state. Fouts & Derby had the case for Brown, S. F. Fouts trying the case. A jury consisting of P. S. Davidson, G. R. Castner, H. F. Davidson, W. O. Ash, N. Young, and Wm. Kennedy had been subpoenaed and after being questioned were accepted by attorneys for both sides of the case.

The prosecution endeavored to prove that the boy had been unjustly and cruelly punished and Jones was called as a witness and testified how the whipping had taken place. Dr. Shaw was also called to testify as to the effects of the punishment. Several other witnesses were called by the prosecution, none of whose testimony seemed to show that plaintiff had been either cruelly or unreasonably punished. The prosecution then rested its case.

Attorney Fouts then read citations of law on similar cases giving school teachers the authority to punish refractory scholars within a reasonable limit and made a motion that Justice Nickelsen direct the jury to render a verdict of not guilty.

Attorneys Hartwig and Menefee objected to this, the latter saying that where evidence had been submitted the justice had no power to dismiss the case.

The defense then called its witnesses, the first of whom was Brown, who told about the occurence of punishing Jones, saying that the lad had disobeyed his teacher and that she could not manage him and that he had been sent to him for correction. He said that the boy was not a bad boy, but was mischievious and that he had told him if he was sent to him again he would have to punish him thoroughly. The implement with which the punishment was inflicted was put in evidence and after some cross questioning by the opposing council Brown was allowed to retire.

The boy's teacher also testified as to how Jones behaved and told substantially the same story as Brown.

As it was then about 6 o'clock the case was adjourned until 7:30 when it was taken up again, witnesses examined and arguments made on both sides and finally submitted to the jury, which after deliberations of half an hour rendered a verdict of not guilty.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Dalles, Ore., March 13, 1906.

To the Republicans of Wasco county:—

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for re-nomination to the office of sheriff of Wasco county, subject to the republican votes to be cast at the primaries on April 20. If I should secure re-nomination and be re-elected to the office, I promise to discharge the duties faithfully, honestly and economically. My incumbency of the office for the past two terms has given me a knowledge of the duties which can be learned only by experience, and which will be exercised, in case of my re-nomination and re-election, to the best interests of my constituents of all political parties in this county. The manner in which taxes have been collected, and other duties of the office performed during my incumbency, challenges comparison with any one who has occupied the position heretofore. I desire the nomination from the republicans of Wasco county, not of any particular faction, believing that my experience has particularly fitted me for the office, and which can only be acquired by a practical knowledge of the duties.

F. C. SEXTON.

WHAT APPLE LAND WILL PAY YOU

ACTUAL PROFITS OF GROWERS

Not Based on the Best, But on the Average Figures From Authentic Sources.

We are often aksed for figures concerning the apple business, by strangers and others, who want to know just what apple land will pay. We are able to give some figures, through the courtesy of the Apple Growers Union, that are authentic and based on actual productions for a few years past.

The average production per acre, for the three years previous to the past season, shows that figuring on the average number of trees per acre as 65, and the number of boxes per tree as six, (which figures have not been taken from one grower or two, but the general producer), and we have 390 boxes of apples per acre.

It is found that the average price, including apples of all varieties, is $1.50 per box. Deducting the cost of raising, which is 50 cents, we obtain the price of $1 per box, which gives the actual net profit of $390 per acre.

This year the crop was a light one and the trees averaged only 4 boxes to the tree, giving 60 boxes or $260 to the acre. Where Newtowns and Spitzenbergs were grown entirely, the price reached $2 a box, bringing the net profit per acre to over $500.

A comparison with some of the finest apple growing districts in Colorado, shows that the average price received there was $1 per box, which price was figured on a basis of their best varieties. Deducting the cost of growing as 50 cents per box, it can be seen what the difference is in profit.

In the average price of Hood River apples, all the five tier fruit and seconds were included and the cheaper varieties. As most of the new orchards, that are coming into bearing, will be largely Newtowns and Spitzenbergs, it seems almost a foregone conclusion that the average price in future will be higher than has been in the past.

Had only the best varieties been used as a basis of calculation, the price would have soared almost out of sight. As it is, it is very easy to discover what profit there was in apples for an orchardist who had 20 acres in bearing this year with a short crop—$5,200. Figuring on the crop of a good year at an average of 300 boxes per acre with a 20 acre orchard we have $7,800 for the season's work.

These figures of course represent careful attention and hard work in every phase of the business. Its growing, spraying, cultivation of the trees, thinning out and lastly in sorting and packing the fruit.

How closely the product from this district has been sold, may be gleaned from the fact that it is almost next to impossible to find a box of good fruit anywhere in the valley now, although diligent search has been made in the past few days for apples by eastern men who have come here and want to take back a box of Hood River fruit to exhibit to their friends. A box of winesaps secured a few days ago for a Portland buyer brought the tidy sum of $3.

WHAT IT COST TO START A NEW COUNTY

A letter received at this office from H. S. McDaniel, county clerk of Sherman county, gives the following figures and information in regard to the beginning of the administration of that county:

"With reference to the beginning of Sherman county, Ore.

Taxable property for	1889,	$617,572
" "	" 1890,	673,466
" "	" 1891,	907,582
" "	" 1892,	1,022,301
" "	" 1893,	1,017,528

Tax levy for all purposes: 1889, 18 mills; 1890, 20 mills; 1891, 20 mills; 1892, 20 mills; 1893, 22 mills, as follows: 5½ mills for county school, 16½ for state and county purposes including one-tenth of one mill for G. A. R. fund, one seventh for university fund and one fifth for O. N. G. fund.

Population by census of 1890, 1792.

I cannot give the indebtedness of Wasco county as I have failed to find report of committee theron, but for the first strip, Sherman county portion was $8,304.96 and the second $842.90. The expense of the county has been for some time about $1,000 per month all told, the salaries of officers, has been changed several times and when the county was set off it was under the fee system so it is very hard to give it. Yours very truly,

H. S. McDaniel.

Work Progressing on New Ditch.

Work on the ditch of the Hood River Irrigating District is progressing quite rapidly. About a mile and a half of the ditch has been dug. Between 70 and 75 men are working on the new waterway and more may be put on later.
