WILL PETITION FOR DIVISION

TOWN AND CITY PEOPLE IN ACCORD

Will Ask the Legislature to Give Them New County and Feel that They Are Entitled to It.

The mass meeting held to take definite action on the question of county division held at the Opera House Saturday brought out many intersted in it and a larger proportion were from the valley than the city. The meeting demonstrated that if possible the residents of the valley are more enthusiastic in regard to the creation of the new county than those in town and the affair was a unanimous call that every effort be put forth to accomplish a purpose that has been agitated from time to time and which it is evident will be kept before the legislature until it is successful.

The meeting was called to order by H. F. Davidson and A. D. Moe acted as secretary. The chairman briefly outlined the purpose of the meeting and the attitude of the Commercial club on the question and in order that those present would be fully informed as to what the cost of the new county would be, read a report made by a comimttee appointed for that purpose which is as follows:

The assessed valuation of the proposed new county for 1906 is $1,618,670.

The area of the proposed new county is about 460 square miles.

A tax levy of 18.5 mills on $1,618,670 will raise $29,945.40; earnings of county clerk's office (estimated) $4,000; income of proposed new county $33,945.40.

County expenses (estimated) — Books for and transcribing of records, $2,000; court expenses (2 terms), $2,000; board of prisoners, $500; offices, jail, fixtures, etc., $3,000; incidental expenses, $500. Total county expenses other than officers, $8,000.

County officers and salaries—Assessor, $900; county judge, 300 county clerk, $1,200; sheriff, $1,200; commissioners ($3 per day) $200; coroner, $200; treasurer, $100; county school superintendent, $900. Total county officers, $5,000.

Total county expenses other than road and school, etc., $13,000.

Balance to apply on road and schools, etc., $20,945.40.

Amounts to pay out of above balance as follows—State tax, 2.5 mills, $4,046.67; library fund, .1 mills, $161.87; county school, 6.8 mills, $11,016; road tax, 3.5 mills, $5,665.35; amounts to pay in addition to other county expenses as enumerated above, $20,889.89.

Surplus on 18.5 mills tax levy, $55.15.

Extra tax levy of 1.5 mills to make a total levy of 20 mills, $2,428.

Surplus, should the tax levy be 20 mills, $2,483.51.

The tax levy in Wasco county for the year of 1897 to 1905 inclusive ranges from 20 to 27 mills.

The lowest levy of 20 mills having been made for the year 1905.

At its conclusion he said the meeting was open for discussion and that he would like to hear from anyone who had any thing to say on the subject either for or against and thought that every one present should give the meeting the benefit of any suggestions they might have.

J. A. Epping was the first to respond and said that if everybody would bend their efforts to making a success of the movement instead of talking about it he hadn't the slightest doubt it would be carried. He was satisfied that the great majority were in favor of it, and that all that was needed was to give them an opportunity of expressing themselves.

T. A. Reavis, who was formerly a resident of Willowa county, said that the contention which existed among a few that the new county could not be administered as economically as the old one was not borne out by what had happened there. Very much the same conditions existed there as do here and at no time after the new county was created had the taxes been as high as they were in the old county. At the conclusion of his remarks he moved that a committee be appointed to circulate petitions and ascertain how much opposition there was to the movement if any, and suggested that the commitee be made a large one so that the matter could be covered thoroughly.

M. R. Noble stated that he would second the motion, but thought it would be a good idea to have the committee supplied with petitions both for and against so that it would be possible to know just how many were opposed to it and who they were.

A. I. Mason suggested that a campaign of education be started in order to make the movement better and more thoroughly understood.

Lee Morse said he didn't think this was necessary, that every one was familiar with the matter and that from observations he had made he was sure that a canvass of the territory of the proposed new county would show at least 80 per cent of the residents in favor of it. He did not think it was necessary to circulate petitions against the movement, as if there were any opposed they would make the fact known.

J. L. Henderson was of the opinion that the time was too short to make very much of a campaign in favor of the movement other than that made by the committee circulating the petitions. The legislature would soon meet and it was very important that the petitions be gotten under way. He wanted to say that there had been some talk about the movement being made more for the town people than the country people and that the establishing of a county seat at Hood River would benefit the residents of the other parts of the new county far more than it would Hood River and be the saving of many thousands of dollars to them in the course of a few yars. The fact that the county would be small and the county seat easy of access was one of the greatest points in its favor. He had talked with some members of the legislature who had opposed the movement before but who now said they were in favor of it provided the people wanted it.

Truman Butler spoke next and said that with the present increase in the valuation of Hood River property the residents here would soon be paying most of the taxes and as it was largely through their own efforts that their property had increased in value the residents of the proposed new county deserved the benefit of it. Hood River had done much to help Wasco county, but Wasco had done very little for Hood River and the time had come to reap some benefits from its own industry.

The talk, said C. D. Thompson, about the valley getting along without the help of the town and the reverse was out of the question. Town and valley had moved forward hand in hand the this condition must continue to prevail in order to maintain the prosperity of both.

The motion to appoint committees to circulate the petitions was then put and carried unanimously. The chairman said the committees would be announced later as he wanted time in which to make a selection of those who could best serve in that capacity.

In a discussion that followed as to possible court expenses from criminal cases, A. A. Jayne said that costs of this nature had been far less from the district comprising the proposed new county than they had from any other part of it and he had every reason to believe that they would be even less in the future. That for several years crime had been on the decrease in all parts of the present county and that the expensive murder cases which had taken so many thousands of dollars of the county funds in former years were far less numerous. The western end of Wasco county had produced fewer of these cases than any other part and it could be expected with considerable certainty that it would furnish fewer still in the future. The matter of county division Mr. Jayne said was one that had been agitated for the past 12 or 13 years, but at the time it was first brought up he did not favor it. The time then was not ripe for it. He thought now, however, the time had come to separate from the parent county and set up a local government which would be in closer touch with its people, its industries, and its general welfare than was now possible under the present county government. The interests of the other sections of the present county were entirely apart and distinct from those here. There was nothing to take people from this part of the county to the other portions except official business and this could be transacted much easier to all concerned if the new county was created. He was certain that the affairs of the proposed county could be administered more economically and that any fear of heavy expense in criminal cases was almost groundless judging from the past and also discounting the future which gave every evidence of bringing a class of citizens here to whom crime was a stranger.

P. S. Davidson was asked to read some statistics that had been received in regard to the management of Sherman county when it was created and which showed that at no time had the taxes been any higher after its separation from Wasco county than before, although county buildings had been erected, money spent on roads, bridges and for other purposes that were necessary and which also showed that for several years they had been much lower than ever before and that the county was prosperous and had a big surplus in its treasury.

H. M. Abbott was of the opinion that the smaller the county, provided it came within the requirements of the law, the better it could be administered and that he didn't think there was a community anywere that could make a better showing in regard to per capita wealth than the proposed new county. In an estimate that he had made which he thought was conservative he placed the amount at $500 per individual. That there was no one who wanted work who couldn't get it and that as far as he knew there wasn't a pauper in the whole district. Local self government was becoming more prevalent and was admitted to be the most satisfactory.

M. R. Noble said he was thoroughly in favor of the new county but thought that the name ought to be changed. This did not meet with favor as the area comprised is in the heart of the Cascades and many said it was the best name that could be selected.

After some further discussion in the matter in which Roy Smith, P. M. Hall-Lewis and several other gentlemen participated the meeting was adjourned.

BELGIAN STUD WILL STAY IN THE VALLEY

The fine Belgian stud which was recently brought here has been purchased by a number of Hood River men and will be kept in the valley for breeding purposes. The animal comes of one of the finest strains of blooded Belgian draught horses and was recently imported from Europe. On the stud book of the American Association of Importers and Breeders of Belgian Draught Horses he appears under the name of Max de Horian and his register number is 2,357. He is a superb specimen of this ideal strain of draught horses and weighs over 1,900 pounds. In color he is a red roan, without spot or blemish, and although heavily built is quick of action, having plenty of spirit, but kind and gentle to handle.

The company which purchased the horse is organized under the name of the Hood River Belgian Horse company and the amount invested in the big fellow is $3,600. The men who own him think it is money well placed and that in a few years much will be done to improve the breed of horses in the valley where more hauling is becoming necessary from year to year and where also heavier animals are needed.

The stud is at present at the stable of the Transfer and Livery company, but will be taken to the ranch of M. W. Pealer, south of town, who has been chosen manager of the company and will handle him.

The animal will be taken to the stables of the livery company every Saturday at 2 o'clock and information in regard to service and terms can be secured there.

NOT MUCH DAMAGE BY FLOOD

RAIN AND WIND MAKE TROUBLE

Washouts on Railroads Delay Trains and Leave Hood River Without Communication 24 Hours.

While the storm and flood was not as disastrous at Hood River as it was in some other portions of Oregon considerable damage was done here and much inconvenience and expense caused to the light plant and saw mills.

For several days the water in the Hood river was at a dangerous height and kept the big mill at Dee from being operated on account of a log jam. The Mount Hood railroad was also interfered with some and kept the track gangs busy repairing it at various places. Hundreds of tons of earth came down in the big cut between the power plant and the dam which had to be removed and for several days the water washing over the track at the dam caused some damage.

During the high water the light company were unable to make repairs that wear necessary to their new plant and in order to give a better lighting service put their old plant in use at considerable expense and furnished the city with as good a service as was possible under the circumstances until the repairs could be made. Compared with other cities Hood River fared well, as The Dalles and towns in Eastern Oregon were without lights entirely.

During the storm Thursday night the wind caused no litle damage to the flume of the Stanley-Smith Lumber company by blowing down trees that fell across it and rendered it unfit for use. As a consequence the mill had to be shut down, but it is expected that it will be started up as soon as the flume is repaired, although it is coming the time of the year when it cannot be run much longer, on account of scarcity of logs.

The Menominee Lumber company had 2,500,000 feet of logs in the White Salmon river, which it was feared they would lose on account of the fact that they had not placed their boom for the winter run, but fortunately the water did not reach a point high enough to carry them out of the river. Local lumbermen captured a good many thousand feet of logs during the flood that came down the Columbia by the use of tugs and a cable.

Some injury was caused to irrigating ditches, but no serious damage.

Ranchers who had not been able to get their apples picked had a good many of them blown from the trees during the wind storm, but as the ground was in a very soft condition very little damage was done to the fruit. The continued mild weather has also been in their favor and it is not expected that much loss will ensue.

The flood is said to have been a severe one at Trout Lake and flooded out many who had to leave their homes and take refuge on higher ground. No loss of life, however, is reported and the flood has subsided.

The continued heavy rains have been most damaging to the O. R. & N. railroad which has had to contend with a bad washout at Viento during the past week.

Trains have been delayed for several days and the road between here and Portland is being carefully watched. The trouble at Viento was caused by the water settling between the hillside and a fill and washing out the roadbed. I took some time to make the necessary repairs and trains each way have been several hours late in going and coming from Portland. The trains are running more regularly now, however, and it is expected that the worst of the trouble is past.

New Boat For Spencer Line.

Not since the days before the iron horse completed for traffic along the middle river have the steamboats on the Columbia done such an immense amount of business, and not then, for the demand was not so great. Every day the boat was loaded to the guards. In referring to the rush of business, Agent Chrichton, of the Regulator line, said that like a stage coach, it seems these days as though the capacity of the boats were unlimited, machinery, wagons, wheat and merchandise of every kind stacked high, and then some.

The same is true of the Spencer and it is now given out that Captain Spencer is getting out plans for another boat to operate between Portland and this city, says The Dalles Chronicle. It is the intention to have the new craft ready by early spring, and to make her the speediest vessel plying on the Willamette and Columbia. The estimated cost is $60,000.

The new steamer will have accommodations for 400 passengers and from 200 to 300 tons of freight; it is to be, in a word one of the largest carriers of the kind running out of Portland. The contract will be let soon, the Portland ship yards being the probable builders.

The new steamer and the Charles R. Spencer will afford better than a daily service between Portland and the upper Columbia river. Before she extended her run to the portage road the Spencer made the round trip every day, but it required the best part of 24 hours for her to do it and stop at the many way landings. With two boats on the route, the traffic can be taken care of with comparative ease and without severe strain on the machinery of either craft.

With the completion of the North Bank road river men contend that the traffic along the upper Columbia will be more than treuled, owing to new industries and increased population. In three months several towns have sprung up and additional landings have been established all along the river.

The Open River association will also have a new steamer ready for service by the middle of the winter, and she will have the portage road as her terminus.
