HOOD RIVER GLACIER

Launched every Thursday by ARTHUR D. MOSE, Publisher.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 30, 1906.

A shortage in the water supply of Medford has forced some of the industries to shut down.

Eastern fruit papers are making a good deal of noise just now because some New York apples sold for $2 a barrel, and are predicting disaster for the berry buyer. What will they think of Hood River Spitzberg, selling for $3 a box or $9 a barrel, with the freight added?

This season is going to be a test of the popularity of Colorado and other mountain grown apples inasmuch as this fruit is likely to be cheap all over the country. The question which suggests itself is, will the consumer pay a stiff price for the Colorado apples when they can get apples from other sections cheaper?—Packer.

Hood River has "tested out" at $3 a box. Now is the time for the other apple sections to have a fit.

The movement to clean up the city and valley is a most commendable one and if accomplished will add much to the attractiveness of Hood River in the eyes of both visitors and residents. If you have not the virtue of orderliness assume it and help to make what is now known as the natural home of the finest apples in the world also the neatest.

The European beetle (xyloborus dispar), a fruit tree pest discovered in Multnomah four years ago, has appeared in Forest Grove orchards. It is a very minute insect, which bores through the core to the heart of the tree and kills it in a very short time. The O. A. C. will investigate the bug as nobody seems to be acquainted with it.

Don't be a knocker. Hide your little hammer and try to speak well of others, no matter how small you may really know yourself to be. When a stranger drops in, jolly him. Tell him this is the greatest town on earth—and it is. Don't discourage him by speaking ill of your neighbors. There's no end of fun minding your own business. It makes other people like you. Nobody gets stuck on a knocker.—Lou Wirput.

In another column will be found an article on the subject of a better lighting system for Hood River. Its intent was to discover the sentiment in regard to this matter which sooner or later must engage the attention of taxpayers, as it is an important one and some day will have to be solved. The interviews published were taken at random and there was no intention discriminate against anybody who has anything to say on this subject, therefore those not consulted need not feel that they were ignored.

The Co-operation of Fruit Growers. Enterprising fruit growers and farmers everywhere are getting together. Organizations, co-operation—the getting together spirit—seems to have full sway this year. It is the sign of progress emerging from the crude pioneer methods to those of the older settled communities. The get together plan properly carried out is work along the right lines. It means that building on solid foundations of co-operation will endure all storms of competition. As an example of the benefits derived, Manager Shepard of the Hood River Fruit Growers' Union, has shown by actual figures that this organization is saving its members $75,000 each year in the matter of boxes, spraying material, and fruit wrapping paper. The prices received from the fruit of the plantations have advanced in some instances from 25 to over 100 per cent and in addition the buyers come to the association uniting with them to fix the price at their home station. The Poyalup & Sumner, the Yakima and other associations are like examples of what organization is doing for the individual. Even where there are only a few growers producing the same class of fruits, it pays to get together. The packing will improve, shipping to the receiving merchants can be made more regular and as a consequence the price fixed is more satisfactory.—Orchard and Farm.

COMMERCIAL CLUB GETTING BUSY

The Hood River Commercial club held an informal meeting last Friday evening for the purpose of resuming active work in the interests of the valley. During the summer the club has only been transacting routine business and attending to the matter of furnishing information to those who applied for it. Now, however, that the vacation season is over it expects to start in on a campaign of education and advertising in regard to Hood River and to take up several matters that have been presented to it in the interests of businessmen and others. The officers of the club state that they would like those who have any suggestions for the betterment of economic or commercial conditions in the city and valley, or that will help the organization in enlarging its scope of activities to make them known. At its meeting it endorsed the idea of having the business men of the city use an ad which can be printed on the back of an envelope and which in brief tells the story of Hood River's fine apples, its wonderful development, its fine climate, how it is situated, its conveniences, its banking and many other things about it that will attract the attention of the recipient of the letter or whoever handles it. As mail from Hood River reaches all parts of the world the club thinks this should prove a most effective ad at a minimum cost. Advertising matter for the fruit fair is also under consideration and it is expected that some provision will be made to supply visitors with a souvenir of some kind.

COMMISSIONER REID LIKES OUR ORCHARDS

A recent visitor at Hood River was J. H. Reid, Commissioner of the First Horticultural District of Oregon. Mr. Reid was accompanied by his wife and was here two days returning to his home at Milwaukee Tuesday. He has earned the reputation since going in office of being fearless and energetic and a hard worker in the interests of better fruit in Oregon. Kerosene is the weapon employed by him for diseased fruit found in the markets of his district. Where owners have refused to take the necessary steps for cleaning up their orchards he has not hesitated to have the trees grubbed out and a suit for $2,000 is now pending against him for destroying a peach orchard affected with scale. This is not however worrying Mr. Reid as he feels that he was doing his duty. While here he visited the orchards of the valley and had nothing but commendation for all he saw, saying that "methods employed in growing fruit at Hood River are so different from those used elsewhere that only by grubbing out their orchards and starting anew can other sections hope to equal the perfection attained here. Persons who see the orchards at Hood River will cease to wonder at the big prices and fine quality of its fruit. Everything is in its favor, soil, climatic conditions and a general feeling among growers for the best regardless of selfishness. Added to this is the excellent work of the Apple Growers' Union in getting good prices and in packing and marketing your fruit. The development of Hood River valley, while already wonderful, has not yet reached its zenith, and I do not think the day is very far distant when land here will be worth $1,000 an acre."

So much taken was Mr. Reid with Hood River that he expressed himself as desirous of obtaining some land here and it is possible that he will become a resident of the community of which he is such an admirer. Hazel Hand Finds Another Watch. Miss Hazel the little daughter of Jack Hand, who is one of the little band engaged in selling fruit at the O. R. & N. station, a few days ago picked up another watch. Two weeks ago this young lady found a watch which was left at the station and eventually returned to its owner and now another discovery is in the same place awaiting a claimant. It was found near the warehouse of the Davidson Fruit company along the railroad track and has on it a program. Miss Hand thinks that the watches are dropped by persons boarding the trains, who are in such a hurry that they forget to properly secure them.

Unloading Material for Bridge. A big crew of men employed by the O. R. & N. has been engaged for the past two days in unloading material for the new steel bridge which that company is building at this place. A fully equipped construction train accompanied the men which is fitted with a huge derrick, water car, immense jacks and everything that would be found necessary for a long stay out on the road. About all the material for the bridge is now here and as soon as the piers are completed work on it will be rushed forward.

SCHOOL BELL TO RING SEPT. 3rd

While the announcement may not be welcome to Hood River's youths and maidens of school age, we are informed that its educational institutions will open Monday, September 3rd, and that pupils will be required to assemble and register on that day. No classes will be heard Monday, but the work of registration and assignment will be taken up so that the real work of the school can commence on Tuesday. All the teachers for the ensuing term have returned from their vacations and are expected to report for duty and the coming school year is looked forward to with the promise of being a most successful one. During the summer months a number of changes and improvements have taken place in the school building and its facilities and Prof. Cronin reports that the physical building has been augmented with the addition of valuable apparatus. One hundred dollars worth of new books has also been added to the school library.

An innovation in the high school course this year will be the maintaining of four classes in the grades of that school giving pupils who attend these classes a privilege they have not heretofore enjoyed, as they will now be allowed credit at the higher institutions of learning in the state for the last year of the course. Formerly any time utilized by the student here in preparing for the higher course was wasted and they were forced to commence their studies where they had left off the year before. This has been done away with by the four grade course and Hood River's high school is now entitled to the same recognition as other towns in Oregon. During vacation the school buildings have been renovated and repaired and a new lavatory built at the high school which is connected with the sewer and has better sanitary conditions.

Will Exhibit Prunes. A contract was closed a few days ago for $75,000 worth of Idaho prunes, to be shipped to London and Glasgow. The first load will be packed and loaded into a refrigerator car during the session of the National Irrigation congress, to be held at Boise, September 3 to 8, and the fruit will be inspected by the delegates of the congress.

"CLEAN UP THE CITY AND VALLEY"

Several progressive residents of Hood River have taken up the slogan of "Clean up the city and valley" and are urging that something be done to make the acknowledged attractions of the city and valley appear to an advantage.

The present condition of the city's streets is said by one disgusted citizen to be a disgrace to Hood River, although he says "I had invited several friends to visit here during the summer. I was almost ashamed to have them come. Rocks, boulders and debris of all kinds are scattered about the streets all over town. Weeds grow in luxuriant profusion everywhere and there is enough cordwood on the streets which has dropped off passing racks to supply a good sized family for the winter. Outside people hear so much about Hood River that when they come here they expect to see a model city in point of cleanliness and what they have seen this summer has kept their entertainers busy explaining the whys and wherefores. We ought to all take a day off and clean up. A movement to organize a city society here to look after such matters, would, I am sure, meet with a hearty response. It is said by those who have taken this matter in hand that conditions in the valley are as bad as they are in the city and that while orchards are in the finest of conditions the appearances around houses and barns are anything but beautiful. A gentleman, who has the interests of the valley at heart, in speaking of it the other day said: "We are all more or less to blame for this and it is more a matter of neglect than intention. It is remarkable how little time it takes to change these conditions if ranchers would only think of it. Nothing looks neater or adds more to the appearance of a farm house than to have the weeds cut around it, lawns kept in shape, and farm vehicles and agricultural implements kept off the road and out of sight. With so many visitors constantly in the valley during the summer it would certainly add very much to Hood River's reputation for progressiveness if ranchers would clean up. Anyhow, let's all make an extra effort in this regard in time for the fruit fair and meeting of the State Irrigation association."

Dislocated His Shoulder. John Guignard while driving through Oak street Tuesday evening was run away with and thrown out of his wagon. His shoulder was dislocated and several persons in the vicinity who went to his assistance and summoned a physician. On examination it was found that Mr. Guignard was quite badly hurt and he was taken to Cottage hospital. A further examination revealed the fact that he had dislocated his shoulder and his injury although painful was not serious. At present he is reported to be resting comfortably.
