RESULTS OF THE ELECTION. The results of the city election, in spite of the fact that two of the old administration failed of election by a narrow majority, is a vindication of the work of the present administration in their efforts to provide the city with good water.

MAINTAINING OUR REPUTATION. The unbroken line of victories which Hood River has achieved in the several apple shows around the country maintains our reputation. It has got to a point where we cannot afford to lose if we would keep at the head. There is no reason why we should lose if our standards are maintained, if we put up an honest pack and make the Hood River label a standard of excellence, which can be depended upon by the buyer.

JIM HILL'S PROPHECIES AND FEARS. It is rather a hard and difficult problem to reconcile Jim Hill to his old prophecies with those of his latest ones. He made the announcement two or three years ago that a dire calamity would fall upon the American people if the railroads didn't spend several billions on expensive improvements.

Now that we again have bumper crops and reasonable prospects, Mr. Jim tells us that the railroad companies are not ordering anything worth mentioning in the way of additional equipment or improvements. He also predicts a series of lean years to come, with many unemployed and the curtailment of production and trade.

So far, Jim's gloom has not overtaken us, but now he claims that we are living too high and that the "dire calamity" will surely overtake us in the course of a few moons.

Fortunately, for us, there are those who are always watching for the pot to boil over, but it even has not come to a boil, so the anticipated calamity never occurred.

Evidently Mr. Hill goes "gallooting" over the country making predictions of calamity disasters in order to produce a moral reaction, in the endeavor to make the average American citizen hopeful and determined to prevent a calamity in business by prudence, common sense and economy.

The wife of a wealthy Colorado merchant is suing her husband for a divorce on the grounds that her husband would not give her money enough to buy a new bonnet. She claims to have lived with him for the past 30 years and during all of that time she has never been the proud possessor of a new piece of headgear. She wants that division of the property which amounts to $150,000.

State Land Agent Applegate has his report ready for the legislature when they convene. Since he has been in the land office, he has flatly refused to help any monopolies grab land that should go to the state. He also has an idea that the state's business is worth looking after and that land hogs should be barred from the state's pasture.

On the first day of February 1911, in the date set for the inauguration of train service into Interior Oregon over the new line of the Deschutes railroad. By that time it is expected that the line will be in operation to Matolius, 150 miles south of the Columbia river. Rails have been laid about 30 miles south of the Columbia.

It has been reported that there will only be a 20-day session of the legislature instead of the long drawn out 40-day limit. This idea is getting strong among the Representatives and Senators. Evidently the people will be as well satisfied.

One railroad official has rose up on his two hind legs and made the remark that the railroads re run solely for the purpose of making money. This seems to be a poor way to gain the good will of the people.

When it comes to winning first prizes, Oregon seems to get three with both feet, so to speak. This time Hood River apples and a Morrow

County heifer won first prizes at Chicago.

When Miss Geraldine Farrar arrived at her home after a trip abroad, she again repeated her famous remark about dukes and other foreign nobility. But let it be remembered, however, that she was wearing a hat which entirely hid her face when she said it.

Astoria will celebrate her one hundredth birthday next year. Every Oregonian should put his shoulder to the wheel and help the great city to celebrate. Everybody should be able to go at least once in a hundred years.

Twenty-nine "blind pigger's," who have been dispensing near beer to booze fighters in Pendleton and the surrounding country, have finally met with their "Waterloo." They donated $100 each to the county treasurer.

Charles E. Hicks has resigned his position as editor of the Independence Enterprise. Henry E. Brown has accepted the editorship and will endeavor to make it the leading paper in that part of the state.

It cost the New York Democratic State Committee $228,870 to elect its state ticket. This is even more than the Hood River municipal election cost last Tuesday.

There are strong indications that the people of England will be able to pull off their coming election without having a German war scare, as usually is the case.

Mr. Pepper, Congressman-elect, from Iowa, should have but little trouble in being the genuine hot stuff when he gets inside the White House walls.

President Taft has directed that certain sections of his message be cut out which will reduce it to 6000 words. It will go to Congress as an appendix.

On the first day of each year all Chinamen pay their debts and begin the new year with a smile. But then, who wants to be a Chinaman?

The record for hunters who were mistaken for deer and killed has been broken totals 113. It is a remarkable year for broken records.

Don't send your Christmas order to some mail order house. Spend your money with the home merchant.

Ninety-two thousand bales of hops is the crop for Oregon this year, while last year the crop was 85000 bales.

We are mighty thankful that we are not compelled to buy bacon to keep warm.

Two hundred feet high will be the limit for skyscrapers in Chicago hereafter.

President Taft is a pretty busy man these days working on his message to Congress.

There is once in a great while a magazine comes out without an article referring to the Hon. John D. Rockefeller.

A French woman has succeeded in remaining up in the air in a flying machine for 56 minutes. During all of that time there was nobody whom she could talk to.

James J. Hill predicts that many thousands of men will be out of employment next year in this country, owing to the public's past extravagance. Baseball magnates will go right on increasing the capacity of their park.

It is reported from Hillsboro that a whole family is dying from the effects of eating raw pork sausage spread upon bread. Their bodies are provided by attending physicians to be fairly impregnated with trichina from the uncooked pork. These microbes multiply with great rapidity and it is only a matter of time until the victims are actually eaten alive. There seems to be no method that will eradicate the avaricious worms after once they have gained foothold in the human system.

Married in An Automobile.

Near Indianapolis, Ind., an automobile dashing along at the rate of 60 miles an hour on the Riverside boulevard, Miss Ella Wilson and Erv Radd, were married by Rev. Lewis. The preacher stood on the steps of the car while the bridegroom guided the machine with his left hand while he joined hands with the bride. The ceremony was punctuated with bumps and jolts. The tying of the knot was witnessed by two friends, who claim that it was done "according to Hoyle."

A New Innovation.

The Southern Pacific railroad have decided to try a new innovation in the matter of feeding its passengers on the train. With this end in view, the company is having two cars built which will be called "lunch cars" and which are to be especially designed for the purpose of feeding people who ride in the day coaches. No doubt but what the "lunch cars" will become quite popular for those who ride in the Pullmans, who would prefer a light lunch to that of the expensive one in the diner.

Water Company Enjoined.

Salem, Or., Dec. 6.—Perpetually enjoining the Joseph Water works from extending its water mains, the Supreme Court reversed the decision of Judge J. A. Knowles, of Wallawa County, today in the case of the City of Joseph versus the water company. The company wished to extend its mains to streets not already provided with water, and the city started injunction proceedings. As one defense the company alleged that the city desired to establish a water plant of its own and through competition render the present company's property valueless. The lower court dissolved the injunction, which was only temporary, but the Supreme Court declared a reversal of judgment and made the injunction perpetual.

A Christmas Mix-Up.

"No," said Mrs. Jordan, quite roughly, "I can't say that Julia Hopkins is really a smart and intelligent woman. Of course she sings well and reads heavy novels and all such, but she thinks too much of her personal appearance to be really brainy. Why? We went bathing the other day together, and would you believe me, but I give you my word of honor, Josiah, was nearly struck dumb with the way she made herself up. No, not exactly painted, but she told me confidentially that she used a special kind of face cream under her pores during the winter months and a cooling lotion in the hot weather, and she also uses three kinds of hair tonic, and—oh! I don't know what all. And when we had our shampoo, you should have seen the extra hair she put on."

Mr. Jordan dressed for dinner and waited patiently for the finish of his wife's sartorial preparations and smiled whimsically with his eagle eye on the dressing table before which his wife sat. It held quite an assortment of dainty boxes and bottles and Josiah knew full well that there were many more tucked away in various drawers and cupboards and out of the way places that he knew nothing of. He kept on watching Mrs. Jordan smilingly touch her cheeks with a delicate pink powder, applied a white powder to her forehead, nose and throat, delicately corrected eyebrows with a black pencil, pinching the hairs into better shape with some kind of muck-lage that was sweet smelling, rubbed and manipulated the lobes of her ears until they were as pretty to look at as a Hood River Spitzenberg apple, added the finishing touches to her hair, with a special curling iron and pinned on six or eight puffs and a froid. While she was pinching and pressing her lips to perfect their shape, Josiah, the mere man, indulged in a speech.

"My dear," said Josiah gently, "why do you find fault with Julia Hopkins for 'making-up,' and what is the difference between her and other women? Every time you try a new cosmetic dodge you tell me that all the women I know are doing it, and you seem to be going some in the same direction of facial decoration just at the present time. Why is it so much worse for Julia to do such things to her face and hair than for you to be doing the very same thing?"

"Josiah Jordan," stammered Mrs. Jordan with all of her dignity, "if I had a hundred horses across that you had, I would certainly hide it as much as possible. Of course, I use but very little powder. The woman who doesn't is a guy, always. Then too, I add a little hair, not because I need it, but because I don't want to disagree you by looking worse than the wives of your friends. All the hair fixings I wear are made from my own combings, and there is also the greatest difference in the world between using a little plain powder and making-up your face like a perfect mask."

Credulous West.

Hiram Bucktoos, a West Carrollton farmer, used to come in to Dayton every Saturday afternoon to shop, and the boys at the feed store would take many a rise out of him on account of his faith. He'd believe anything—needs to the latest propositions. One Saturday, to see if he couldn't slatter Hiram's proverbial faith, a wit said: "Spending of buffaloes, Mr. Bucktoos, did I ever tell you that when I was out west I seen a buffalo up a tree eating grapes?" "Indeed!" said Hiram. He didn't even look a bit startled, but only interested and pleased. "Indeed?" "That's what I said," repeated the wit. "Why, Mr. Bucktoos, didn't you never see no buffaloes up trees?" "No," faltered Hiram. "No, I can't say I ever did." Then he brightened up. "But I've often heard," he added, "how very fond they are of grapes."—New York Press.
