NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION

United States Land Office, The Dalles, Oregon, January 7, 1907.

Notice is hereby given that in compliance with the provisions of the act of Congress of June 3, 1878, entitled "An act for the sale of timber lands in the States of California, Oregon, Nevada, and Washington Territory," as extended to all the Public Land States, by act of August 4, 1892, the following named persons have filed in this office their sworn statements, to-wit:

JOHN C. OWENS, of Multnomah county, state of Oregon, sworn statement No. 3529, filed October 30, 1896, for the purchase of the E¹/₂SW¹/₄ of section 2, township 1 north, range 10 east, W. M.

IVY R. ARCHER, of Portland, county of Multnomah, state of Oregon, sworn statement No. 3549, filed November 2, 1896, for the purchase of the SE¹/₄NE¹/₄ of section 2, township 2 north, range 6 east, W. M.

And will offer proof to show that the land sought is more valuable for agricultural purposes and to establish their claims to said lands before the Register and Receiver, at the land office, in The Dalles, Oregon, on March 12, 1907.

They name as witnesses: C. S. Archer, F. L. Moore, J. H. Edgerly, J. E. Edgerly, Charles J. Warrens, Jordan Van, Brandt Wickersham, Morton H. Insey and Rodney L. Gilman.

The view along the banks of the Columbia from the train was exceptionally attractive. The palisades glittered in heavy coats of ice, mail, a white mantle stretched across the river from bank to bank, broken as we approached the Cascades by dark rushing waters, while birds, Vireo, Lark, and other waterfowl fell in diamond sheets through icy curtains.

Hood River was reached about 11 o'clock and we were soon wrestling with a 14-course meal, combining all the essential features of breakfast, luncheon and dinner. Our overgrown host evidently thought we could, like the camels of the Sahara, take several days' provisions in person. The bells of the four horse sleighs caused us to hasten from the sleighs to the sleighs on the 14th day of March, 1907.

She names as witnesses: E. C. Miller, John West, M. A. Searns and M. Culbertson, all of Hood River, Oregon.

Any and all persons claiming adversely any of the above described lands are requested to file their claims in this office on or before the 12th day of March, 1907.

TO THE INN ON SNOW SHOES

CLUB MAKES FOURTH ANNUAL TRIP

Interesting Account of the Journey

Written by One of the Members.

By R. L. Gilman.

In a snowstorm Friday morning, January 18, the Snow Shoe club took the train at Union depot for Hood River on its fourth annual visit to Cloud Cap Inn, Mount Hood.

The party consisted of J. Wesley Ladd, president, organizer and host; John C. Caseo, Herbert S. Nichols, Marion Dolph, Walter Honeyman, Charles J. Warrens, Jordan Van, Brandt Wickersham, Morton H. Insey and Rodney L. Gilman.

The view along the banks of the Columbia from the train was exceptionally attractive. The palisades glittered in heavy coats of ice, mail, a white mantle stretched across the river from bank to bank, broken as we approached the Cascades by dark rushing waters, while birds, Vireo, Lark, and other waterfowl fell in diamond sheets through icy curtains.

blue, indigo and violet, with varying strata of ever shifting shades of crimson above; to the left Lookout mountain was plainly struggling to block the upward progress of the rising sun, and as we turned northward, Adams, Rainier and Helens, clear cut as canyons, broke the even horizon, while a winding sheet of fog marked the Columbia river basin, impressed by nature's grandeur, and our own insignificance we turned to Hood, the pure light atmosphere bringing out such wealth of detail that our eyes seemed endowed with telescopic vision. The light was deceiving to the amateurs as our photos were underexposed.

Monday was spent on and off to bogans, trying our skills and our patience and several ventured up to the moraine of Elliot glacier. Tuesday proved another glorious day and girding our loins we prepared for the descent. The trapper had remarked that the bogs were made two seasons ago in the road, lasted until late spring and it is safe to say next summer's visitors will have no difficulty in following our tracks. Skis imported from Norway, where leaps of 100 feet are nothing, were furnished each member. We knew, as we gingerly placed foot on their through bred, slightly arched surface that hard times were ahead of us and the air too alive with our polished exterior reflected their haughty disdain for bungling amateurs.

The steepest grade came first and five minutes after leaving, the road resembled a battle field. However, after many ups and downs, we caught on. Fortunately, having thought up to every thing else on route and about an hour later 13 visions of grace somewhat bedraggled, overloaded with snow and enthusiasm, glided up to the sleighs and all about the horses did the rest. After lunch at Edick's we drove to Hood River and the following morning took the train for Portland.

The Apple Show.

Hood River did its full duty in the matter of making exhibits of apples at the fruit show held by the Oregon State Horticultural society in connection with its recent annual meeting, at Portland, Oregon, on the 20th of great success. Whenever or wherever Hood River now makes an exhibition of apples it does its work so well that it is hard to determine that one of its shows is better than another, but the display of apples from that place was certainly one of the best if not the very best it has made away from home. Unfortunately other portions of the state did not do so well.

Southern Oregon showed some fine apples and pears, but did not realize the importance of the show until too late to make such a display as it is capable of. Mr. Asa Holaday, of Seaside, who has been a faithful exhibitor for a dozen or more years, and long before any awards were made on exhibits, was on hand as usual and captured a cup on Rome Beauty apples and one on P. Barry pears.

The Willamette valley failed to make anything like as large an exhibition as expected. Mr. L. D. Moulton, of McMinnville, took the cup on Lady apples. Hood River took all the rest, and the only thing the growers here feel about is that there were not more apples from other parts of the state to compete with.

Competition was keen, however, among the Hood River growers themselves. The judges found some fine factor in many cases to determine which box in a given competition was the best, so even were they in merits. —Horticulturist.

Will Operate Through Cascade Tunnels by Electricity.

St. Paul, Jan. 29.—The long talked of plan to operate trains through the Cascade tunnel by means of electricity is already close to realization. The plan is to use the present volume of our grade, Mark Weggand, where the snow plough had ended its usefulness the day preceding.

Leaving overcoats in the sleighs, we plunged over waist deep into the snow, but on our snowshoes and worn plodding Indian hair up grade. At 11 o'clock, about half an hour after leaving the sleighs, we gathered in the open shed at Elk River, to read just our shoe thoughts and then push forward. The snow was in excellent condition for snowshoeing and the trail breakers had a comparatively easy time. The road was strewn in places with fallen trees, showing the fury of some recent storm, the trunks being buried sufficiently in the snow to all pass over our web feet.

As we approached the ghost forest on China hill below the inn, the wind was keenly felt, causing the loose snow to get in our eyes and ears. About 9 o'clock we reached our destination and were soon enjoying the cheerful blaze of large logs in the huge fireplace in the main room of the inn. Profiting by the experience of former years, we entered the inn through one door of the east room, where the wind had swept the snow away. The wind soon became a gale and, like an evil spirit, howled and shook the inn in its fury, but little did it care for the snow that was piled up to the rafters of the east room, where the wind had swept the snow away.

The breeze, however, was the most attractive place and dinner was prepared by 13 cooks, each claiming special superiority over the others. Snow had worked and covered the fireplace, making an excellent snow bank below. After dinner like Indians we stretched out before the fire and drifted off in a slumber. About midnight our medical advisor had an imaginary conflict with three bold burglars and claims to have vanquished all three, but his yells for assistance banished slumber and so stimulated the irrepressible freeman that he gave vent to his feelings in his inimitable Chinese dialect and it was some time before he could be suppressed.

Sunday morning we gathered canteens together and trailed down the canyon half a mile through the timber to the spring, near the trapper's cabin. A thread of smoke from the chimney escaped through the snow and the freshly killed body of a pine martin in the partly cleared space in front of the cabin door relieved our spirits, making us feel that something else had happened to the trapper. Sunday afternoon and evening the wind again assumed control, but blew itself out during the night. Monday morning we awakened just as rosy fingers were putting a peach blossom coloring on the cold white peak, towering above the cabin, plainly visible from our resting place. Tossing blankets aside we rushed out in the crisp morning air and from the platform on the roof stood stunned and awed by the panorama around us.

In front rose the peer of any mountain in America, bathed in a golden light, enshrouded in azure blue; to the right across dim valleys, showing forest green in gloom except for snow fields, the horizon showed bands of

STOLE CHECKS AND CASHED THEM

SNOW BLOCKADE PREVENTS ESCAPE

Crook Lies In Wait for Victim and Steals Checks from Mike Broge

—Bound Over.

The snow blockade was the cause of the enforced lay-over in Hood River of the passengers on a train from the east Monday, and with plenty of time on their hands the passengers killed time as best they could. Some of them imbibed too freely and a man by the name of Mike Broge made the acquaintance of one Thomas Daly, who has been hanging around town for a week, and who had been ordered to leave by the marshal. He had no visible means of support.

During the day Daly robbed Broge of two checks for $40 each, one for $80 and took what money he had, amounting to nearly $40, so Broge claims. Daly then went to a store, where he fitted himself out with new clothes, and for payment tendered a $40 check and $20 in gold. The merchant gave him a check for $23.40 for his change. With this check the fellow went to a jewelry store, where he bought a watch for $7.50, receiving the balance in cash.

In the meantime Broge sobred up sufficiently to discover his loss, and immediately made complaint to the marshal, who soon had Daly under arrest. Marshal Ganger found on Daly a check for $80 in favor of Mike Broge, a money order for $15, the watch, and 55 cents in money. Seeing the name of the merchant on the clothes, he informed him of the arrest and payment was stopped on the check that was in possession of the jeweler.

Tuesday morning Mike Broge swore out a complaint of robbery against Daly, before Judge Henderson, with Deputy District Attorney Hartwig appearing for the state. Daly was bound over to the district court for trial. Later another charge of forgery was preferred by Hartwig, and he was also committed to the county jail on this charge.

Before being arrested Daly cashed a check for $40 in the East End saloon for $4. The proprietor of the saloon claims that he thought the check was for $4, and that the man made no comment, but took the money and walked out, and he did not discover his mistake until some time later. Daly endorsed the name of Mike Broge on all the checks, and also had a money order made out in the same name, giving the name of Mike Broge as purchaser.

While it was the misfortune of Broge that the delay of the train was the cause of his losing his money, yet the blockade continued long enough to keep Daly from getting out of town until he was caught.

Apple Club is Latest Fad.

"Apples breed optimism, energy, cheerfulness and ambition. There's no mistaking it. You have an apple analyzed by a chemist some day and find out what it contains. You'll be more interested if you find out for yourself. Ask any physician what he thinks about apples as food. Ask any member of the Apple club of America," says Charles Edmund Tomlinson, a wealthy young Chicagoan, who has conceived the "apple club" idea, and has been preaching it in New York. Before he left that place for Boston he said that the literature he has sent out regarding his patriotic hobby, together with his personal efforts, has already gained 100 new members in the New York city "orchard" for the Apple Club of America, which had its inception in the Windy City, where he belongs.

To be an appleite you must, either talk apples or have an appetite for apples, for you must take a solemn oath to assimilate at least one apple a day. You also have to pledge yourself to urge your friends to join the city or village "orchard" to which you have your allegiance.

Tomlinson, leading spirit of the apple club, is a normal looking man of 30 or so, who wears good clothes and whose present mission in life is to talk apples and the sure benefits to be derived from their consumption. It is one apple a day will make a person healthy, Tomlinson's ruddy cheek and stalwart frame would indicate that his daily allowance is at least three pip-pins.

No Olympia Oysters For Three Years.

Not since the great freeze of 1888 has the oyster industry of the upper Sound received such a hard blow as that to oyster beds wrought by the hard freezes of the first three nights of this week when the extreme low tides left the beds exposed for hours. Except upon a few beds protected by dikes, the loss has been so heavy that the oyster industry has been so completely cut off that further supplies of the famous Olympia oyster for the next three years. At least it will take that long, the oystermen say, to get the beds back in the condition they were before the freeze.
