MAZAMAS PLAN 1906 OUTING

WILL MAKE ASCENT OF MT. BAKER

Prospectus of Mazama Annual Outing Issued Outlining Very Interesting Trip.

The "Mazama" society was organized on the summit of Mt. Hood, July 15, 1894, by an enthusiastic party of mountain climbers, and has steadily increased in number each year. An person who has climbed to the summit of a snow peak on which there is at least one living glacier, and the top of which cannot be reached by any other means except on foot, is eligible to membership. The corresponding secretary is Will G. Steel, Lumber Exchange, Portland, Ore. All those wishing to take the trip must register on an early date, as the committee must know soon how many to provide for.

The itinerary is as follows:
All persons joining the expedition to Mt. Baker at Portland, Oregon, will like the 11:45 p. m. train July 22nd, for Tacoma. The party will be met at the depot by the committee of the Tacoma Chamber of Commerce. Those joining at Tacoma will take the steamer at 7 o'clock on the morning of the 25th. The steamer will proceed to Seattle where those joining from Seattle will leave at 9 o'clock. The steamer will leave Everett at 11:30 a. m. Anacortes at 3:30 p. m., and arrive a Bellingham at 5 p. m., the same day.

The following description of the mountain is taken from "The Mount Baker" in the excellent prospectus which has been issued:
Mount Baker (the true, poetic Indian name of which is Kulshan, which means, according to some of the old legends of the Lummi tribe, "Great White Glacier") is almost a perfect dome rising from the midst of the wildest and most picturesque mountain fastnesses imaginable. Near to the southward are the many headed Sisters, more than a score of bare and very rugged peaks of the great colored rock, each of the peaks being approximately 7,000 feet high. Northward is the jagged head of Shuksan, another Indian name, signifying "The Mountain of Storms," so named because of the continual howling noises of the winds and frequent avalanches around its serrated and precipitous sides. Shuksan is more than 7,000 feet high and its summit has perhaps never been touched by the foot of man. This is in the heart of the famous Mount Baker gold fields, and "trail lead to the bases of many minor peaks in the vicinity. The great canyon of Glacier creek is one of the wonders of this wonderful region north and northwest of the great dome, and Prof. E. S. Ingraham, who ascended Glacier in 1891, declared in his report of the expedition: "It is one of the most interesting and magnificent of the cliffs and scenery in the United States."

Kulshan, "the silent sentinel of a solitary land" is a majestic and glorious pile of rocks, ice and snow. Its elevation, as approximately determined by vertical angles from triangulation stations along Puget Sound by parties of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, is 10,827 feet. The mountain is surrounded by numerous enormous glaciers. One man, E. L. Southey, who has resided near the southern base of the mountain for five years, declares that there are no less than fourteen glaciers, twelve on the west and east sides and two on the south side. There are three craters on the mountain, the largest and most active being Sherman's crater. The live crater is on the southern side of Sherman peak in a depression at least 1,000 feet below the summit. Two lesser peaks or besting remnants of the sides of an enormous extinct crater on the southern side were named Lucinda and Grant.

The mountain has been successfully ascended by seven different parties, as follows: Edmund T. Coleman, August, 1858, a party of four men, via the middle fork of the Nooksack river; Valentine V. Howe, July, 1871, a party of eight men via Glacier creek on the north fork of the Nooksack; Miss Nevels and party, August, 1891, via the middle fork of the Nooksack; Prof. E. S. Ingraham, September, 1891, a party of four men, via the north fork of the Nooksack and Glacier creek; B. B. Dobbis, July, 1892, a party of four men, via the north fork of the Nooksack and Glacier creek; F. F. Handsch, August, 1900, a party of seven men, via Baker river, and Geo. C. Howell, August, 1903, via Baker river. Of the seven ascents, three were made by the northwest or Glacier creek approach, and two by southern or Baker river route.

There have been numerous other climbing expeditions in the Mount Baker district, and E. L. Persons has several times climbed to the summit of the mountain alone. No one has ever been killed or seriously injured in any of these expeditions, although in 1891 Herbert Smith of Blaine, member of a party attempting to climb the mountain from the north-east side, accidentally shot himself in the arm while stalking goats above snow line and died from loss of blood.

Hop Pickers.
Those contemplating a sojourn at the hop fields during September can now be registered as pickers for either of our 100 acre yards, at Reelville, Witch Hazel and Ricketal. Fine camping grounds, low railroad fares, store and other conveniences on each farm. When our register is full no further names be taken. Reserve a place by sending your name and number of pickers to: A. J. RAY, 334 Sherlock Bldg., Portland, Ore.

THE CHERRY.

The cherry has less to contend with than the apple or plum. The tree attains nearly all of its growth during the early portion of the summer while there is an ample supply of moisture in the soil. It ripens its crop of fruit and ends summer growth before the dry periods of July and August. Hence, it is better suited to dry climates than such varieties of trees as require a longer season for maturity. The cherry is peculiarly suited to dry soils and to the higher and drier elevations.

Since the tree does not attain large size in the farm family orchard, the cherry may be planted sixteen feet apart each way. In town gardens where the trees are not likely to receive cultivation and therefore will not attain as large size, they are sometimes planted as closely as twelve to fourteen feet.

In planting the trees care should be taken to dig the holes at least two and a half feet across. It is also wise to dig them eighteen inches in depth. If the soil is of poor quality it should be thrown to one side and the refilling the hole use surface soil of the best quality. It is advisable to use a couple of shovels full of very fine old manure. That from the cow yard is best suited to the purpose. It is practicable to use fresh manure on the surface around the trees, allowing the rains to dissolve the application and leach it into the ground with great solidity, trapping the earth firmly about the roots. After the trees have been solidly set and several inches of earth above the roots, it is advisable to apply two or three pails of water. After this has soaked away, finish filling the hole, leaving the
