A TOAST.

YE have drunk, O my friends, to the victors;
Ye have toasted the valiant and strong,
To the great of the earth ye have drunk in your mirth,
To the wise you have lifted your song.
It is well—they are worthy, my brother,
As aught that the firmament spans,
But I pledge you a health to the others—
A health to the "also rans."

To the men who went down in the struggle,
To the runners who finished unplaced,
To the weak and the young, the unknown,
The unused,
The deprived, the oppressed, the disgraced,
Ye are blooded, developed, completed;
They were bred without stamina, class,
Tie to them, the surpassed, the defeated,
I bow as I drain my glass.

Who are ye that should dare to reject them?
Do ye know what the handicaps weighed?
Did ye suffer the pain, run the race, stand the strain,
That ye scoff at the pace that they made?
It may be they ran overweighted,
It may be they were left at the post,
Far or near, 'tis to them, the ill fated,
I bow as I drink my toast.

They have lost; they are ill; they are weary,
Ye have won; ye are well; ye are strong.
By the drops that they bled, by the tears
That they shed,
By your mirth, by your wine, by your song,
By all that has ever helped to sweeten
Your lives, by your hopes, by your plans,
I pledge you the health of the beaten,
The health of the "also rans."

At the Wrong Door.

Wandering Willy—Couldn't you please let me have some cold vittles, ma'am?
Mrs. Hussey—Cold vittles! Do you think that this is a delicatessen store?

As to Honesty.

The man who would not trust anybody else gives himself a poor recommendation.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Used to Slot Machines.

The matinee performance was about half over when a distracted looking woman with a curly haired youngster of six sought out the man in the box office.
"There are boxes on your chairs in there," she began, "and they say drop a nickel in and get a box of candy."
"Yes, I see," asserted the man in the box office.
"Well," she continued indignantly, "I dropped a nickel in for my little girl."
"And couldn't you get the candy?" queried the box office man. "Wait, I'll see if we can get it out."
"Oh, yes," answered the woman, "I got the candy, all right, but I couldn't get the nickel out."
And to the ticket man at least this remark furnished a more dramatic moment than any in the play.—Louisville Times.

Very Considerate.

"I suppose, Jennie, you wouldn't want to go to the concert Wednesday in your old hat?"
"You dear thing! I couldn't possibly think of showing myself in it."
"What?"
"That's what I thought, so I"—
"Bought only one ticket to the concert."—Meggendorfer Blatter.

Fortified.

"Does your wife do the cooking on the day the mail goes out?"
"Oh, yes."
"How does that suit you?"
"It doesn't bother me any. I always get a good meal just before I go home."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Motto For Your Wall.

In idleness many discouragements lurk. The very best way to kill time is to work.—Life.

Not His.

"Do you obey the Bible injunction to love your neighbor?"
"I tried to, but she wouldn't let me."
—Houston Post.

Astronomy.

There is a new world out in space. Just being made of stary stuff. Why should this fret the human race? The one we have is good enough.

AT THE GATE.

St. Peter Quizzes American Wife and Gives Her Something to Do.

"NEXT" called St. Peter.
A tall, comely woman arose from the bench and came forward gracefully. She was dressed rather for style than for comfort. Her clothes rustled vulgarly, and her hair was manifestly different from what God intended it to be.
"Name, please?"
"I am the American wife."
"Are you sure?"
"Here is my marriage certificate."
"I mean are you sure you have been a wife?"
"As to that, I—"
"What do you understand the qualifications of a wife to be?"
"To take charge of the household and—"
"And do as little as possible in it, eh?"
"But you could not expect me to do the heavy work, could you?"
"You expected other women to do the heavy work?"
"Servants! They are a different class."
"And you were peevish when they didn't do it just so."
"But—"
"And you were always complaining that things weren't going right."
"Let me—"
"And when your husband came home at night he had to hear all your little ailments, physical, mental, domestic and social."
"But don't you—"
"Your idea all the time being to divorce yourself?"
"Not divorce!"
"From real usefulness of all kinds in order that you might engage in the most trifling occupations."
"Don't you think a woman should have some pleasure in life?"
"Sitting around the bridge table or at the matinee and eating rich food until you got fat and then haunting beauty doctors until you got thin—wasn't that your highest ideal of pleasure?"
"I went to clubs and to church."
"To show your clothes."
"I had children."
"But you found it a terrible nuisance to take care of them."
"I could afford to hire nurses and governesses."
"But you couldn't afford to give them any of your own very valuable time."
"But my husband didn't want me to work myself to death."
"No, of course not. It is no better to work yourself to death than to loaf yourself to death. But, after all, your husband has nothing to do with it. We'll deal with him separately. You had your own life to live. His being foolish doesn't excuse you."
The American wife burst into tears as she saw her chance of heaven fading away.
"Here, none of that," commanded St. Peter. "Tears have no effect on us." Then he turned to his clerk. "Clerk, give this lady a gingham apron and set her to work peeling potatoes and other odd jobs. Let me see her again in about six months."—Ellis O. Jones in Life.

The Young Man's Tact.

The man who was having his picture taken in the photograph gallery was an innocent listener to this conversation between two young ladies on the other side of the screen:
"You know, Kate, I sometimes wear a long curl hanging down the back of my neck."
"Yes."
"Well, when Phil was calling on me the other evening he asked me if he might have that curl, and I jokingly said yes. Before I knew what he was about he had taken a little pair of scissors out of his pocket and clipped it off close to my head."
"Why, the idea! Didn't that make you furious?"
"Not for the smallest fraction of a second. I thought it was splendid of him that he didn't seize it and pull it off."—Youth's Companion.

Protest.

"What we want," said the agitator, "is to get away from the tyranny of money."
"That's right," replied the ball player. "And it ought to start with a rule against fines by the umpire."—Washington Star.

Both Wanted.

"Ha!" shouted the rich man, peering cautiously over the stairway. "I want you!"
"Well," chuckled the burglar, reaching for the silver, "I'm at your service, sir."—Columbian Jester.

And They Turned Him Down.

"I'm afraid I can't give you any work. We're hiring about all the men we can use here now."
"I know, sir, but you'd never notice the difference in the little amount I'd do."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

A Road to Discovery.

If there wasn't any such thing as running for office some people would never know how unpopular they are.—Acheson Globe.

A Long Time to Wait.

When cows and pigs begin to fly And every robin wears a fez The people who make profits by maintaining public nuisances May have the common decency to be so overcome by shame That they will voluntarily Refuse to operate the same.

SAN FRANCISCANS WILL VISIT OREGON

One or possibly two special loads of San Francisco boosters will invade Hood River and Astoria in about two weeks to fire a few rounds of ammunition glorifying the great 1915 Pacific Exposition. So says Frank Lowry, a good roads advocate of California, who is the forerunner of the 300 five-wires who will be in Hood River on the excursions. Lowry is an official delegate to the highway convention which met in Portland Friday.

"Things are humming along down in San Francisco now since the site of the big exposition has been decided upon," said Lowry Friday morning. "The great boulevard which will connect Golden Gate Park and Harbor View, has already been started. The contractors are busy and the landscape gardeners are planting the trees that will skirt the famous drive."

It has been decided to have all the jinks, stunts, hilarity and concessions at Harbor View, while all the permanent buildings and other features of lasting character will be erected in Golden Gate, China and Japan will erect permanent buildings in which their exhibits will be housed during the exposition.

Call for Bids.

The board of directors of the Pine Grove school district No. 7, desires sealed bids for the painting of the school building and tinting the walls of the school rooms, said building containing about 400 yards of 2 coats exterior work, and 2 coat trimmings. The board reserves the right to reject any or all bids. For specifications see C. K. Benton, clerk.
