SURVEYING NEW ROAD TO CLOUD CAP INN

The enumeration of the number of apple trees at Hood River made last year by the experiment station of the Oregon Agricultural College placed the number at 350,000. There were many small orchards which were not, however, included in this enumeration and during the year that has elapsed since the census was taken, thousands of trees have been planted. We believe that there are fully 500,000 apple trees at present in Hood River valley. At first glance this may not seem a very large number compared to some of the great apple growing districts, but a little calculation based on future results may not be uninteresting. Placing the probable average yield at three boxes to the tree in five years we have the tidy amount of $1,500,000 boxes or 2,500 cars. Figuring an average price for the fruit at $1.50 per box we have the sum of $2,000,000. On this basis it is easy to perceive that although many developments are taking place to meet the immense increase in business and to facilitate the handling of the already fast increasing output, we are not progressing any too rapidly.

The growing interest in better roads for Hood River county indicates that the meter is being seriously considered. It is claimed by those who have given the matter considerable study that a tax of five mills on the assessed valuation of property in the valley would raise an amount sufficient to pay the interest on bonds in a sum big enough to eighty to a hundred miles of road. It does not seem as if there could be anything done that would be a better investment to Hood River for property owners than roads that would be in good condition at all seasons of the year. The small amount required of each tax payer to construct and maintain them would be realized many times over in saving of time both in hauling fruit and general traffic. To transport the enormous amount of fruit that will soon be produced in the valley makes it imperative that better roads be provided and to have them ready for increased traffic means that work ought to be commenced in the very near future. Many realize the urgent necessity for the permanent improvement and construction of the new highways, but it cannot be done except through concerted action. It is hoped that the good roads meeting which will be held here September 19 will result in formulating a plan for defraying the expense of road improvement and that it will be put into execution with as little delay as possible.

Big Good Roads Meeting Saturday

Next Saturday will be good roads day and everybody who can possibly do so is expected to get out and root for better roads and more of them in Hood River valley. Two meetings have been arranged for and will take place in the Opera House. The afternoon meeting will be called at 2 o'clock and the one in the evening at 8. To put the matter of securing good roads before the residents here intelligently Judge John H. Scott and Judge L. R. Webster are touring the State for the Good Roads Association will speak at both meetings. The important need of good roads here and the fact that a measure will be introduced in the next session of the legislature asking for aid in securing them is expected to insure a big attendance from all parts of the valley.

MOUNT HOOD. The session of the Presbyterian church has arranged to celebrate the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper next Sabbath, September 20, at 11 o'clock, after the sermon. And at the same time the chairman of the Home Mission committee of the Presbytery, Rev. J. M. Cornelison, who is supplying the church during September, will read certain letters of recommendation of Rev. Geo. L. Washburn, of Washington, Mo., who will come to take charge of the church October 1st. Thereby the congregation can have an informal "introduction" so to speak, to their future pastor. All christians in the community are invited to be present and to partake of the Lord's Supper, and incidentally to meet the new minister.

For sale—At a bargain, a modern house with two 1/2 lots and barn, lots face on Oak running through to State street. Apply to J. Otten.

S. S. Baldwin, Hood River's pioneer chausseur, accompanied by an engineering and surveying crew, left Wednesday for the road up the mountain to Cloud Cap Inn, where a new survey will be made for a new road leading to that popular resort. It is the intention to lay out a road that will permit automobiles to run all the way to the Inn. The cost of the road will be paid by Mr. Ladd of Portland, and the work is to be undertaken under his direction. As much of the road will be built this year as possible and the remainder finished in the spring. The Inn and cottages will also be remodelled for next season's business.

New Mercantile Firm. Mr. F. H. Moran, of Stirling, Colo., has purchased the stock of the mercantile recently owned by L. H. Higgins & Co and has taken a long lease on the building they occupied. We learn that Mr. Moran, although comparatively a young man, is an old merchant of wide experience, and a hustler.

Mr. Moran is having the interior of the building remodelled and adding many new improvements. At the same time improvements are going on on the outside. In few days a new front will be put in and a cement walk will be laid both in front and along the side of the building.

When these improvements are complete, which will be in about ten days, Mr. Moran will open up with a new line of dry goods and shoes, and will then have one of the finest, noblest and most complete stores that it is possible to find anywhere.

Mrs. Anna B. Canfield. Mrs. Anna B. Canfield, one of Hood River's best known residents, and an Oregon pioneer of 1852, died at her residence here Saturday night, after a long illness.

Mrs. Canfield was born in Danville, Ill., in 1850, and with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Scoures, crossed the plains in 1852. Her first place of residence in Oregon was at The Dalles where her father died in 1855.

In 1858 her mother was married to Colonel Zeba, and accompanying him, they went to live on Whidby Island, near Olympia. Shortly afterward their cabin was attacked by Indians and Colonel Zeba was murdered, her mother escaping with Mrs. Canfield into the woods, where they lived for several days until they were rescued. They then returned to Oregon, where Mrs. Canfield's mother again married, taking as her husband an army surgeon named Dr. Bell, and for several years they lived at McMinnville.

On the death of her mother Mrs. Canfield went to live with P. F. Bradford, of Portland, one of the first steamboat men to navigate the upper Columbia river. A few days later she went to Holyoke, Mass., where she was educated, and was afterward married to Henry G. Canfield in New York City. On the death of her husband, which occurred in 1889, Mrs. Canfield returned to Portland, where she lived for two years, and then came to Hood River. Her association with many of the prominent early families of the state caused her to be well known in Oregon, as did also her long affiliation in church work.

The funeral, which was largely attended, was held Monday afternoon from the Riverside Congregational church, Rev. W. C. Gilmore conducting the services. Interment was made in Idlewild cemetery under the direction of S. E. Hartness.

Incorporate Auto Company. A company to be known as the Bone-Brock-DeWitt Co., has been incorporated to sell automobile supplies and will do business with its headquarters at Hood River. The members of the company are C. R. Bone, Harry Brock and Harry DeWitt. It is the intention to secure suitable quarters for garage and to handle all kinds of automobile supplies and do general repairing. The Bone-Brock-DeWitt company will also be agents for the new Everetts-Metzger's Flaming car, which will soon be put on the market in Oregon. Their territory includes Hood River, Wasco, Sherman, Gilliam and Morrow counties, and they will exhibit in these counties on the arrival of six of the new machines which are expected here in October.

Had Enjoyable Time. The Royal Neighbors of America held very enjoyable session on Friday evening, September 11. After the regular routine of business and initiation of four candidates the camp was closed and the doors thrown open to the M. W. A.'s. An enjoyable program was rendered, which was followed by a delightful lunch. Several members were presented by the camp with useful birthday presents, with wishes for many returns of the day. The evening was enjoyed by all.

Shadow Social. Park Grange will give a shadow social Friday evening, September 18. Ladies are requested to bring baskets with lunch for two and the gentlemen will be expected to buy their shadows. It is not necessary to make fancy baskets or boxes as the shadows will be sold so we hope every one will come and help us out. A fine program will be rendered. Be sure to come. Boys, don't forget the date and your pocket book's. At Park Grange, September 18.

APPLE PACKING SCHOOL SUCCESS

The school for apple packers started under the auspices of the Hood River Apple Growers Union, opened Monday morning with a large attendance. About 100 were on hand to be initiated into the mysteries of learning to put up a pack of apples that would pass muster. Among the candidates for apple packing honors were a number of women and these were given tables to themselves. Many of the beginners showed good aptitude in learning and at the end of the first day under the instructions of the experts who were present to teach them succeeded in making a very creditable showing. About 25 packing tables were provided and the eight when all were working was an interesting one.

Among the packers were residents from all sections of the valley and the earnestness with which they took up the work is gratifying to the officers of the union. Before the end of the week of instruction it is expected that a good many of the learners will become proficient enough to go into the field and prove a big help when the time comes to pack the big crop expected this year. Some of the expert packers who have been instructing the beginners are S. G. Campbell, N. Iostevik, Chas. Stranahan and Al Hoover.
