SMALL APPLES WILL HAVE BEST DEMAND

If the demand for the coming season is at all similar to that of last the Hood River growers who are doing but little thinning this year, will have the kind of fruit to "fill the bill," said County Fruit Inspector G. R. Castner in discussing fruit prospects last Thursday with W. K. Newell, president of the State Board of Horticulture, who was in the city to look over the local situation.

Mr. Newell says that the crop of all the Northwest, except in Wenatchee, is going to be lighter than that of last season. The estimates of some of the market men, however, he says, place the crop there at a greater figure this year than last.

At present it is impossible to make accurate estimates of Hood River Valley. The Union, however, is sending out its estimate blanks to the growers and by the middle of September, when they are all returned, a correct set of figures can be reached. No definite conclusions as to the prices for the coming season can yet be arrived at; for no purchases will be made until after the meeting of the International Fruitbuyers' Association at Detroit, August 9-11. All fruit men, however, say that the year is going to be profitable one for the Northwestern grower.

The apple crop of the United States this season is now estimated at about $28,630,000 barrels as compared with $23,825,000 barrels last year, according to figures compiled by the Fruit Trade Journal and the latest Government reports. The season in the East will be from ten days to two weeks earlier, while that of the West will be two weeks later than last year.

It is too early to learn the exact amount of commercial apples that will be produced, as the foliage of the trees in some of the leading sections is still so dense that it is impossible to see and to accurately estimate the quantity of growing fruit. Although opinions differ as to the approximate output, the consensus of belief in all quarters is that the crop of Washington will be light and that the quality of all other varieties will be far superior to that of last year's product.

Eastern growers having finally awakened to a realization of the fact that the Darwinian theory of the survival of the fittest applies to apples as well as to animate things gave greater attention this year to spraying and to scientific methods of cultivation than ever before. This is particularly true of western New York, where the crop is expected to aggregate 3,700,000 barrels or about 500,000 barrels in excess of last year's output.

The Hudson River Valley crop is estimated at from 25 to 50 per cent normal. The drop has been very heavy, not only in this section, but in several districts of western New York. What the crop lacks in size, however, may be compensated for in quality, and the outlook for very desirable fruit throughout the State is promising.

The New England States are expected to produce a little over 3,000,000 barrels divided as follows: Vermont, 474,300; Massachusetts, 402,700; Rhode Island, 144,000; Connecticut, $515,000; $880,500 New Hampshire, $524,500.

The West Virginia crop promises to equal, if not exceed, that of 1910, and the latest figures obtained show the output of commercial fruit from the State this year will amount to at least 6,000,000 barrels. Pennsylvania will make a creditable showing with over 2,900,000 barrels of 400,000 barrels in excess of last year's output; Ohio will have 1,940,000; Illinois, 1,936,000; Michigan, 1,774,000; Kentucky, 1,030,000; Iowa, 931,000; Delaware, 125,500; Maryland, 28,500; Virginia, 287,500; Wisconsin, 634,000; Arkansas, 251,000; Missouri, 44,500; Kansas, 116,000; Indiana, 693,000, and Tennessee, 725,000.

WILL CLOSE SEASON IF FIRES START

The open season for hunting deer as well as a number of other animals and game birds, began August 1, and State Forester F. A. Elliott has his ear to the ground for reports of forest fires started through the carelessness of hunters. Every year a great many fires are caused by sportsmen leaving their campfires unextinguished, and thoughtlessly dropping lighted matches, cigars and cigarettes as they travel through the forest in pursuit of game.

It will probably be news to many people of Oregon to learn that the Forest Fire Law, which went in to effect February 24, empowers the Governor to declare a closed season for the shooting of wild birds and animals of any kind. The law covering this point is as follows:

"Whenever, or wherever, during an open season for the hunting of any kind of game in this State, it shall appear to the Governor upon the showing of the State Forester that by reason of extreme drought the use of firearms or fire by hunters is liable to cause forest fires, he may, by proclamation, suspend the open season and make it a closed season for the shooting of wild birds and animals of any kind for such time as he may designate and during the time so designated all provisions of law relating to closed seasons or game shall be in force."

"It is, of course, not my intention to urge the enforcement of this provision unless it becomes absolutely necessary in order to prevent destruction of forest property," said Forester Elliott in commenting upon the above extract. "If any action is taken depends entirely upon the behavior of the hunters themselves. However, just as soon as this office receives reports that fires are being started through the carelessness of hunters, I shall immediately present the facts to the Governor and recommend that a closed season be proclaimed. The Governor is heartily in favor of this plan and has assured me that he stands ready to issue such proclamations should conditions warrant it. This matter, as I see it, is entirely in the hands of the hunters, for as long as they exercise due precaution while in the forest I still, of course, have no objection to their taking action. It would be an excellent plan for every hunter to familiarize himself with the Oregon Forest Fire Law, copies of which will be sent upon application to this office."

Glavis May Accept Position.

A dispatch from San Francisco says that Louis R. Glavis, the conservation expert who, while in the employ of the interior department, offered testimony which ultimately resulted in Secretary Richard A. Ballinger's retirement from the cabinet, has been offered the position of joint secretary of the conservation commission of California and the conservation board of control. Glavis is in San Francisco and undoubtedly will accept, according to former Governor George C. Pardee, who is a member of the commission.

Mr. Glavis is the owner of ranch lands near White Salmon and has been there this spring developing them. "A thing of beauty and a joy forever," Harley-Davidson Motorcycle at McDonalds.
