AN INTERESTING STORY OF FAIR

NEWBURG GRAPHIC MAN TELLS IT

A Great Fair With Everybody Talking Apples and No Time to Look at Babies and Vegetables.

On arriving in Portland last Sunday morning on the return trip from the Hood River fair, the Graphic scribe in company with W. N. Welch, went to the First Congregational church to hear Mrs. Rose Bloch-Bauer sing and to hear a sermon by William Shaw the great Christian Endeavor worker of Boston. On entering the church we were handed a printed program by the usher and glancing at it we read under the head of "The minute mens topic" these words:

"As we meet and touch each day
The many travelers on our way
Let every such brief contact be
A glorious, helpful ministry."

Our first thought was that Dr. House, the pastor who arranged the program had no doubt recently made a trip to Hood River where every man, woman and child engages in "a glorious helpful ministry"—for the enlightenment of the stranger within the gates, and at this season of the year the text is always taken from the one theme "Hood River apples."

On Friday we went to Hood River, arriving at a late hour in the night and owing to the many people in town we considered ourselves fortunate in being able to secure a bed at the Mount Hood hotel. Hon. F. A. Crawford who was on the same train was unable to secure lodging at the same place when he applied and he proceeded to make himself as comfortable as possible in the hotel lobby and entered into a discussion with two of the residents of the city on the relative merits of Yamhill county and the Hood River valley as fruit growing districts. The discussion waxed warm and it is conceded that Fred was getting the best of the argument, for, along about two o'clock in the morning the hotel clerk, who is loyal to Hood River tapped the newly elected member of the legislature from Yamhill on the shoulder and told him he had found a guest who would share his bed with him, provided Fred would pay the cost of the bed for the night. Fred accepted the offer at once and that is where the Hood River fellows floored him, so to speak. At a very early hour in the morning we heard a man banging around in an adjoining room and we soon recognized the voice of Mr. Crawford when he said to his bed fellow "I thank you for a place to lay down during the night," never mentioning sleep. Later he told us that when he went to the room he found the fellow who made him the generous offer had pre-empted a claim in the middle of the bed, from which he was unable to move him, and all he was able to do was to plant himself on the bed rail next to the wall. Before he got to sleep th fellow began to snore and although he jabbed him in the slats and yelled at him in he sawed away like an old time corn stalk fiddel, and the Yamhill man slept not a wink.

This little account of the trials of Mr. Crawford is thrown in to show how the Hood River people stand together to hold their own with an outsider in an argument regarding apple growing, but had they known that their guest would be in a position to cast a vote in the legislature next winter, either for or against them in their county division fight, they would have given him a room with two beds and free bath. Few towns that class with Hood River have better hotel accommodations and owing to the rush on the occasion of the fair many of the citizens opened their homes in order to give additonal accommodations.

The fair was a great success and while it was supposed to show the different products of their valley it was in reality an apple show. An old resident said to Cy Vaughan, a former resident of Newburg, "Cy, us fellows who are raising vegetables are not in it here. Why, I see here on exhibition as big, fine sweet potatoes as ever grew in California and they won't look at them." And so it was. The people were there to talk Ganos, Yellow Newtowns and Spitzenbergs and while in a few instances Sarah Ann may have been heard to ask if the baby had finished cutting its teeth and if Johnny had started to school, she was soon switched off to engage in the one theme of conversation, apples.

Apples, well yes some apples. Imagine a mammoth tent filled with 800 boxes of such apples as would delight the eyes of the crowned heads of any country. Not little boxes mind you, but the regulation 45 pound box just as they are put up for shipment. There was not a poor box in the lot, and since they pride themselves on their packing as much as on the quality of the fruit., there was not a poorly packed box among them. Of course the fellow was there who asserted that his part of the counrty could produce just as fine apples if the people would turn their attention to fruit growing, but he was met with a smile mingled with pity and contempt, as he failed to show up with the goods.

For strictly a show apple the Wolf River is a great success with its enormous sizes and fine color. I. N. Campbell, of Campbell Bros,. who own an orchard on the east side of the valley, informed the writer that they recently made a shipment of 100 boxes of this variety which they picked from eight trees and for which they received $1 per box. They went to a New York man who wanted them for decorating purposes at a big banquet. Of course they were labeled Hood River apples and this is the way to make a reputation. Some men in business say it don't pay to advertise but Hood River people will tell you it does. Few if any of their apples are selling for less than $1 per box and the Yellow Newtowns and Spitzenbergs run as high as $3 per box.

The Rheubes who never fail to show up at the agricultural horse trot were not in evidence here. The fact is the successful apple grower is a man of intelligence and culture and Hood River seems to be filled up with this class of people. So far as we could see in one short day's stay, the one thing that they ought to be ashamed of is the saloon. Many of them, in fact very nearly a majority of them, are ashamed of it as a vote in the past has shown.

But we must not forget the one box of fruit which to many was a great curiosity, though not so to the writer. It was a half-bushel of paw paws all the way from Indiana. They had the smell o the real thing and had the watchman kindly turned his back, something might have happened. Then there was Byerlee, a newspaper man of Hood River, and he was tempted also, and might have fallen had conditions been favorable. He came from "back east" the home of the paw-paw, and it was touching to see him linering around that box when taps were sounded at the closin hour on the last night and he must go. Our sympathies were with him. To one who came up by the paw-paw route, the smell of the fruit brings sweet memories of boyhood days that make the words of the song, "Mollie come drive the cows home," seem very real, and we could almost hear the rustle of the autumn leaves under our feet.

Hon. E. L. Smith was in evidence everywhere, and what would Hood River be without him? Then there were Editors Moe and Bradley who were on hand ready to give the glad hand to visiting newspaper men, among whom were Albert Tozier, secretary of the State Press association and Timothy Brownhill of the Beaver State Herald. Tozier keeps constantly on hand a well selected stock of newspaper yarns and Timothy, well he is not exacty an Irish comedian but he is a past master at telling stories and he was at his best that night. It will pay you to visit his den if you ever go to Gresham and if he don't get your name down on his subscription list we shall miss our guess.

The traveler passing Hood River by rail has no idea of a valley in that mountainous district, situated as it is between the snow capped peaks of Hood and Adams, but when one gets out on the hill above town and looks away toward Hood on the south he imaines the valley was made to order. By the courtesy of Jud Fergusen, a real estate man we took a nine mile drive out through the valley, where much of the way we found splendid roads and saw many fine orchards loaded down with apples.

In the evening we were invited out to the Potter farm, two and a half miles to the south-west and by the kindness of Mrs. Potter were loaded down with a couple of baskets of great red apples to carry away as souvenirs of our visit.

It matters not how good the locality is in which you live, it pays to get out from home occasionally and visit other sections of the country. It enlarges your vision and gives you a chance to learn many lessons of value. Oregon has such a variety of soil, climate and varied landscape, go in any direction you may, that it will keep you busy to see all the points of interest, but you don't want to leave Hood River out of the list. When you go there you will do well to leave your money and your credit at home unless you want to invest. They will show you the goods and they will not hesitate to tell you there is no other spto on earth like it. They tell it just as though they believed it and in an ungarded moment you are liable to be tempted to invest in some of their dirt. It seems to be in the atmosphere.—Newburg Graphic.

New York Apple Market.

Apple receipts have been heavy here this week from the middle west amounting to from 25 to 35 cars per day, but notwithstanding the liberal receipts the demand has been good when the fruit showed the right quality. A great many of the western apples were of fine quality, and if the westerners continue shipping fruit of this kind it is predicted that it will sell better in this market than the apples from New York state. There is some of the western apples which are arriving though they are cloudy, and these detract from their value on this market. A considerable quantity of the western apples are being exported, the estimates being that the foreign shipments this week will exceed those of the previous week.

The advices from foreign markets are that the demand continues good at unchanged prices, but that fruit arriving lacks color, and exporters are advised to see that their fruit is of the right color if they want to obtain the best prices.

The report of the storm in western New York have caused farmers to be even firmer in their views, and while buyers are inclined to think that the reports of the damage to apples has been exaggerated, and that there will still be enough fruit to meet all requirements, that there are some, however, who admit that it is probable that Baldwins will be bought at prices which were higher than anticipated during the early part of the season.

The market here shows no weakening for the best quality of fruit. Western Jonathans are selling at $3.50 to $5 per barrel; Ganos at $3 to $3.50 and Ben Davis at $2.25 to $3. Ordinarily at this season fruit has to compete with fine varieties of eastern apples such as Snow and McIntosh, but these are now extremely scarce. There is one reason why the fruit is selling to such good advantage, and there is another in the superior quality of the best of the western offerings. For medium grade apples the trade is quiet and easier, hard winter fruit being especially weak.—Fruit Trade Journal.

Horses Scarce.

Government buyers who have been in the interior of Oregon in search of several carloads of cavalry horses have returned with but three head. Formerly it was an easy matter to purchase from one to ten carloads of good cavalry horses in the interior counties within a short time, but horses are so scarce and high-priced now that the government buyers return empty handed.—Heppner Gazette.

A cold is much more easily cured when the bowels are open. Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar opens the bowels and drives the cold out of the system in young or old. Sold by Williams' Pharmacy.

MANY INVESTORS SINCE THE FAIR

New Purchasers Coming In and Those Who Own Want More—Other News of the Apple Situation.

Events in the wake of the fair show that it did much to stimulate business and that investments of many thousands of dollars was the result of strangers coming here to witness it. Investments have been made not only by strangers, but by those at home who already have property at Hood River and having idle money deem it the best place to put it for profitable returns. No better indication of faith in the continued prosperity and profitableness of the Hood River apple can be found than in the fact that the landowner is willing to buy of his own wares and put the profits of his earnings into still more apple land.

Buyers are still coming to look for apple land and almost every train brings in several who are here with a view of purchasing. Most of them are getting a piece of the famous Hood River land and there are many who come here on other business intent who become so interested that they either purchase or become prospective purchasers. Sunday is becoming a most popular day with landseekers particularly those from Portland who cannot get away during the week, but slip up Saturday night, start out early Sunday morning and, taking in the valley, are able to return on the afternoon trains.

The apples shown at Portland this week have been attracting much attention and, despite the efforts of one firm to disparage the excellence of fruit by placing a big placard over 150 boxes of wormy fruit announcing that they were Hood River apples, they are receiving nothing but commendation by all who see them. The attempt of the firm above mentioned was quickly put out of business by a Hood River man who saw the apples and telephoned to H. F. Davidson, president of the Commercial club, who gave orders to have the dealer prosecuted in the name of the Hood River Commercial club, as he was prefectly sure that they were not Hood River fruit. Another Hood River man, who happened to be in Portland saw the apples and questioned the man who had them for sale. The dealer claimed that they had been received from Hood River and that the name was on the box. The Hood River man offered to wager $5 before looking for the name that they were not from Hood River, but the dealer wouldn't bet. When the boxes were examined no name was on them and the dealer then said he had bought the fruit from a Front street commission man, who said they came from Hood River. The name of the firm is understood to be L. Mayer & Co. Since the announcement to prosecute him nothing more has been heard of wormy apples from Hood River.

The scaricty of apple pickers continues and growers are experiencing considerable difficulty in getting help to pick their crops. Sunday about 20 men and women from Hood River, who have other duties during the week, went out on the Mount Hood train and helped to harvest the crop of one grower who was sadly in need of help. Since the fair apple shipments have commenced to move rapidly and much other fruit is also being sent out.

The underestimateing of their crops by growers has caused something of a box famine and was it not that Hood River has a box factory of its own for the manufacture of these necessary recetacles to fruit growers, it is doubtful if the big apple crop at Hood River could be shipped.. It is estimated by the Davidson company that they will manufacture in the neighborhood of 125,000 boxes. Their first order was for 50,000 which they completed. Many growers placed their orders for boxes with an out of town firm which they secured. When they commenced to pick their fruit, however they found that it in most instances was double what they first estimated it at, and would have to have more boxes. As there is such a demand for them in all the fruit growing districts this year it was discovered that outside firms which had been furnishing boxes for Hood River growerse could not fill their orders. The Davidson company was appealed to and has been supplying the demand as fast as possible although they have been handicapped somewhat for lumber. There are at present 20 hands employed in the box factory which has proved the salvation of Hood River fruit growers this year.

Making Apple Day Popular.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—At the meeting of the Branch League Saturday, a communication was received from W. W. Joy, feature editor of the Chicago Daily Journal, offering the cooperation of the Journal in making Apple Day, Oct. 16, popular with the people, and to make it possible for each child in every sectarian or public institution in Chicago to eat a nice, big, red aple. It was directed by the members present that a reply be sent, advising the Journal that the National League of Commission Merchants of the U. S., through its Chicago branch, would contribute the required number of barrels. The Journal estimated that it would require thirty barrels to give each child an apple. | Fruit Trade Journal.
