LOCATION IDEAL SAYS GOODENOUGH

LARGE AUDIENCE HEARS ADDRESS

A. H. Goodenough Gives History of Paper Industry - Address Illustrated by Lantern Slides Made by Speaker.

"In 1905," said W. H. Goodenough, addressing the citizens of the city at the Commercial club Tuesday night, "forty three per cent of all the water power developed in the United States was used by pulp and paper mills. The latest trade directories show 733 firms operating 266 paper and 240 pulp mills, representing an invested capital of over $225,000,000, employing upward of 100,000 laborers and producing approximately a product of 4,000,000 tons annually." However Mr. Goodenough stated that as yet not a single paper mill manufacturing finer qualities of writing paper had been established on the Pacific Coast. All of the paper of this kind is shipped in from the East and Middle West. "The greater part of this finer writing paper," he said, "is made of old rags and scrap paper, old newspapers and magazines. All of this material goes to waste out here. In the East and Middle West all of these old rags and scraps are made use of."

"The Pacific coast needs a paper mill to make its finer writing paper," continued Mr. Goodenough, "and to utilize some of the water if its pure streams and ideal water power sites. I have been to a number of cities since I have been on the coast just to look for paper mill sites. However, I have never seen a better location for such an industry than right here at Hood River. You have the water as pure as any place in the world and any amount of power can be developed."

A large audience, composed of both men and women, listened to Mr. Goodenough with interest. In the course of his lecture, which was illustrated with lantern slides, showing scenes of some of the larger paper mills of the country, he demonstrated how paper was made by hand, making several sheets before the audience. The scenes depicted by the lantern slides showed every form of paper making, from the old hand processes down to the most modern machinery. Mr. Goodenough has spent almost his entire life in the paper business, and just before coming here was manager of one of the largest mills in the west. Pictures of this mill were shown Tuesday night. Mr. Goodenough is what one might call a skilled amateur photographer. All of the photographs as well as the slides shown by him Tuesday night were made by himself.

At the beginning of his lecture he gave a short history of the making of paper. "The Chinese," he said, "were the first to make paper in the world from fibres. In the second century they used for raw materials the inner bark of trees, such as the mulberry, bamboo, rags and rice straw. In China, paper is used for various purposes such as handkerchiefs, napkins, articles of clothing and twine. A certain quantity is often secured to their wives in their marriage contracts, showing that the Chinese consider paper indispensable."

"The knowledge of the art was communicated by the Chinese to the Hindus and Arabs, about the eighth century, and was carried into Spain by the Moors in 1097, from Spain to France in 1290, Germany 1312, England 1310. In 1680 John Rittenhausen, a native of Holland, put the first paper mill in America, at Roxboro, Pennsylvania. The paper was first made in the fourteenth century. The oldest paper made of cotton, of which a record is known, is a deed of King Roger, of Sicily, in the year 1102. Since then machine made paper has supplanted hand made paper."

During the eighteenth century, (chloride of lime for bleaching not being known) rags were sorted for their colors, the color of the rag determining the color of the paper.

THIRD TERM POLICY FINDS OPPOSITION

That the policy of permitting the third term policy for any president is contrary to all precedents of the past history of the country and contrary to the unwritten law, is the declaration of W. H. Ayer, chairman of the Taft Club of Multnomah county. Mr. Ayer, who regards it as a patriotic duty to combat the third term policy, points to the following facts of American history as warrants for calling on the citizenship for opposing the third term:

The House of Representatives in reply to Washington's farewell address made a striking declaration: "For our country's sake, for the sake of Republican liberty, it is our earnest wish that your example may be the guide of your successors, and this after being the ornament and safeguard of the present age become the patrimony of our descendants."

Jefferson followed the example of Washington. Many times he put on record his approval of the limitation. On January 6, 1805, he wrote to his friend Taylor chairman of the Taft Club the example of voluntary retirement after eight years. I shall follow it. And a few more precedents will oppose the obstacle of habit to anyone after a while who shall endeavor to extend his term.

Again, on June 7, 1807, he wrote to Mr. Weaver: "If some period be not fixed, either by the Constitution or by practice, to the services of the First Magistrate, in other, though nominally elective, will, in fact, be for life, and that will soon degenerate into an inheritance."

Perhaps the most striking utterance is the following which found in the Kansas Republican Platform of 1874: "The unwritten law enacted by the example of the father of his country in declining a re-election to a third term is as controlling as though it were incorporated in the National Constitution and ought to never be violated."

The House of Representatives passed the following resolution on December 15, 1875, by a vote of 233 to 18: Resolved: That, in the opinion of this House, the precedent established by Washington and other presidents of the United States in retiring from the presidential office after their second term has become by universal consent, a part of our republican system of government and that any departure from this time-honored custom would be unwise, unpatriotic, and fraught with peril to our free institutions. President Roosevelt (1904): On the fourth of March next I shall have served three and a half years, and these three and a half years constitute my first term. The wise custom which limits the president to two terms regards the substance and not the form, and under no circumstance will I be a candidate for or accept another nomination.

DANCE OF SHRINERS MERRIEST OF YEAR

No merrier event has ever been participated in in Hood River than the dance of the Hood River Mystic Shriner given at the Heilbronner hall Friday evening. Every fleeting moment was filled with pleasure from the time the Vogel orchestra, augmented by additional pieces from Portland, played the grand march, when the Shriners appeared in their Fezes, until the strains of "Home Sweet Home" brought the dance to a close. Shrine emblems hung from the tapestries of the room and the front page of the handsome program bore the impression of the Scimitar and Crescent as did the rankin that was given to each guest, when the dainty luncheon was being served at the tables arranged to form a huge crescent. One of the features of the program was that every dance bore an Arabic name.

Between the dances the guests of the Shriners did not lack for entertainment. A few "All the Same Gridiron Club" stunts were given by the moral members of the mystic order. Truman Butler, M. M. Hill, Harry T. DeWitt and Mayor J. M. Wright, all of whom were called on for speeches, not pleasing their audiences, at the first word of disapproval were ushered to a large cage on the stage. Numerous telegrams were received during the evening. One from president Taft stated that he was decidedly sorry that he was unable to attend the festivities of the Shriners of the Apple City. Teddy Roosevelt wired that his head was in his hat and appealed for votes. Andrew Carnegie said in his telegram: "I have authorized my financial secretary to give five dollars to the Woman's club for use in building the library and a like amount toward constructing sanitary garbage cans, provided John D. and Geo. D. come through with like amounts "Dixie Land" was sung very sweetly by a graphophone. W. E. Sherman, doing the "pantomimes" Dan Epping, as Billie Bryan, sang "O You Beautiful Doll."

CALCIUM LIGHTS TO SHINE ON CELEBRITIES

When the curtain goes up tonight after that overture, the tune of which sounds suspiciously like the Mysterious Rag, the audience, which will fill the Heilbronner hall, will be in fit trim to enjoy those gems of the vaudeville and minstrel stage which will be rolled out to us by such celebrities as Capt. McCan and Dad Epping. Lew Dockstader has heard of the event and has wired that he will be present. Dockstader's minstrel has been reported to be on the decline. They will shine next season; for he is coming with a full purse and on business bent to carry away the local stars.
