THE NEW WATER SYSTEM

As another obstacle is removed from the path of the administration in its efforts to furnish the citizens of this city with sufficient and ample pure water for domestic use, it would seem that the realization of their efforts was close at hand. The opinion of the eminent bond authorities of New York City that the bonds are legal, removes any valid objection of the bond buyers against their purchase. If no other obstacle is put in the way of the administration, either unwittingly or maliciously, by those who are interested in providing this city with plenty of good water, or by those who are opposed to it, the money will be in Hood River and construction begun on the work in about sixty days. The opinion is very pleasing to the population and gratifying to the city attorney, as a vindication of the persistent efforts of the former to prevail in what they have contended was the right course, and of the latter's legal ability. That attorneys for former bidders for the bonds have found technical objections to the bonds being legally issued, gives rise to a suspicion of quibbling over unimportant matters, or that there is a "nigger in the woodpile."

The talk of now discontinuing all work that has been done and calling a new election to bring in the lava spring at the Woodworth place near Parkdale, will set us back at least two years in the acquisition of a new water system. While the advocates of this idea may be sincere in their views, it would seem to be ill advised at this time to "wipe the slate clean" and start all over. It has been settled beyond all doubt that the water of the Tucker spring now owned by the city is pure and sufficient for a city twice its size.

Even should the lava spring be thought desirable despite the heavy cost of bringing it in, if it can be secured, the money spent in going to the Tucker spring would not be wasted, as the pipe line would simply have to be extended to the upper country. Let us get the Tucker spring first, and get it now.

APPLE GRADING MACHINE DEMONSTRATED

The new apple cleaning and grading machine invented by G. R. Porter, of The Dalles, is on exhibition this week in the warehouse of the Davidson Fruit Co. In the past two days a large number of growers have examined the machine and all are well pleased with its operation. It is the opinion of many that it is the best and most perfect machine of its kind that has been put on the market.

The machine requires but a half horse power motor to run it, is simple, with but few parts to look after or get out of order, and the principles of mechanism are practical for the work intended. Two men can, with this machine, wipe and grade thoroughly about 2,000 boxes of apples per day, while the capacity can be increased to 2500 with a little practice.

The apples are placed in a canvas apartment and rolled onto a carrying belt lined with soft felt, where the apples pass through a set of three revolving brushes, one of which travels in an opposite direction from the other two, so that the fruit is given a rolling motion and every part comes in contact with the brushes. The brushes gradually force the apples out into a series of cups, the tops of which are protected by elastic brushes. The lower ends of the cups are compressed by a spring, which is gradually released by the encircling belt passing under a conical roller. This manner the apple is carried along until it reaches the compartment of its size, when the opening in the bottom of the cup has become enlarged enough to allow it to fall into the canvas apartment. Absolute accuracy is obtained in sizing the fruit, each compartment containing apples of one size.

The brushes wipe the fruit so thoroughly that not a speck is left upon them, doing a much better job than hand wiping. An examination made with a glass fails to show the slightest blemish upon the fruit.

R. H. Weber, who is heavily interested in Hood River orchards, as well as at Mosier and The Dalles, has taken up the matter of financing the invention and placing it upon the market, being now sales manager of the company. Arrangements have been made to manufacture the machines in Portland for the present.

The machine will be taken to the fair at North Yakima next month for exhibition to the apple growers of Washington.

Hood River Products

The following is a letter recently clipped from the Oregonian:

"To the Editor,—I read with a great deal of interest an article in the Oregonian on tomatoes. You do not have to go to Tennessee to see tomato vines six feet high. We have some six feet and still growing. They were planted late so do not know the size of the tomatoes. They are full of blossoms and young tomatoes from one to three inches in diameter. We also have sunflowers ten feet high, and we have had lettuce eight inches to ten inches in diameter, and blackberries two inches long. Our soil is twenty feet deep, and I am sure could grow anything besides apples. I am green at the business, being a paper manufacturer and was never on a ranch a day in my life till we came here a few years ago. We have rubber from one to one and a half inches across and sixteen inches long, with leaves two feet across. What could an expert do with such soil and a market?"

W. H. Goodenough.

Sky and Ozone

Open-air beds—wind, rain, fog and mosquito proof—are to be installed in the Hotel St. Francis, San Francisco, out of deference to the astropolitans.

Health is wealth to the astropolitans, who have been defined by some dyspeptic pessimist as ozonaniacs.

Ozone at any cost is one of the cardinal tenants in the creed of the astropolitans.

The fresh air chambers in the St. Francis will be among the most luxuriously appointed apartments in the hotel.

The fresh-air beds are to be in the form of davenport-like chairs, in the interior of the apartment. A last-mentioned astropolitans, who are astropolitans!!! Half of the davenport slips through the stone wall of the building, a screen let down over it like a mosquito net over a camp bed, and the astropolitans watch the twinkling lights of the city until they fall into sleep. A balcony-like arrangement will prevent any astropolitans who are astropolitans from trying to step down from the 'teenth floor and wander off into the night. The arrangement is proof against everything from nightmares to porch-climbers.

AUTOMOBILES

The Pacific Highway

The automobile owners of Central Oregon, Wasco county and in Hood River are coming to realize the importance of securing the Columbia river boulevard. It will form a part of the Pacific Highway, or should, for it is the most feasible route between the north and south. The lower Columbia cities are urging the building of the route from Portland to the sea. In time all of these ways will come. No doubt, the people of the Willamette and Rogue River valleys will to a certain extent oppose the name, "Pacific Highway," being applied to the interior route. However, when one approaches a man with an argument of common sense and reason, he is generally listened to.

To open a road that will be passable down through the Willamette and Rogue River valley countries will take millions of dollars. As soon as the road is opened up, the Columbia road is already open. It is a natural highway, already built. The motorists of the North and South coast want to travel now. They don't want to wait until the days of flying machines for a way. It may be too late for enjoyment then.

Then the route up the Columbia is a part of an east and west as well as north and south transcontinental route. The canyon of the Columbia is the only natural passage cleaving the Cascades. The American Locomotive Co. is now sending a big truck across the continent. The machine is just out of Montana. It is probable that it would cross east Oregon and come down the Columbia over the Columbia river boulevard, if it were open. However, the manager of the company declares that he wants to use his own wheels on the trip and as the car reaches The Dalles it will turn south through central Oregon and go to California.

That there is an urgent necessity for the completion of an auto fine truck to the Dalles river department and that steps should be taken to sound the city council and business men on their attitude was the consensus of opinion expressed by Fire Chief Mike Curran and delegates from every company in the city at the regular meeting of that body last week.

Young Girl Climbs Adams
Tired, embarrassed and footsore, a party of 15 returned from Mount Adams, Wash., last week from Mount Adams. Nine of the party, including five women, reached the top. Lucile Brown, of Portland, was one of the first to plant a foot on the summit. She is but 13 years of age.

Miss Helen Clark, of San Francisco, was the only one of the party to encounter a mishap. In a dangerous fall she received a bruise on her head which stiffened the limb and made walking difficult, but in spite of this mishap, she reached the top.

Fins, Furs, and Feathers.
The homestead of Clarence Fosberg is on an eminence above the point where the Lake Branch crosses into the West Fork of Hood River. This region is beautiful beyond description. However, it is wild and decidedly lonesome, except during the summer months when many campers visit its haunts. Mr. and Mrs. Fosberg often have dozens of the wilds for visitors. Bears come from the woods and sniff hungrily around the house, when they are cooking. Wild cats and coyotes are often seen. Deer sometime come into the clearing they have made.

Recently, while Mr. Fosberg was away at work, a big, grizzly bear came and knocked at the door. Mr. Fosberg, thinking that it was some human lifted the latch and brought a temptation to push by, when she slammed the door, catching one of its hairy paws. This infuriated the animal and a thrilling battle ensued for several moments. However, the plucky little lady conquered. But the maddened bear then sought an entrance through the window. A cellar door was open and he entered there, and the woman and her children could hear him hurrying bags of potatoes and boxes of apples. But he found that the fruit was good to his taste and they could hear him crunching it. Satisfying himself with the apples, he seemed to be appeased and the frightened household was made happy when he was seen strolling away later, in the shades of the forests.
