

THOUGHT THEY WERE BEING KIDNAPPED

Two well known lads of this city had an experience one day last week that will probably serve to keep them nearer the latchstring of their homes in future.

The boys met a good natured friend who had plenty of money and who was going to Portland and he invited them to accompany him and have a good time. They consented and he took them to the railroad station and bought them each a round trip ticket. On the way down in order to assure them that they would be able to do the town without getting out of funds he exhibited his money to them and did it in such an ostentatious way that he attracted the attention of the conductor. The conductor questioned the boys and their friend and as their explanation was not very satisfactory he drew the heavy conclusion that their well meaning friend was trying to kidnap them. In order to have them under surveillance he took them back to the last coach which was not occupied and locked them in. On reaching a station down the road he telegraphed ahead to the Portland police department that he had two boys on the train that were being lured away from their happy homes by a bold bad man.

A detective was at the depot in Portland and escorted the trio to the police station where they were detained and later given a hearing before a police magistrate. They were having a hard time explaining the whys and wherefores of the situation and it looked as if they would be forced to spend a number of hours in limbo until their parents here could be communicated with. Finally a police officer put in an appearance who happened to be a relative of the supposed kidnapper and he explained the predicament. On the representations of the officer the proposed eight-seater excursion party was allowed to depart on the even temper of its way with the exception that the youngsters were escorted back to the station and put aboard the train with the injunction that Hood River was a pretty good place for boys of tender age and that the land of the ripe red strawberry and rosy cheeked apple would furnish excitement in plenty for them for a few years to come.

Will Support Mr. Jayne.
Editor Glacier—And the Lord spoke and said unto Joshua: Harden not thine heart unto the voice of my people and close not thine ears unto the utterings of conscientious folk, for these are the salt of the earth and the mainstay of progression and they shall inherit the nation, and the strength of my people shall be even as the strength of Mount Hood for I am with the people, and if the people are with thee, then shall victory crown thine efforts.

Thus—or words to the same effect—wrote an ancient chronicler. There can hardly be any doubt that in all ages wise public men kept their ears in proximity to the ground, thus catching the soundwaves emanating from the people. Sometimes, it seems, they needed a prodding to keep from falling asleep or forgetting their mission among their fellows and the Lord always seemed to be at hand to do the good-stick act.

Our representative, A. A. Jayne, who is standing for re-election, has evidently experienced a change of heart and as a consequence has declared himself to be in favor of statement No. 1. Having signified his intention to comply with the spirit of the primary law, there is no valid reason why he should not receive the full support of both parties and variations thereof, thus insuring the election of a representative from this part of Wasco county.

Some of us may slightly differ with Mr. Jayne as to methods employed for accomplishing certain public measures, but such differences, when existing, are not infrequently due to the propensities in some human natures, which are a survival from the witch-burning period, when intolerance and bigotry were the ruling passions of humanity.

Pharisaism and the Holier than Thou spirit, old as civilization, and present in all communities should and must be tolerated, but toleration almost ceases to be a virtue when a man's word, publicly given, is impugned without just or explicit cause. It is not my purpose to take up the gauntlet in defense of the average politician and legislator, for whom I have not even common respect, but when promised dishonorable intentions are charged to the account of a townsman and a neighbor who has lived among us these many years, and presumably intends to remain with us the balance of his natural life, it behooves every just and justice loving citizen to challenge the traducer to bring forth proofs that Mr. Jayne ever broke his promise given publicly and in the capacity of a public servant.

For a "molder of public opinion" to resort to such doubtful, indecisive, main does not honor nor add laurels to the temperance cause, in the behalf of which I myself have been employed by precept and example if not in the actual militant ranks.

Previous to Mr. Jayne's subscribing to statement No. 1 I was opposed to his candidacy on the ground that the stand he maintained was unprogressive, undemocratic and altogether unworthy the state of Oregon, who is taking the lead in the fight for the election of United States Senators by the popular vote. Now when this objection is removed and my investigations in other directions have cleared up some doubtful points, I can conscientiously sustain Mr. Jayne, and I hope that my estimate may to some extent be responsible not only for the election of Mr. Jayne to the state legislature but also, indirectly, for the election of Hood River's grand old man to the United States Senate.

Talks on Osteopathy.
It is not the claim of Dr. A. T. Still, the founder of osteopathic medicine, nor of his followers, that the basic facts and principles upon which the system rests are essentially new discoveries, but only that their application is new. This claim cannot be contradicted. Osteopathy, as a science and practice both, is absolutely original and is not to be confused with other systems of practice, nor with such adjuncts to medicine as massage, Swedish movements, medical gymnastics, etc., with which it has no connection or essential likeness whatsoever. Other schools of medicine accept all the isolated facts and principles of anatomy, physiology and pathology out of which the new science of Osteopathy has been constructed. But no other medical teacher before Dr. Still ever wrought these facts and principles into a consistent, homogeneous system which is able not only to overcome much sickness and deformity, but indeed to do so in a large share of cases much more successfully than can be accomplished by old-time methods.

PLANS PREPARED FOR BUILDINGS AT DEE

Plans which are being prepared by Architect P. M. Hall-Lewis for the new buildings at Dee will be in the hands of the contractors next Saturday, and it is expected that work will soon commence on them.

The new hotel which the Mount Hood Lumber Company is about to erect will be of the modified colonial style with broad overhanging eaves, rustic sides and shingle roof. The building will be 85 and one half feet long by 31 and one half feet deep and will be set on a stone foundation. It will be of a T shaped plan and will contain in all about 30 rooms. On the first floor will be situated the office, dining room and kitchen. The second floor will contain a parlor, suite of two rooms and bath and 22 sleeping rooms. There will also be two bath rooms on this floor, one for men and the other for women. A veranda in front of the building will be built so as to give separate accommodations for both sexes.

Plans will be issued this week for figures on a residence for W. H. Eccles, president of the company, which is to be 30x38 feet on the ground and similar in architecture to the hotel building. The plans provide for eight rooms and bath, with open plumbing, electric wiring and open fire places. Both buildings will be plastered. In addition a number of four, five and six room cottages will be built for the employes of the company.

Wants to Debate High School Matter.
Editor Glacier—Relative to Mr. Dunbar's communication of last week I desire to say that I was invited by three members of the Odell Literary Society to come over and assist in discussing the consolidation school question. A personal controversy through a newspaper is of no credit to the participants, and of no interest to the public.

I was unaware of any local personal disturbances, hence, am sorry that the incident proved to be so unpleasant. If any of the opponents of consolidation from Odell desire to meet me in some hall in the town of Hood River and discuss before the public, "The advisability of consolidation of our schools in the lower valley," I should be pleased to share time with them. It being strictly understood that parliamentary rules shall govern the debate and the losing disputant must pay the hall rent. Each side shall select one judge and these two selected shall choose the third. Yours truly, A. I. Mason.

An Open Letter to Mr. Dunbar.
Referring to your communication in last week's Glacier, I shall not answer it, for the reason that insinuations are not arguments. But I hereby serve notice on you, Mr. Dunbar, that if you will make one single specific charge over your signature either against my character or reputation, you will find me answering it without much delay. ROSWELL SHELLEY.

False Alarm of Fire.
Considerable excitement was occasioned Monday evening by the cry of "fire" which brought the people indoors out to see flames shooting toward the sky over the tops of buildings. Investigation, however, proved that the occasion for yelling "fire" was a "tempest in a teapot" as the flames came from a chimney that was being burned out in a residence back of J. L. Henderson's real estate office. The fire department promptly responded to the call and had there been a conflagration would have been on the spot in time to have rendered valuable service.
