The question of spray was discussed at length by Mr. Mason, who said that he was experimenting along the line of cooking his own spray, as a matter of economy, instead of paying to talk about the rest of us.

Mr. Smith said that the matter of packing of apples was a problem that was confronting the growers. There should be a school of packing apples established by some one, where more could be taught the business. Packers should also be paid by the day rather than by the box, as last year, as it would insure a better pack. Now the packets were trying to see Now the packers were trying to see how many boxes could be packed in a day and consequently were not as particular as they should be Packers were also constantly urged by some of the farmers to put in apples which are not strictly up to grade.

C. H. Sproat addressed the conven-tion along the lines of marketing the fruit, from the standpoint of the Ap-ple Growers' Union, and made many ple Growers' Union, and made many very valuable suggestions. Mr. Sproat said that it was generally conceded that the present high prices of apples would not continue always, but that apples at a dollar a box would still make flood River orchards worth $1,000 an acre. Mr. Smith said that he had had experience in cleared land, that he had burned logs, cleared the land and raised a bumper crop of wheat the first year, while the second crop was almost a failure on the same land. He also called attention to the fact that a young tree set in the place where au old one had been taken out would not do well. The cause of this is a toxic poison which all plants throw off and the soil, requiring that ranks first in America for its educational system. Mr. Mason was opposed to irrigation in orchards and remarked that he knew he differed from many in this respect. He cited as example of too much irrigation that the apples of all the Washington irrigated districts fell down this year, and in fact all apple districts except Hood River had the same trouble. There were no records of Hood River apples rotting after being sent to market.

The inspection of orchards should be thorough and old, diseased trees in neglected places should be removed. He cited lustances of where a few trees near the main traveled road in the valley, planted there as family orchards and lett to decay, made a bad impression on visitors and were a detriment to the whole valley.

There has been a great deal said in this club about the heavy, hard work the teachers are forcing upon the children. You hear it upon every side, it is the most absorbing topic.

The mothers have it, the children take it up and try to vie with each other to see whose teacher is the "meanest" in laying off work!

"Ram it in, cram it in, Children's heads are hollow." But there are some things left yet for the parents to do. There are cirumstances of parental neglect that have come to my notice in my brief stay in Hood River that would appeal to you, as they have me. There are conditions that exist here, as every where, that are a disgrace to humanity and they exist not wholly through the ignorance or poverty of mothers, but through indolence and sheer selfishness.

I was much surprised in planning
