

Hood River Glacier

ARTHUR D. MOE, Publisher. Subscription, $1.50 Per Year.

POLITICIANS' OPEN SEASON. That the open season for politicians is now on was indicated Wednesday by the appearance in Hood River of O. P. Hoff, State Commissioner of Labor and Factory Inspector. Mr. Hoff called at the Glacier office and tried to cheer us up after the inspection hold-up which was worked on all the country newspapers of the state a few months ago by his representatives. He tried to explain that the $5 which the state taxed us for having a man spend ten minutes looking about the shop was perfectly just and money well spent. However, we still fail to see it. In trying to show that there was no grafting and no extra inspectors hired in his department, he explained that his department turned over $7,000 to the state treasury which they could have spent if they had been able to think of anything to spend it for. The inspection of small printing offices nets the state a pretty good graft at that rate and while we are gratified to know that a portion of our money gets by the army of petty office holders into the coffers of the people, it seems reasonable that more just methods of taxation might be framed up. No matter who is inspected, the state should not conduct the inspection business in order to keep a bunch of ne'er do wells in jobs or to get a revenue for itself.

After we had explained to Mr. Hoff what we thought of his inspection game, of course it was not the psychological moment for him to tell us that he was a candidate for re-election. However, we have our guess that he is after the office again and he carries a good combination to win. He carries a card on which the most prominent thing except his name in the union printers' label which ought to catch the union labor element. On the label of his coat, he wears several lodge emblems which should line up the fraternal vote and when he begins to talk it is a cinch the should land the German voters.

A new German paper, "Der Ruf des Westens" (The Call of the West), has been launched in Portland. With our meager knowledge of German we were led to believe in reading over the paper that it was to be devoted to the agricultural interests of the Pacific Coast with particular attention to the German farmers. The paper is well put up and should find a good field. Among the advertisements is a list of Hood River "Obst-Farmen."

HOOD RIVER'S EXPERT JUVENILE SPRAYER

That the science of properly raising apples is early instilled into the Hood River valley boys and that at an early age they are capable of doing the work of expert orchardists is illustrated by the fact that twelve year old Howard Cooper has qualified as an expert sprayer. This youthful orchardist runs a big gasoline sprayer and he did the work of his father, W. F. Cooper and his grandfather, W. F. Laraway.

This boy goes out alone with the team and sprayer, keeps the latter adjusted and running and does a full day's work in the orchard with the same care and good results which attend the efforts of older and more experienced fruit growers. Not only does young Howard do the work in the home orchard, but he contracts to do the spraying for the neighbors and goes with his outfit into the nearby orchards where he earns $10 a day for ten hours work knocking out the orchard pests.

A Brilliant Reception.

The members and friends of the Valley Christian church tendered a reception to their new minister and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. Isaac Peart. It was indeed a most brilliant affair, in fact it took the form of an ovation. At 7:30 the people began to arrive in their automobiles and carriages. It was a fine scene to see twelve automobiles around a church. The sight was imposing. The seating capacity proved too small for the gathering. Prof. Murphy was master of ceremonies and Mr. and Mrs. Gibbons were the receivers and presented the people to Mr. and Mrs. Peart. Addresses of welcome were delivered by the following ministers: The Revs. Ford, Tate, Wood, Gilmore, Davidson and Adams, also an address by Leslie Butler. These addresses were excellent and well received. The pastor responded. The boys' band played to the delight of all. Mrs. Revia, the choir leader, and her daughter, the organist, sang a duet which was well rendered. At the close of the program refreshments were served, consisting of ice cream and cake. This closed the most elaborate reception ever given in this noted place, or at least this was the opinion of the oldest residents.—Contributed.

The Canadian Route East.

The Canadian Pacific Soo-Spokane route, operating the Soo-Spokane Portland train de luxe Portland to St. Paul via Spokane, announce a series of low rate excursion on certain dates in May, June, July, August and September from Hood River to Winnipeg, St. Paul, Duluth, Omaha, Kansas City, and St. Louis. At the same time through tickets will be sold to many New York, New England and Canadian points.

The routing arrangements are unusually liberal, giving the option of the direct Soo-Spokane service, or via the charming Kootenay and Arrow Lakes through the Selkirk and Rocky mountains via Glacier, Field, Lake Louise and Banff. Passengers for far eastern points are given the option of traveling via the Great Lakes, with meals and berths included. At slightly higher cost tickets may be routed via the St. Lawrence river, through the Thousand Islands, Lake Champlain, Lake George and the Hudson river. All standard lines participate in this business and tickets can be routed back by any line.

The closing of series of "open forum" meetings was held at the Methodist church Sunday evening. Dr. T. B. Ford spoke of the series and its results and several of the speakers of the series responded. A pleasing musical program was rendered.

HOOD RIVER AS IT IMPRESSED INDIANIAN

tered it all over the field finally. And she, lately the favorite performer at select musicals, what was she doing? "Just utterly wrapped up in the study of chicken raising—my specialty, you know." And out poured a stream of vivacious and practical talk on the breeding of chickens, with an occasional reference to one of the several poultry journals upon the table. The home of this family is shown in the Hood River picture herewith. I visited with other friends, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Allen and Mr. and Mrs. Coburn Allen, late of Indianapolis. Their home, a beautiful log cabin, is perched on the mountain slope on the opposite side of the valley—this Paradise valley, where there is no strife or bitterness except as to which side of the valley and which slope of the mountain is better for apples. Think of the joy of building a log house with the labor of your own hands, beginning with the felling of the trees and then the matching of log to log, the shaping of the walls for windows and doors, veranda, posts and rails of little trees; inside casings about the windows and doors of hand-hewn small logs; great fireplace, with a six-foot opening, built out of the boulders cleared from your field. Everything from your own place done by your own hand, and the hands of your son, your boy who was not spoiled by his college career, but works beside you, a little more skillfully than you do, you confess to yourself with pride. And there stands the finished product, a beautiful loghouse with every possible convenience in it, including an ample water supply from the flume higher up on the side of the mountain—in the midst of a thicket of pines and firs, with the apple lands below and the broad valley stretching out to the mountains opposite, that catch the sun's rays. And these are people who have brought their choicest rugs and antique furniture from a big city house into this ten room log house and dispense a hospitality with all the essential requirements of a city's social life, out upon the mountain side with the forest back of them yet uncleared. But it is not isolation, for yonder on the next twenty acre tract, you may see a very handsome man, whose over-long hair suggests the fact that he is an artist, dividing his time between feeding his pet fowls and painting them. Just around the shoulder of the mountain are two jolly members of the former club, Fred and Joe McCrea, formerly of Indianapolis, who have just finished building a house for their parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. F. McCrea, after chopping away the trees and clearing the land.

A little farther on the young man, Fred Wasson, who forgot himself in the log book, lives in a tent while he and his men clear forty acres of land and prepare it for an apple orchard. He gets most of his own meals now, and they set pretty well with him. At home he was served by a family butler and had no indignation. One of the most enterprising of the fruit growers is Clarence E. Coffin, also a former Indianapolis boy.

A woman of Hood River does not give up a task and ask to die when she has no help in her kitchen. She telephones around for a house party. The women and girls prepare the meals and the boys clear it away to the tune of a college song.

Will it last? Will these highly educated and cultured people, and especially the young men, with the tastes of city life, be content? Will they persist? Not all of them, I prophesy, but the best. There, as elsewhere, the inevitable thing is to go on. But those who stay will reap not only what they sow but what others have sown. Such people build good roads and good houses, surrounded with attractive gardens and no point of advantage in the landscape is ever overlooked. So that in five years, or it may be ten, Hood River valley will be a little paradise of beautiful homes set in the encircling mountain. All will not make the money they anticipate, but they will make a living and have lived a life worth living.

Just in Time For the Census.

On Friday evening, April 15, a little boy and a little girl arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Carson. The little ones came just in time to be enrolled in the count which Uncle Sam is taking as April 15 is the day for which the statistics are to be gathered. The two sturdy youngsters and Mrs. Carson are getting along very nicely. Mr. and Mrs. Carson will have 12 children registered in the census, which is more than any other family in the county.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Horton and son, arrived Monday from Omaha and have taken up their home in Paradise Acre age. Mr. and Mrs. M. Parkins are the parents of Mrs. Horton.
