Argument of the Opposition.

The Dalles Chronicle, in a column and a half article, in opposing the creation of Cascade county, among other things, denies that the interests of this end of Wasco county are adverse from the rest of the county. It claims that around The Dalles and Dufur they can raise "just as good" apples as Hood River, and therefore the east end of the county is as much of a fruit country as the Hood River valley. It admits that we have no representation in the legislature or in county affairs, claiming it is because the issue of county division was raised at the time of election. It admits that the minds of the Wasco county delegation were made up before hand, and that the arguments of the divisionists had no weight with them, and that it was useless for them to confer with them. It claims that Mr. Jayne refused to hear their side of the case two years ago. It denies that Senator Wheelton was not present at the conference of the Hood River delegation owing to a pretext. It denies that he was seen on the street a few minutes later, and claims that the committee lied maliciously when they said they saw him. It denies that their opposition to the creation of the new county is at the dictation of any boss. The Chronicle further says:

Messrs. Knowles and Hendrick were nominated and elected because of their declared opposition to county division, and they know that a large majority of the people of the county are strongly opposed to the division, hence while it is entirely proper for them to listen to all the arguments put forth by the able and persistent delegation from the city of Hood River, yet until they are advised that the people whose votes sent them to the legislature have changed their views with respect to county division, they cannot consistently favor it. It is not true that their action is dictated by any boss, nor is it true that the opposition to county division is political in its nature; the real opposition is from the taxpayers of the eastern portion of the county who feel that inasmuch as for many years Hood River valley has been largely favored by the county in the matter of roads and bridges at the expense of the balance of the county, that now that Hood River is more prosperous it is only right and fair that it should remain with the county and assist in caring for and sustaining the large portion of the county along its southern border from which little revenue is derived by taxation, but where the matter of roads and bridges is a large expense.

The plea that Hood River valley has been largely favored by the county in the building of roads and bridges will be a surprise to the taxpayers of this section, especially to those who have helped to build so many of them by private subscription and special taxes, while a guardly appropriation was doled out by the county. It will be a surprise to the taxpayers of the city of Hood River, who are annually paying a three mill tax for county road purposes and not receiving one cent of the money in return. It will be a surprise to hear how well the roads are taken care of, when it is known that the east side grade outside of the city limits has been in such a dangerous condition for a month that it is practically closed to traffic and our resident commissioner has made no attempt to even make it temporarily passable until it could be fixed permanently. It will be a surprise to the people of the Mount Hood section, who have had to build most of their bridges by private subscription, and do much of their road work in the same way. We believe their sorrow is sincere, however, when they view with alarm the rapidly growing wealth of this part of the county, when the taxes can be rapidly increased until we will pay the largest share of the taxes of the county, and have no voice in the manner in which this money shall be spent. Ah! there's the rub.

The bill to create Cascade county was introduced in the senate Tuesday by Smith, of Marion county, and is S. B. No. 148. This is the only bill in which Hood River is interested, as a local matter. Senator Wheelton, it is said, intends to introduce a bill for a normal school, to be located at Hood River. This bill has not been asked for by Hood River, and its introduction by Wheelton is evidently for the purpose of making enemies for Hood River among those who would oppose such a measure, and thereby defeat the Cascade County bill. It would be folly for Hood River to ask for two such important measures at the same time, and while any additional educational facilities, or other improvement, would be a nice thing, the people would much rather see a court house here than a normal school building. The bill would have no show of passing if introduced, and our people should not be misled as to its purpose. There should be no endorsement from Hood River of the bill, but our whole attention and influence should be centered on the Cascade county measure.

A Willamette valley nurseryman was in Hood River a few days ago selling trees. In his argument in favor of the quality of his stock, he said that the Willamette valley could raise apples "just as good" as Hood River, but that the people down there were slow and behind the times. The prospective buyer remarked that if the people were of that kind, perhaps the trees possessed the same qualification, and he did not buy.

What Oregon wants at Salem is not so much quantity as quality in legislation. It is not the number but the character of its products that gives distinction to a solon. A safe rule in law making is in apple growing is if the products are too thick this them; if too small kill them. That is the way they do at Hood River and Hood River knows how.—Journal.

Chairman Shontz, of the Isthmian Canal commission, has tendered his resignation to the president, effective at his pleasure but not later than March 4. President Roosevelt accepted the resignation with extreme reluctance. Theodore P. Shontz resigned to become president of the Interborough Metropolitan company which controls the Rapid Transit lines and many surface lines in New York.

An occasional husky, able bodied tramp is to be seen begging at the back doors in the city, yet work of many kinds is staring them in the face on every corner. If the housewife would notify the marshal by telephone every time one of these gentry appears, they would be taken care of in a suitable manner.

United States Senator Russell A. Alger died January 24 at his home in Washington from heart disease, from which he had suffered for some time. The end came suddenly. He had attended the senate regularly. Ill health had caused him to decline to enter the race for reelection and William Alden Smith was elected to succeed him on March 4.

The Dalles Optimist wound up a three-column tirade against Jonathan Bourne last week with the question in capitals, "Who put up the money for Bourne's campaign?" The Record, being a quizzical one, would like to know who is putting up the money for Mr. Bennett to fight Mr. Bourne?—Arlington Record.

Buyers who paid $2.25 a box for Hood River Newtowns, bought the best grade of Rogue Rivers for $1.55. Rogue River is one of the places where they raise "just as good" apples as Hood River, to hear them tell it.

Representative Connors has offered a bill that provides for turning into the county treasury of the different counties such fees as may be collected by any and all county officers in the preparation of abstracts of title.

The small amount of wood that is being cut in the valley this winter will not go far towards supplying the home demand, and there are good prospects of a fuel shortage here next winter.

Hood River Newtowns sold in London for $1.12 a box more than California Newtowns sold the same day, to the same buyer.

Newberg pays their city marshal $40 a month and the night watchman $50, but the business men contribute $35 a month to the latter's salary.

Sudden Death of Everett Rand.

The community was shocked Saturday morning to learn of the sudden death of Everett Rand, aged 14 years and 3 months, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Rand, at the home of his grandfather, E. L. Smith.

Since the removal of his parents to Portland, where Mr. Rand is employed, the child had been staying with Mr. and Mrs. Smith, and finishing his schooling here. He was becoming much comfort and company for his grandparents, and the future for him was full of promise. In the past year Everett had passed quickly from a boy to a man's stature, and his very rapid growth may have made him weak to withstand the sudden attack which snapped the life cord without warning.

Thursday evening he was taken with a severe bilious attack, after eating a hearty supper, but it was apparently not more serious than he had experienced occasionally, being subjected to indigestion at times. Smith he staid at home, but was feeling fairly well. That night he was taken with a terrible headache, complaining that the pain was so severe that he could hardly endure it. Dr. Watt was called after midnight and succeeded in relieving the pain and left medicine to be given in case of a renewal of the attack, but it was apparently not needed, as he soon expressed a desire to sleep, and the family retired. He was heard to get up once or twice shortly after that, and then went to sleep. When the family arose he was sleeping quietly, and was not disturbed. Dr. Watt called at 9:30 and he was apparently in a natural sleep, and all thought that the trouble was over. Mr. Smith came home shortly before noon, and upon enquiring was told that the boy was still sleeping. Thinking that it was time he should awaken, Mrs. Smith went up to his room and discovered that he had passed away.

Dr. Watt and Brosius were soon there, and it is their opinion that he died from congestion of the brain, in a convulsion. This is an acute form of the grip that is being met with occasionally, though not often resulting fatally.

The news was broken to the family on receipt of the telegram from the evening train. The sad affair has cast a gloom over the community and sympathy is expressed upon all sides for the afflicted ones.

The funeral was held at the Smith residence Monday afternoon. The school mates of the deceased were allowed to attend, one of the rooms disarranged for that purpose, and they were there in a body. Revs. Gilmore and Baldrige officiated. Dr. Elliot, who baptized Everett, and is an old friend of the family, expected to be present, but was unable to get here on account of the delayed trains. The floral offerings were many and very elaborate. The arrangements were in charge of S. E. Bartmess, and the pall bearers were Roger Moe, Elwood Lacey, Howard Hartley, Fred Bell, Raymond Gentry and Aubrey Blowers. The funeral services were opened with a song by Miss Hartley.

The remains were interred in the Smith private burial lot at Frankton.

A Card.
To all those who mingled their tears with our own, to the kind friends at Frankton who, without suggestion, removed the deep snow from the roads and around the burial lot in our private cemetery, and to each and every one who came to us with precious sympathy and assistance during our bereavement, we extend the sincere thanks of stricken hearts. Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Rand, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Smith, Hood River Jan. 30, 1907.

Long Tennessee Fight.
For twenty years W. L. Rawls, of Bell, Tenn., fought nasal catarrh. He writes: "The swelling and soreness inside my nose was fearful, till I began applying Bucklen's Arnica Salve to the sore surface; this caused the soreness and swelling to disappear, never to return." Best Salve in existence. 25c at Chas. N. Clarke, Druggist.
