

SHELLEY HEARS THE GOOD NEWS

Carson, Wash., Sept. 20. Editor Glacier: I note with pleasure the report in yesterday's Oregonian of the sale of 50,000 boxes of choice Hood River apples. Remembering that Mr. Loomis, of Loomis & Co., said last year that in the matter of marketing apples Hood River stood in a class of her own that "such a product as Hood River furnished would always find a ready sale at a good price," and now Mr. Steinhart, the present point says: Hood River is the pivotal point around which buyers revolve for the finest grade of apple stock that is put upon the market anywhere in the world, and we and the other firms know it. It is surprising that such a comparatively small crop as is grown here cuts such a big figure in the apple world, but it is accounted for by the fact that dealers everywhere recognize that Hood River apples are the absolute standard of excellence in quality and as long as Hood River continues to ship the fine quality of apples for which she is noted, there will be a good market for them at high prices. Such opinions, coming as they do from some of the largest dealers and exporters in the United States, should have a tendency to establish firmly in the mind of the apple grower of Hood River that there is little danger of an oversupply of its peerless product. After having been absent about a year from Hood River, surrounded by the pessimist and knocker, the this piece of good news is probably more refreshing to me than to many of your apple kings who are already on easy street. During the past six years I have noted carefully the marvelous development of your valley and watched with interest prices that have steadily increased and many times through your columns I have expressed an abiding faith in the great future of your fair valley, the like of which from a standpoint of scenic beauty, charming environments and profit producing products, cannot be surpassed in the world. Nature has indeed been lavish there, adding to the splendid natural advantages. You will permit me to say that these results are largely due to the intelligence of your citizens, backed up by grit and perseverance. To the good work of the Commercial Club, your community at large and the dissemination of knowledge that has gone out through your valuable newspapers (the Glacier having done the pioneer work) much credit is due. And I give it as my opinion that it requires no prophetic finger to point to the time at no very distant day when the price of bearing orchards in your valley will find quick buyers at double the prices that they are selling for today. Such are the fitting tributes applicable to our friend and Christian co-worker, the late Mrs. A. B. Canfield. To those coming to Hood River in the past few years, she was not so well known as she had been compelled to retire from much of her active work by reason of her many and ever increasing cares of her sick and aged relatives, which to her was a labor of love. However, a large circle of friends accorded her the respect, confidence and love of which she was worthy. Mrs. Canfield came to Hood River some thirteen years ago with her uncle and aunt, the late Mr. and Mrs. P. F. Bradford, both of whom died a few years later, leaving to her loving care another aged uncle, Mr. A. Bradford, and an aunt, Mrs. Daniel Bradford. She was loved as a daughter in her uncle's family and no daughter could excel in service the care bestowed upon these aged relatives. By her cheery, kind disposition and thoughtfulness for others she soon endeared herself to many and made for herself a place in the church and community, from which she will be sadly missed. She was, as her pastor said, "a thorough Congregationalist," having been brought up in this faith from her early childhood. Her church life and her work were very dear to her and for years she took a leading part in the choir and was an active worker in the Ladies Aid. In all of the departments of church service her life bore the mark of deep devotion and conscientiousness of spirit. Not only was she a woman of deep conviction and earnest spirit, but she possessed the rare gift of calling forth the faithful service of her co-workers in every good work. The ordering of her course and bearing were as the powerful forces of nature, quiet, deep and beneficent, ever moving steadily to spread the sweet influences which would soothe, strengthen and cheer. We who knew her best wish that all knew the beauty and power which dwells in such a life as hers. It was a rare return for her kindness, after caring for all of her family through sickness and death, that she found so many kind friends to minister unto her through her last illness and when the shadows were falling she gave to them a smile and cheery words, which we all so well remember. The record of such a life is its own fitting memorial, and one could not help but feel honored in having enjoyed the friendship and fellowship of one so capable, earnest and devoted. More than Enough is Too Much. To maintain health, a mature man or woman needs not enough food to repair the waste and supply energy and body heat. The habitual consumption of more food than is necessary for these purposes is the prime cause of rheumatism, stomach troubles and disorders of the kidneys. If troubled with indigestion, revise your diet, let reason and not appetite control and take a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and you will soon be all right again. Fencing the range to protect sheep from the attacks of predatory animals has met with excellent results in the Walla Walla national forest of Oregon, says the Canyon City Eagle. The problem was to find a strong fence that would make the sheep secure, even without the care of a herder. The chosen fence, which is built of woven wire with barbed wire on the top, has kept out all the minor animals such as wild cats, lynx and coyotes, but has not withstood the attacks of the grizzlies, which are apparently able to pass through it with little trouble. Sheep numbering 2,200 head were placed in the enclosure with their lambs upon June 20 and have been allowed to graze at their free will with no attention whatever from any herder. They have done splendidly and as far as the observation of those in-charge of the experiment goes a great area grazed by sheep under such conditions will carry more sheep per acre than one grazed under the charge of the herder. Tracks along the fence show that predatory animals come to the fence constantly and follow it around, but with the exception of the bears do not seem able to enter. The hunter employed by the service for hunting predatory animals in the vicinity of this fenced enclosure has killed not less than six large grizzlies this season, besides numerous other animals of the predatory class. The results of this experiment are so satisfactory thus far that private individuals are profiting by it. J. W. Emmons, of Troy, Oregon, has a large area of private land fenced with a special wire fence in which he has this season lamed a herd of 670 ewes without a herder's care and with very little attention and great success. Careful record will be kept of the weights of lambs raised inside this fence with a view of comparing them with the same grade of lambs raised outside the fence on same class of range, so that any gains or losses in weight and growth may be determined. For Chronic Diarrhoea. "While in the army in 1863 I was taken with chronic diarrhoea," says George M. Falton of South Gibson, Pa. "I have since tried many remedies but without any permanent relief until Mr. A. W. Miles of this place persuaded me to try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, one bottle of which stopped it once." For sale by Kier & Cass. Wanhope. Keep a Written Account Of All Your Expenditures You know from experience it is hard to save from your earnings—but it can be done if you set your heart and head in that direction. The only way to do it is to keep an account of what you earn and what you spend. The simplest way to keep this record is to have a bank account—deposit your money with this bank and pay all bills by check. Your bank book and returned checks are the record you want—they will tell the story of your money both earned and spent. Now would be the proper time to begin. The Butler Banking Company
