Fruit Acreage in Washington.

The report of F. A. Huntley, state horticultural commissioner, for the year ending March 31, 1907, has been filed with the governor. It shows the horticultural industry of the state to be increasing at a tremendous rate. There are 83,977 acres of land devoted to commercial orchards in the state, and 15,888 acres, or nearly one-fifth of the total acreage, was added since the spring of 1906.

The report contains a detailed account of the number of trees in the orchards of the various counties of the state. Yakima leads with a total of 1,663,000 trees, Chelan is second with 480,000 trees, and Spokane county is third. The commissioner found it impossible to gather complete data of the amount of small fruit in the state. Pierce county leads with 2013 acres to its credit.

Mr. Huntley reports that Yakima county led in fruit shipments last year, dispatching 571,227 packages of fruit. Chelan county was second, with Pierce county berry shipments were greater than any other in the state; Snohomish county was second, Yakima third.

The work of the fruit growers associations is highly commended by Mr. Huntley in this report, his investigations having shown him that greater advancements in horticulture were made where associations have been formed.

The nursery traffic to and within the state has been enormous. Basing his figures on nursery shipments to the state, Mr. Huntley says that the orchard acreage has been increased 20 per cent. Washington home-grown stock has supplied about 30 per cent of the state's nursery traffic. Trees grown in Washington nurseries are best for Washington farmers.

Canneries are necessary to every fruit section, says Mr. Huntley in concluding his report. Figures quoted show that the North Yakima canneries lead in output, with the Watanchee canneries a close second.

Business Firms Aid Church.

Ninety business firms of Pendleton have now signed the agreement to hold a two-day sale on May 31 and June 1, five per cent of the gross to come from sales to be given to the church erection fund of the M. E. church of this city.

The church will be dedicated on Sunday, June 2, and the business men who have signed the sales days agreement desire to help pay the remaining indebtedness incurred in the erection of the elegant stone building which is now nearing completion.

A meeting of the business men and church officials will be held early next week for the purpose of arranging the details of the advertising and special features and firms who have not yet joined in the sales agreement will be given an opportunity to do so.

Elaborate preparations will be made for the sales and the dedication services. Special rates on the railroads will be secured and people from all over Umatilla county are expected to visit the city on that occasion.—East Oregonian.

Visits Rogue River Valley.

G. R. Castner, who has been on an extended trip through the Willamette and Rogue River valleys, returned to Hood River last Thursday. Mr. Castner enjoyed his trip most excellently and appears as robust as ever. Being the fruit inspector of this district, the orchards and orchard land on route had a special charm to him. Mr. Castner stated to a Glacier representative that the frost had done some damage to the fruit in the southern part of the state, but that it had only damaged the fruit crop in streaks. In and about Grants Pass the frost had done considerable damage, but around Ashland the fruit was practically unharmed and in this section of the country they will have a bumper crop.

Mr. Castner found many of the old timers who were not willing to sell their lands, and yet were not undertaking to place it in its best stages of cultivation. The fruit growers of the Rogue River country are making no special effort to induce home-seeker to come into that valley. They don't want to sell, and they are apparently afraid that if their land reaches a high stage of productiveness that tax as will be too high. They are without a "booster club" and are content with getting from $50 to $75 per acre for their land which ought to command from $200 to $400 per acre.

Mr. Castner stated that the Eisman brothers near Grants Pass, had planted 40 acres to orchard this spring; planting principally Newtown and Spitzenberg. They will plant water melons between the trees from which they expect a revenue of $125 per acre. Mr. Castner was glad to get back to Hood River, and is more confirmed than ever in the belief that Hood River valley is without a peer.

Union Methods Approved.

At a meeting of the Whatcom County Fruit Growers association held Saturday a resolution was passed that the farmers holding membership in the organization would market their berries through the association. It was designed to have every leading grocer on the bay present at the meeting but only a few appeared.

Both grocers and farmers see a vast advantage in making the association the market medium for the berry crop of Whatcom. It has been the practice among many farmers to sell their berries to the consumer direct and by this means break down any standard price. Other farmers and grocers handling the berry crop are thus injured as a settled price is impossible.

H. C. Byron in speaking to those in attendance said that if the farmers would grade their fruit and put all of a good quality by itself that this classification would create a far larger market for the product, as consumers will use all the good fruit they can get while poor fruit will be refused from every side.

Fronton Teachers Employed.

The board of directors of the Frankton public school have elected three teachers for the ensuing year. Miss Cronin, who taught during the past year, has been reemployed to teach the primary grade. Miss Shea, who taught in the Columbia school last year, will be transferred to the Frankton school and placed in charge of the intermediate department. Miss Shea is at present in Brookings, S. D., but will return in time to take her place when school opens in September. Miss Mae Summerville, who has been teaching at Shearer's bridge, will also teach in the intermediate department. Two more teachers are yet to be employed, a principal and one for the sixth and seventh grades. The directors have decided to add the eleventh and twelfth grades the coming year which will necessitate the addition of an extra teacher.
