"Good Form" to Eat Apples
The Portland Rotary club, others concurring, hereby amends the social code to permit the eating of apples in public at any time or place.
By the above resolution introduced at the meeting of the Rotary club and referred to the resolutions committee it is hoped to let down the bars of convention that hitherto have forced the lover of the luscious apple to yearn with appetite unappeased, and to bring about a glorious state in which men, women and children may munch the Oregon apple unrestrained at any time in any place without fear of treading upon the tender toes of "good form," says the Oregonian.
The resolution is led off with two emphatic "whereases," one holding that the apple is pre-eminently the national fruit of America and the other that it is good on all occasions.
