SCHOOL DRILLS ARE VERY FINE
TWO PERFORMANCES NECESSARY
Entertainment Praised by Large Audiences as the Best of Its Kind Ever Given Here.

One of the finest exhibition of drills ever given in Oregon was presented at the opera house last Friday afternoon and evening. At first the date was set for the evening, but the tickets were all sold and people were clamoring for more, so the committee in charge decided to have a matinee to accommodate the great crowd which came. The opera house was packed at both performances.

Words cannot express enough praise for the teachers in charge of the play. They worked hard with untiring labor and success is surely certain when the work is so perfectly planned. Credit is due to the following instructors: Misses Hicks, Willis, Earle and all the teachers of the primary grades.

Hood River orchestra gave a short music before the curtain went up and when it did to show four small children reading; rhymes out of a Mother Goose book.

In a short time Miss Vera Williams, in the costume of Mother Goose, arrived and promised the children a peep of the people of whom they had been reading. So with a wave of her magic wand the different characters came forth all dressed to represent their part. Jack Horner with his pie, Jack with his bumped head and Jill with the pail, Little Bo Peep with her shepherd's crook, little Boy Blue, Jack Spratt and his wife, the Queen of Hearts and her husband, the Knave of Hearts, Simple Simon, the Bride from London brought home in a wheelbarrow and the old woman with all her children were there, and what a happy lot they all were. At the end of the act the children all sang a song, the different verses of it all being nursery rhymes.

The second drill was one planned for rose buds and, indeed, the 16 children resembled roses with their little pink dresses and plunk ribbons in their hair, and the skill with which they presented their ruler drill showed the wise, careful and judicious training of their teacher, Miss Helen Dietz, one of the favorite primary teachers. The little girls all sang their motion song and demonstrated it well. Miss Bradley accompanied them on the piano.

To Misses Stewart and Blynn unending praise should be given for the excellent way in which twelve girls taken from the fourth and fifth grades gave a tambourine drill, in time with the music played by Miss Bragg. The girls all wore white dresses, white shoes and stockings and white ribbons, all looking very dainty and sweet.

The next was an exhibition of Tenneyson's favorite drill, winding the May pole. Instead of using the colors of the rainbow, the girls were patriotic and used red, white and blue streamers, wearing white dresses. The perfect winding of the pole in the many different ways showed incessant tutoring under the capable instruction of Miss Eby. Viola Nicholson accompanied them on the piano.

The exhibition following the flag drill showed plainly that the sixteen girls had been very carefully trained by Miss Hinkle, and was exhibited with military perfection. The girls were all gowned in white with red, white and blue sashes across their chests and tied underneath their arms at the waist. Each girl carried two American flags. Every motion showed the girls graceful and obedient, for no one unless of an obedient nature could have performed each movement so perfectly.

The next drill, under the splendid leadership of Prof. Crouse, forced an audience to believe that after all boys can be graceful if they try hard enough. Fourteen boys were dressed in khaki colored overalls with sunflowers made of green, yellow and brown in the paper gowns. Flat, green, blue, knees, shoulders and chests, and their faces were the liveliest looking sunflowers the reporter has ever seen. Each boy wore a ruffle of sunflower petals around his face, had a sunflower at the back of his head and carried green wands with sunflowers at the top of them. The drill, which was marched to music played by Miss Bragg, was perfect.

The fan drill exhibited so beautifully showed the audience that even though none of the sixteen girls in it were old enough to be voted upon as belles of Hood River, in a few years any one of them can very easily be chosen for queen. Miss Hinkle certainly deserves hearty thanks for the excellent way in which the girls showed her good training. There were eight pairs of girls dressed in the following colors, each carrying a fan to match her gown: Pink, green, blue, yellow, red and white. The graceful motions made with the fans, the harmony of the different colors and the effect of the lights thrown on them was a thing of beauty. Miss Newton played for them.

The last drill was one with Indian clubs given by five well-trained girls, taught by Miss Hinkle. There was not a single error and demonstrated what excellent training she has given. The girls gave a beautiful and kept perfect time to music played by Miss Bragg.
