It is made of a granite dishpan, trimmed with dog collars, brass chains, feather dusters, and paint brushes, and when not in use to adorn the brow of the housewife, not only the hat itself, but the trimming, can be used about the house for other purposes.

Country Club Inn
PHONE 347-K HOOD RIVER, ORE.

ITS EXCEPTIONAL ATTRACTIONS

As a mountain summer resort this house with its extensive natural grounds, fronting the Columbia River, is positively unsurpassed. The health-giving breath of pine and fir, the songs of birds, the proximity of mountain and river, the pleasant mingling of shade and sun, the shelter from high winds which here fret merely the tops of the forest trees, the clean freshness only possible apart from towns and traffic, the quiet of the back country within the limits of a town of 3,000, and but a mile from its railway station—here is a combination of advantages hard to beat.

Add to all these a comfortable modern house, with plumbing and electric lights, with a wide veranda, spacious drawingroom, clean and airy bedrooms with beds equal to those of first class hotels, and finally a cuisine and table combining the abundance and variety of country fare with the really skilled cookery that is at once wholesome and appetizing.

This is the Country Club Inn, at Hood River, Oregon, now open for the season under new management.

Water supply from a mountain spring. Views superb and extensive, including Mt. Adams' snowy peak and the River itself.

Ideal place for children.

Unexcelled for convalescents.

Perfect for all who love the countryside and its invigorating joys.

RATES:
Transients, $2.00 a Day.
Adults, $10.00 a Week.
Children under 12, $5.00 a Week.
