

MORE MILLIONS THAN YEARS OLD

John D. Rockefeller was 67 years old July 8. Mr. Rockefeller is at present enjoying his first holiday abroad apparently not worrying over President Roosevelt's threatened intention to prosecute the Standard Oil company for violations of the anti-trust laws.

At 67 years of age John D. Rockefeller is estimated to be worth $300,000,000, according to the figures of careful investigators.

Washington, July 17.—The half-century mark is gradually being attained by the national reclamation fund.

There is an expected balance of little more than $2,000,000 in the fund, but, according to my informant, no new projects will be taken up for the time being.

Proprietors of vegetarian restaurants are making so much money these days, that they do not have time to dine at them themselves.

Now the stockyards washes its face every day for the benefit of the visiting public.

Alfonso is kinging in a low tone of voice these days. Do you blame him?

"Farmer" Coburn, of Kansas, who has declined the seat left vacant by Senator Burton, may have been afraid of getting into bad company.

Every time it is announced that the president will make another speech, the trusts all sit up and wonder who is going to catch it next.

A few of our "captains of industry" are coming to the conclusion that they wouldn't have fared much worse if Eugene Debs had been elected president.

Senator Bailey may be a great man, but his democratic pretensions in the senate are of the opinion that he should "tarry at Jericho" a while longer.

The consumer knows right now who will pay the cost of the meat inspection.

something to crow over. Sometimes they are never had.

The American people are back of President Roosevelt to a man in his demand for thorough beef inspection.

Herrington, Kansas, married women have organized a "searchers club," and they are keeping their husbands busy looking for new places to hide their money.

Even if Mr. Bryan's boom should have no substantial result otherwise, it may give him the necessary material for the "Third Battle."

Kansas appears to be perplexed with grave doubts as to the propriety of subjecting so good a man as Farmer Coburn to association with the U. S. senate.

In the meantime everybody of an inquiring turn of nose, is free to go and inspect the stockyards for himself.

To Senator LaFollette, who has been a vegetarian for five years, all this fuss over the meat question seems an absurd waste of time.

Whether or not the president was animated by spite, is immaterial to the consumer who wants to know what is in the "canned chicken" and "potted ham" he is eating.

While returning from the Grand Army Encampment at Washington City, a comrade from Elgin, Ill., was taken with cholera morbus and was in a critical condition.

I have just made up an assortment of these necessary articles, also have the material to make them to order.
