English people are worrying over the five-cent postage for fear America will flood them with circulars.

Many a man, says an exchange, now successful in business, dates the doubling of his self-respect and the trebling of his determination to succeed from the day he opened a bank account.

The Charleston News and Courier thinks "in a few years the hoboes will be stealing rides in airships."

"Why shouldn't Prof. Bell succeed in making monkeys talk intelligently?" asks the Atlanta Constitution.

A country merchant of Iowa decided to break away from the old foggy spirit which had affected him and his fellows for some time.

A philosopher who makes inquiry into the causes of panics seems to have hit the central idea. He says: "If all people who deposit money in the banks would leave it there till they actually needed it, there would be no such thing as a panic."

The Grant County News gave out the information in its last week's issue that it had been consolidated with the Blue Mountain Eagle and would, therefore, issue no more.

Five presidential tickets are already in the field, that we remember, says the Oregon Journal—Republican, Democratic, Socialist, Populist and Prohibitionist; and soon there will be another, the Independent, fathered and nourished by Mr. W. R. Hearst.

The Editor's Waste Basket. The average newspaper man generally finds out all the naughty doings, no matter how secretly they are planned and kept.

HUMORS OF THE EXHIBITION BOOTH

The exhibition of the Hood River Commercial Club near the railroad station here attracts much attention and many visitors.

"Say, mister how much do you want for those plums," pointing to a carton of large cherries in the window.

"Plums; those are not plums young man, they're cherries."

"Ab, g'wan. I never saw any cherries like them in the east."

"No, and you never will, unless they're shipped there."

Fat man running up from the train out of breath and fumbling in his pocket for coin:

"Ab, my friend, I would like to have some of those apples."

"I'm very sorry stranger, but those apples are only here on exhibition. We don't sell them."

"Don't sell them, what in— have you got a sign out for then saying fruit for sale. Oh I see they're wax; wax by g'wan. Same old thing. Why this is worse than Yakima, where they have a man out mowing the lawn in his shirt sleeves in the winter time whenever a passenger train rolls into the depot. I might a known you couldn't keep apples like them until this time a year."

"Well, say, you better skidoo and get on that train before it pulls out and leaves you colonel. But if you're in this part of the country next October come back and attend the fruit fair and we'll show you several thousand boxes just like them, all made of wax."

Lanky man strolling up to the window and resting both elbows on the counter:

"Nice apples you've got here pardner."

"Yes, do very well for this time of year. Nothing like as fine as some we'll have on exhibition in the fall. That box you see there in the center of that row has never been in cold storage."

"What, you don't say. What do you put on them to keep 'em?"

"Nothing, except a leather duster every morning to take the dust off."

"Well, say, you're a pretty good one. I'll have to tell about this when I get back to Missouri. You certainly showed 'em."

Young lady, with large pompadour, distracting eyes and alluring voice:

"Why I would like very much to have three of those big red apples in the center box."

"Young lady, I regret very much to have to refuse you, but they're not for sale. We only have a few apples left and are keeping them for show until we can get some new ones."

"Oh aren't they real. I thought they were real. They must be real I can smell them. I think you're awful mean not to make an exception for me. I just got here yesterday from Ohio. We don't have any apples in Ohio this time of year. I just love apples, particularly this time of year."

"Why don't you try some of these cherries? You never saw any cherries like these in Ohio. Here, taste one."

month's, to allow time to look up the matter more fully. The street is now at the end of the business section, and it was thought by some that there would be a demand for a street there as the city increased in size.

Ordinance No. 157, allowing alleyways on side streets, under certain restrictions, was passed. This ordinance affects the Eliot building at this time, and it was decided to allow the same.

The ordinance authorizing the calling of a special election for the purpose of changing the charter, and fixing the date of such election at September 22, was passed, and signed by the mayor.

A permit was granted to Dr. Eliot to build an arched way on Second street three feet wide, to lead from the street to the basement of his building, and also to put a walk over the area, to connect with a side door of the building.

The sum of $344.55 was transferred from the general to the bridge fund. Health Officer Dr. Edgington reported that there were a number of unsanitary back yards and cess pools which were a menace to health, as well as offensive to the public, and should be abated. The marshal will co-operate with him in abating the nuisances.

ORATORY AND MIRTH FOR HAWKEYE DAY

Preparations are about completed for the Hawkeyes' big annual picnic event, July 30th, and indications are to the effect that it will be the largest and most successful that they have ever held.

While no formal program has been arranged the plan of procedure as outlined by the committee having the matter in charge is for members of the organization and guests to assemble at Grange Park at 11 a. m. Everybody is expected to provide a basket of good things to eat after which every body is expected to become chummy and do some talking.

J. Van Niece Bandy has been selected as the silver tongued orator of the day, after which County Judge Derby and Rev. W. C. Gilmore are expected to tickle the ears of their hearers. This is a rare combination, a lawyer and a minister, and our advice to those who expect to attend is to leave their money at home.

Some time during the day an election will also be held to select officers of the society for the ensuing year. President Laraway and other members of the organization want it understood that everybody will be welcome and invite all who can do so to join its members in making the day a pleasant one.

Business conditions are recovering in the east, according to Mr. Rae, and he looks for a prosperous season. Just now here that politics are occupying much of the public's attention and expects business will be somewhat quiet until after the election.

Hall-Lathrop. A very pretty home wedding took place here Tuesday when Maybelle, the charming and accomplished daughter of Rev. and Mrs. A. H. Lathrop, was united in marriage with Everett Hall one of Hood River's enterprising and successful men.

The ceremony took place at the residence of the bride's parents which had been beautifully decorated for the occasion. The hour set for the ceremony was 11 a. m. and promptly at that time the fair bride leaning on the arm of her father approached from one room while Mr. Hall escorted by Rev. Walton Skipworth presiding.

After the reading of the petition to close Fifth street between Oak and State for park purposes, and after some discussion, it was decided to lay the matter over for two
