HOOD RIVER BOYS
OWN UNIVERSITY HOME

The Hood River Bachelors' Club at the University of Oregon now owns its own home in Eugene and the boys have their own house in which to live while attending college. The five members of the club are Elwood Luckey, Harry and Burleigh Cash, Albert Garabrant and Ray Murphy and these boys have probably one of the most unique organizations in existence at any American college. Their idea is not to maintain an organization and let the property be used by later generations of college men who are to come after them as is common with the fraternity and club house. These boys bought the house and lot last year and paid for it on the installment plan, making their final payment this month. When they have finished their college course and are through with the house, they will sell it and the property will net them a good return on the money invested as it is already worth a neat little sum more than they paid for it. This sort of a speculation combined with the advantage of having low living expenses while attending school would only be possible in a college located in a rapidly growing town as is the case in Eugene. The boys have a comfortable house located in the Gross addition near the University. The boys are all graduates of the Hood River high school and they are making very good records in college and, besides doing their regular courses and keeping house for themselves, they find time to engage in the athletic and debating activities of the university. In these circles they are making very enviable records. Besides this organization of Hood Riverites at the University, there is a Hood River Club composed of a dozen students from here who are in attendance at the state institution and they get together now and then and let the students know that they come from the valley which grows the best apples on earth.
