HENEY WELL PAID FOR SERVICES

The special correspondent to the Sunday Portland Journal has compiled the following interesting table of money received by Francis J. Heney since he took employment with the government as a special district attorney:

Francis J. Heney has received a total of $50,000 from the government since he first accepted employment as land fraud prosecutor in Oregon in 1903. All this has been paid excepting $8,000 which remains in the urgency deficiency bill, now in conference between senate and house, and as no protest has been filed, it is expected it will go through.

Heney began his labors November 7, 1903, when appointed special assistant attorney general to assist district attorney John H. Hall. He was to prosecute the case against McKinley, Puter, Ware, et al. His compensation was to be determined by the attorney general on completion of his services.

February 23, 1904, he was appointed special assistant attorney general to prosecute the Hyde-Diamond-Benson land fraud case, involving Oregon and California in irregularities in compensation again being left to the attorney general.

October 18, 1904, he was again appointed special assistant attorney general to assist District Attorney Hall. On December 16, 1904, he resigned that position to accept an appointment as assistant district attorney for Oregon at $1500 a year.

During 1904 he was paid $6000 on account of services under the special appointments.

January 9, 1905, he resigned, was appointed district attorney at $4500 a year; this he resigned December 1, 1905, the day following was appointed special assistant attorney general again for the Hyde and Benson case. During 1905 Mr. Heney was paid $7,500 on March 1, $5000 on August 10, on account of services previously rendered under special appointments.

June 13, 1906, was appointed special assistant to the attorney general for land case in Oregon, not covered by existing appointments, compensation to be determinable by the attorney general.

During that year he received two payments of $5000, August 9, and $5,000 December 28. An $8000 item in the urgency deficiency bill is for compensation fixed, but not yet paid under the attorney general's power conferred to fix his compensation.

About the Forests. Speaking of the coming meeting of the State Forestry Association to be held in Portland February 14th, Professor Lake, of the Agricultural College, said:

"This meeting is really the first public meeting held by the association, though it is more than a year old, or perhaps it would be better to say, since it was organized. We have felt for some time that the only way to get this forestry problem before the people properly is to hold a series of public meetings at which all those interested in the subject may take part in the discussion.

"The forest wealth of this state is enormous. The lumber product alone is estimated at two and a quarter billion dollars. An item of greater value to the state than this is that of the conservation of the water supply. While the problem of a future supply of timber and the maintenance of a great industry employing thousands of industrious citizens is of inestimable value.

"At the bottom of the economic phase of the forestry problem lies the subject of taxation and it is the purpose of the association to give this subject free and fair consideration with the hope that some just and equitable laws looking to the re-foresting of burnt over and cut over lands may be secured.

D. L. Harrington.

D. L. Harrington died at Portland February 6, 1908, aged 76 years. He was a brother of Mrs. Mary Coldren, grandmother of C. J. Calkin, and was brought here for burial on Sunday, February 9. The funeral services were held in the chapel of Nichols' undertaking parlors, Rev. A. H. Lathrop officiating. The burial service at the grave was in charge of the local lodge of Masons.

The deceased was born in Northville, Mich., where he spent almost his entire life, following the occupation of a druggist. His health failing some years ago he gave up the business and about a year ago came to this country to be near his sister, his only living relative. He was never married. He took a great interest in Masonic lodge matters, having been a member of that order for about 50 years.

A Regular Customer for Spitzenberg's
The following letter has been received by W. F. Laraway:

Chicago, Feb. 8, 1908.
My dear Mr. Laraway:

The box of Spitzenberg's you so kindly sent me was received in fine shape and they tasted just as delicious as if they were picked off of the trees the same day that we opened the box. I think that Hood River has me for a customer for Spitzenberg's apples from now on.

I also thank you for the booklet you sent me describing the great Hood River Valley industries. It certainly looks good to an eastern man for an investment in your valley. The booklet came in time to be of good service to my daughter, who is in high school, the Francis Parker Institute, which I consider the best school in the east. They were studying the products of the state of Oregon and the professor complimented her on the best information that they got of the industries of the great west.

I think that if you had the facilities of mailing your pamphlets to the east to such institutes, you would no doubt have lots of seekers for such industries as you have there. I am longing for the time to get back to Hood River and get another good square filling up of the apples that you raise there.

Extending you and the folks my highest personal regards and again thanking you for so kindly remembering me, I am
Yours very truly,
S. H. Bridges.

William Thompson.
Died, at Portland, Ore., February 5, 1908, William Thompson, aged 58 years, 5 months and 4 days.

William Thompson was born at Ontario, Canada, September 3, 1849, and lived there until about 15 years of age, when he went to Des Moines, Iowa, and remained there two years. He then left for Denver, Colo., where he made his home for seven years, and where he was united in marriage to Isabel Campbell in 1870. To them were born two daughters, Mrs. C. P. Ross, of Hood River, and Mrs. J. H. Acheson, of Portland, Ore. From Denver he removed with his family to Weiser, Idaho, where he was engaged in contract work in the building of the U. P. and O. S. L. railroads from Pocatello to Weiser.

In 1885 he moved to Moro, Sherman county, where he was engaged in farming and stock raising. He returned to Hood River in the fall of that year and was married to Mrs. Jennie Hunt, who survives him. He lived there until 1905, where he was engaged in several enterprises and when he left was organizing a boarding house.

He moved to Portland from here and was employed as collector for J. M. Acheson & Co., until his death.

The remains were brought to this city for burial and the funeral services were conducted at the residence of C. P. Ross by Rev. W. C. Gilmore February 7, and the remains interred in Idlewild.

J. E. Nichols had charge of the funeral arrangements. The remains were accompanied from Portland by Mrs. Thompson, John Thompson, a brother, and Miss J. M. Acheson, a daughter.

The First National Bank

HOOD RIVER, OREGON.
Capital Stock, $50,000. Surplus, $15,000

The government of the United States requires from each National Bank the publication five times a year of a sworn statement showing the condition of the bank.

It notifies the directors of every irregularity, if any, mentioned in the examiner's report, and the directors must make acknowledgment in writing that they know the irregularity exists, and must make immediate correction of the same. In brief, the government exercises a close, but friendly, supervision over all national banks, with a single eye to the interest of the depositors.

We offer you every advantage that pertains to a National Bank, and solicit your patronage.
