FOLLOW HOOD RIVER WAY, IS ADVICE

(From the Corvallis Daily Gazette)

Benton county has a wonderful future ahead of it if the landowners and fruit growers of this section will but get out and learn how things are done elsewhere. Benton county has much fine soil and a climate unquestionably superior for the production of fruit, but what we need here is inspiration to plant more and to care for what we plant in exactly the proper way. We need new methods, and with up-to-date methods in the past we would now be far ahead of some sections that have great reputations and are rolling in wealth.

So says Grocer E. D. Horning, who has just returned from a trip to Hood River. Mr. Horning spent two or three days there with his brother-in-law, C. D. Thompson, and had opportunity to travel over much of that fine valley. What he saw was a revelation to him, and he returns enthusiastic over the possibilities here. He wants others to go and see and then come back here and make Benton the paradise it should be.

"While we have wonderful advantages and much which one may justly be proud of," says Mr. Horning, "the Hood River valley is a veritable garden spot, and the great garden looks like it was cared for by a landscape artist. As far as one can see there is nothing but orchards and vineyards in perfect condition. There is order and cleanliness, the weed is scarcely known, the ground is in perfect condition and each tree is more beautiful than the other in its perfection."

"And this wonderful development is not confined to any small section," continued Mr. Horning. "It's the entire valley, and the orchards are climbing farther and farther up the hillsides. The surprising thing to me is that so much has been done in so little time. Ten years ago, Hood River was scarcely on the map for fruit. Today the world knows of Hood River fruit. Nine years ago my brother-in-law's twenty acres was in timber and heavy brush. This year he will have 2,000 boxes of beautiful fruit, and he says this is only about three-quarters of a crop. The work of thinning fruit in the Hood River orchards furnishes employment to a large number of people, and from the beginning of the year to the end the orchards and fruit are cared for in such a way that the payroll for help is always a large one. Benton county could do as much if it would; it only requires faith and up-to-date methods. I can now begin to appreciate more what is being done here to promote commercial fruit culture. Each move should be encouraged. It means wealth for this section."

Mr. Horning says Hood River trees are so laden that the limbs are either tied up or propped. Speaking of Mr. Thompson, he says he is trying an experiment with dwarf trees. He has 45 on a plot about 40 feet square. The trees were planted this spring and one produced 17 apples; others bore almost as heavily. All but one apple of each variety has now been picked from the trees. Mr. Horning enjoyed his visit immensely.

Fins, Furs, and Feathers.

For several weeks past several big grey rats have been sojourning in the city. They are large, pompous fellows and have ways about them like those of Bull Moose politicians. The old house cats of a number of homes in town have met the visitors and lost fierce combats. However, one of the rodents, entering the kitchen of a home last week by means of a hole beside the pipe of the heating plant leading up from the basement, ate so much that he was unable to move his exit and paid the penalty of death for his robbery.

In the early morning one of the children of the family was the first to discover the rat as he ran from behind a kitchen cabinet into a corner behind a larder. "Oh, papa," the little fellow cried, "come quick. There's a sheep in the kitchen." The father strode into the kitchen rubbing his eyes, thinking the youngster was making him the victim of some joke. He was led to the corner and as the rat made a dash for the open door way, he seized a piece of stove wood and the Golden Bowl of the visiting rodent was broken.

William Stewart, who tried for big fellows in the West Fork Sunday, declared that the trout are pretty well cleared of the larger fish. "They are all gone," he says, "but I didn't get them." Mr. Stewart caught three Sunday.

C. A. Case spent Sunday on the East Fork. He says there are but few fish in that fork of the river.

Another shipment of trout arrived from Game Warden Finley Tuesday. The minnows were taken immediately to the tributary streams of the main Hood river and released. This allotment contained about 200,000 fish. Game Warden Finley was here Monday on his way to the Cap Inn. He was accompanied by J. Pierce, an ornithologist from Massachusetts. Mr. Finley says that he will set aside a number of Silver-side trout for distribution in Lost Lake, if some means of getting them there is provided. Secretary Scott says he will find a way to have the fish transported.

Mr. Finley also declared that he had a number of China pheasants to be turned loose in Hood River county. These will be secured by private individuals through the Commercial club. Those releasing the pheasants on their farms must allow them to be made game reserves until 1915, when it will be lawful to shoot pheasants. Chas. Hall, P. S. Davidson and a number of other Hood River citizens have already applied for pheasants.

Burnette E. Duncan, who has been spending several weeks this summer at Tillamook, returned last week. The fishing in many streams that flow down from the hills there is fine, Mr. Duncan declares. "I regret that I did not take my automobile with me; for it is possible to travel a great distance up the rivers inland in a machine," he says.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray E. Scott and their visitor, Miss Kate Pierson, of Indianapolis, are spending a short time on Lost Lake.

COOPER MORRIS AIDS PAROLED PRISONERS

W. Cooper Morris, convicted Portland banker, who is working with the convict gang on the Shell Rock road, near Wyeath, has assumed the role of friend to convicts, and is offering his Wenatchee fruit ranch as a haven of refuge and work to paroled men and released convicts.

Already he has caused three men to be sent to the ranch. Two of these are paroled prisoners, who are still there. The third was not satisfactory to Morris. He was a discharged convict who had served his time. Believing the man would have difficulty in finding employment, Morris gave him position on the ranch, where he stayed a few days and then disappeared. This has not shattered the former banker's faith in his plan, however, as it is understood he will ask the prison authorities to send other paroled men to his farm when they are in need of employment.

Morris is now in charge of the commissary department on the road work. At first he was on the pick and shovel gang a surveyor's gang, and later the mantle of a discharged commissary fell upon his shoulders.

The Fire-bug and The East Wind

(E. T. Allen)
"No, I'll not burn my slash this spring."
The moss back logger said,
"I'll trust to God and luck again;
Expense is what I dread."

"It's time to hit the trail again,"
The careless camper said,
And left his little fire blaze
Within its leafy bed.

"I'll light another cigarette,"
The idle toker said,
And chucked his old snipe in the brush
One end still glowing red.

"Let's punch the screen out of the stack,"
The donkey fireman said,
And so he did and all the sparks
Sailed blithely overhead.

"Come on, we'll dump our ashes now,"
The railroad trainman said,
The train soon fanned them far and wide,
As on its way it sped.

"Good time to fire my slashing now,"
The thrifty farmer said,
And touched it off without a thought
Of how far it might spread.

"I think I'll blow an hour or two,"
The restless east wind said,
Then liked it so he changed his mind
And blew a week instead.

"Millions in lives and timber lost,"
The newspapers next said,
What made those fires all start a once,
We wondered as we read.

"It wasn't us, it was that wind,"
The fool in chorus said,
So they're alive and loose this year,
—We hope the wind is dead.

A well known Des Moines woman after suffering miserably for two days from bowel complaint, was cured by one dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. For sale by all dealers.

Just Little Stories

A number of Hood River citizens are fond of a good story, and little bits of humorous incidents are often related that are worth remembering. The following two have been heard during the past week.

Not long ago two Irish laborers shuffled off this mortal coil and proceeded to the infinite realms of eternity. One of them had been a good man and the doors entering the golden streets were opened to him by St. Peter. The other was welcomed into the midst of hell by Satan. After a month's sojourn at the places of their journeys' ends, the following telephone—it is understood they have installed the automatic system between the upper and lower regions—conversation between them was overheard by the Recording Angel:

Mike (in Heaven)—Hello, Pat, it sounds good to hear ye. How're ye enjoyin' ye self? Pat ye doin'?

Pat (in Hell)—An the devil a bite if it ain't Mike. Yes, I'm havin' a grand time. I spend about two hours a day shovelin' coal an' sit around the rest of the time smokin' me pipe and swappin' lies with the byes. An ye're in havin' ye say, I suppose ye're enjoyin' ivry luxury of the golden strates.

Mike—Pat, Pat, I have to worruk 22 hours out of the 24 up here, swappin' the golden strates. Min are viry scarce up here.

An ancient dorky, who had moved to New York desired that one of the ultra fashionable churches admit him as a letter given him by his country congregation. The fastidious minister was opposed to taking the old white haired fellow, but not desiring to offend him, advised him to pray earnestly to the Lord and ask his opinion about the matter.

The old man failed to return and the minister was relieved of a burden. In about two weeks he saw the old fellow. To satisfy his curiosity he asked: "Well, you don't seem to desire affiliation with our church any longer?"

"No, sah," was the reply. "When I axed de Lawd about it," he said, "Now Jaspass Johnain, if you gets in dat church, you'll be doin' moahn I been able to do fah de past ten yeahs."

"Six bottles of Electric Bitters," he writes, "did more to give me new strength and good appetite than all other stomach remedies I used." So they help everybody. Something You Should Know About Substitution

If you wanted to buy oak lumber and the man delivered yellow pine, you would know the difference.

If you wanted to buy silk and they sent you calico, you would have no trouble in seeking the substitution.

It is not so easy, however, with medicines. A great many medicines look alike and taste alike, BUT THEY DON'T ACT ALIKE. Just think this over the next time you want medicines. Remember that at our store you can absolutely rely on every drug we sell. The difference between buying medicines and merchandise is the difference between knowledge and belief. You know the one but you have to believe in the other. You will be absolutely safe when you put your belief in us.
