FOLK DELIVERS POLITICAL SERMON

After introduction by E. C. Smith, president of the Commercial club, Ex-Governor Jos. W. Folk of Missouri delivered in his earnest manner a strong political sermon at the Heilbronner hall Saturday night. The subject of Ex-Gov. Folk's address was "The Era of Conscience."

In the beginning of his speech he told of the recent rise of public conscience and of the high standard of political morals. "It has been the growth of a new spirit of patriotism," he said, "for there must be a patriotism of peace as well as that of war. The man who will live for his country every day in the year is the real patriot. Every-day duties of civil life demand just as much courage as do the duties of the battlefield. The man who lives his whole life in fighting public evils is the man upon whom the life of the republic rests." However, Ex-Gov. Folk stated, many men would be willing to fight on the battlefield who are really tearing down the republic by political corruption. As an example he related the following incident: "I was at a banquet in St. Louis," he said, "several years ago. After the feast all arose and sang the hymn, 'America.'" One of the men present stirred by the voices and music, turned to a neighbor and said, 'Oh, now I wish I could die for my country.' Three weeks later this same man was kneeling at the feet of justice because of the part he had taken in the St. Louis hoodluming."

The former graft prosecutor says the great percentage of graft that this country has had to submit to, is caused not because we have so many dishonest men, but because the honest ones allow the thing to go on without making any attempt to put a stop to it. He says: "Any man who is afraid to show his colors is of no benefit to good government, but the man who dares to strike at public wrong, no matter how small his blows may be, has a character that is effective for good. A government by the people is the worse form of government we can have, unless the people can govern themselves. If every man does not take the part he should take special interests will rule. Every man should make himself one seventy-five millionth part of a sovereign and take an active part in the affairs of government. The honesty of our citizens is too often a passive honesty."

One of the most interesting parts of the address was the history of the development of graft in St. Louis. The audience was startled by the story of the innumerable corrupt acts that the municipal legislators of that place attempted to carry out. "They even attempted to sell the court house for an office building, each one to receive a portion of the proceeds of the sale," said the man who prosecuted them, "and an attempt was made to sell the insane asylum to a company for a shoe factory. The deed under which the former was purchased prevented them from carrying out their purpose with respect to it, and the city charter prevented an alienation of the property of the insane asylum. In 1902 we reached the climax of corruption in this country. The public conscience was asleep. Politicians came to think they had a right to receive bribes and citizens, instead of considering their votes as the property of the nation, to be used for the best good, sold and bartered them as though they had been the products of labor. The great problem of the man who attempted to eradicate such a state of affairs was not to prove that graft had taken place but to show to a jury that it was wrong."

Those who have made great fortunes by means of some special privilege, who have had laws passed for the purpose of legalizing their undertakings, came in for a share of criticism. American girls who seek notoriety by marrying foreign titles were roundly scolded. "It usually takes the daughter of a $50,000,000 father to secure a titled husband," said the ex-governor. "but if I were to save every cent of my $5,000 salary—provided I had the daughter—it would take me 10,000 years to accumulate that sum; and then I think the daughter would be too old to wed. Yet, if the lady had the money, I do not think the foreign duke or earl would be affected by the age."

Before Ex-Gov. Folk took the matter up during the presidency of Roosevelt, this country had no clauses in their treaties with other countries concerning the extradition of grafters, provisions for such have now been made with Mexico and the Netherlands. Congress balked on taking the matter further.

Ex-Gov. Folk arrived in this city Saturday afternoon on the 3:25 train from The Dalles. He spent the afternoon touring the Valley by automobile. He left early Sunday morning to be the guest of Portland for the day, going from there to Seattle where he lectured Monday night.

HEIGHTS NEWS

E. W. Dark has erected a carpenter shop on the lot recently purchased by him from the Woodmen. He will install modern wood working equipment in his new quarters.

The Curfew ordinance is now being enforced on the Heights. Officer Stone rings the new bell at the Baptist church each night at 9 o'clock.

The people of the Heights were very much disturbed Monday night because of lack of fire protection. Throughout the whole night they were without water.

The Heights' Fire Department will hold a social Friday night at the new Holman hall. A program and refreshments will be provided. A collection will be charged and the proceeds will go toward the building of a house for the fire fighting apparatus.

The school girls of the eighth grade who are members of Miss Monroe's Sunday school class were delightfully entertained at the Monroe home Saturday afternoon. An egg hunt was participated in, after which delicious refreshments were served.

Heights Defeated by One Score.

The Meier & Frank baseball team, of Portland, defeated the Heights team at the Columbia Park grounds Sunday afternoon by the close score of 6 to 5. The home boys played in hard luck. They made 8 hits, one more than the visitors, but were unable to bunch them. The line up of the local was as follows: Hall, c; Hart, p; Shoemaker, 1st b; R. Samuels, 2nd b; Carson, 3rd b; Koontz, ss; Mooney, 1st f; Bucklin, c f; Dunn, r f.

A Coming Event.

What is purported to be Hood River's musical treat of the year will be given in Heilbronner Hall on May 1st. Owing to the failure of the Dunbar Company to appear and no other company being sent to replace them, it was felt that a good concert was needed this season. The Baraca boys have taken it upon themselves to have the Cartwright Company of Chicago stop here for an open date while enroute to Spokane. While this is the first tour for this company of the Pacific states, it will suffice to state that they travel under their own special managers and not for agencies and command top-notch prices. The stop here is made to fill in an open date and for advertising purposes (they have heard of Hood River) and the prices will be as usual.

Rev. Henry Wilder Foote to Lecture.

The Rev. Henry Wilder Foote, who will lecture at the Unitarian church, Friday evening at 8 o'clock, is a man of wide experience. He represents the American Unitarian Association, and is secretary of that body. His address will be on some modern interpretation of life, a subject of interest to all who are concerned with the moral and social welfare of the world. This lecture is free, and all are urged to attend.

The Apple Blossom Assembly.

Messrs. James E. Montgomery and Charles Wheeler, who have been the popular hosts of a number of assembly parties this season have issued invitations for a dance to celebrate the apple blossom season. The assembly will be held in the Heilbronner hall on the evening of April 29.

Camas Drainage Case at End.

The Camas Prairie, Wash., drainage case which has been fought out for the past several years in the Kickiat county courts has finally been settled, and will culminate in the drainage of 6,000 acres of land in that district. Prof. Thatcher, of the Washington Agricultural College at Pullman, who has investigated the soil of the region to be drained, has pronounced it to be of as good quality as any other soil in the Northwest. Camas Prairie is 20 miles north of Underwood and extends from Laurel to Glenwood, a distance of 10 miles. B. E. Duncan and a number of other Hood River people are interested in property there.

"POISON OAK" TIME IS HERE.

A Simple Reward Has Been Found, However, Which Stops the Itch.

Poison oak can now be cured quite easily.

A simple liquid wash, composed mostly of oil of wintergreen, combined with other healing ingredients, has been used with a good deal of success. This remedy, D. D. D. Prescription, became known first because of the cures it accomplished in eczema and other diseases of the same general nature.

When used for "Poison Oak" it dries up the watery pustules, drives away the red, flaming spots, and returns the skin to its normal condition.

The itch stops instantly. We vouch for the great eczema remedy, D. D. D. Prescription, and would certainly not recommend it for "poison oak" if we did not know what it would do. A trial bottle only 25c. Keir & Cass.
