MRS. HOWE'S KNOWN THROUGHOUT STATE
The Cottage Farm is the official title of the resort, however, it is most generally known as Mrs. Howe's. It is no infrequent occurrence for a stranger in the city to alight from one of the O. W. R. & N. Co. trains and inquire the way to Mrs. Howe's. And one of the Hood River citizens' most progressive citizens is a woman, Mrs. Alma L. Howe, a wee bit of a woman, who, though the problems of life she has faced have been difficult, has faced them with a courage that among men might envy, and who by her personal-ity and tenacity of purpose has built up a country hotel that is known throughout the northwest. Especially is Mrs. Howe's place well known in Portland, for every year hundreds of tired and ill people come from that city to spend a few weeks at the quiet farm home in the midst of the splendor of the apple valley, the towering peak of Mount Hood looming up on the south and the snow-capped Mt. Adams and a half from the Columbia on clear days.

The Commercial club has been urging the building of a tourist hotel here. The Cottage Farm place may be pointed out as an example of the same institution of that kind may enjoy in this region. However, every one would not have made the success that Mrs. Howe has made. She did not begin her hostelry on any pretentious scale. It was small in the beginning and has grown into the present dimensions. Mrs. Howe now has accommodations for a half hundred guests. In addition to her main house she has a number of cottages grouped around, in these smaller places the children stay when families with children are guests at the farm.

Mrs. Howe came to Hood River 30 years ago last January. She purchased 40 acres of land, partly timbered, a mile and a half from the present town site, which at that time was not laid out. The region was sparsely settled by early pioneers and homesteaders who eked out a bare living; for the profits from orchards was unimagined. A few Indians had their wigwags and dugouts along the Columbia and on the banks of the Hood river. Mrs. Howe had had a training as a nurse and she was a "Little Doctor," whenever any one of her neighbors was unwell, indeed, but few of the pioneer families have known the touch of her sympathetic hand in time of sickness and trouble. She and Dr. Barrett, for whom a large portion of the West Side community has been named, attended the sick of the early days. And Mrs. Howe became a little mother to the Indians. When they ailed she visited their camps and applied remedies to relieve their pains. For many years an old Indian of her home, until her death. The red children of the forests came to her with all of their little petty ills and troubles, and, humanitarian that she is, she listened to their confessions and so advised them that she has won their unending love and respect.

Mrs. Howe has been ill in bed for the past six weeks suffering from a nervous attack. Indeed, throughout her life, because of her hard tasks and a delicate and retiring nature, she has been harassed at intervals by attacks of nerves, as she says. During the recent illness old Indian George has been a daily caller, inquiring after her health. "It is a big sick," he always asks, and daily he performs some ancient Indian rite that he may bring her relief.

Mrs. Howe's first home in the Hood River valley was also the first Hood River valley school house, a little building 17x21 feet. It stood on the Belmont road near the present Ordway place, and was moved, when Mrs. Howe purchased it, to the present site, where it now forms a part of her country hotel. Raising was not profitable in the early days; for the irrigation ditches had not been built and without water the crops that were grown were often poor. Mrs. J. L. Henderson, the mother of Louis A. Henderson, the present city treasurer, was the first teacher in the old school house.

Mrs. Howe soon found, however, that so unprofitable was her ranch in the early days that she removed to Portland, where she became a nurse. With her earnings she was able to pay for her place. Twenty acres of this tract were sold later, and in 1895 Mrs. Howe conceived the idea of establishing a country hotel, not only for the profit she would derive from it but because she would thus be enabled to relieve the suffering of people who desired just a place of quiet in the country.

Since she first entered the venture, the place has been added to and improved each year. It is not a pretentious place, but in the quiet shade of its fruit trees or in the shadow of the giant evergreens that rear themselves in the back yard, one can rest and dream, and refresh, get well. Scores of little children are brought from the city each summer and spend the heated days there in the cool retreat, playing in the sand pits arranged for them. Thomas Lawson was a visitor at Mrs. Howe's year before last. He was delighted with the quiet and privacy of the hostelry. His son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCall, were there last summer.

The houses are surrounded by flowering shrubs that blossom from the first spring days until late autumn. Mrs. Howe has protected the birds and they have come to make their homes in her grounds. Numerous little gaily humming birds dart among the flowers and fight battles with the bumble bees that come to steal the honey from the flowers of which they think themselves the sole owners.

Mrs. Howe has become prominent in local civic matters. She has always been known for her charity and no needy family ever goes in want during the winter months if she finds out their condition. She is a member of the city school board, which during her illness has met at her home.

Mrs. Howe declares that much of her success has been due to the aid of her daughter, who now for the most part has active charge of the Cottage Farm. Miss Hester Howe is a graduate of the local high school and spent two years at the State Normal College.

Every convenience of life has been installed at the Cottage Farm resort. In the early days the water had to be drawn from the well by a hand pump. A wind mill was added later, and now an electric motor operates the water system.

Mrs. Howe's dining room will accommodate from 90 to 100 guests.

Heed the Cough that Hangs On
The seeds of consumption may be the cause, and a cough that hangs on weakens the system. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound checks the cough, heals the inflamed membranes and strengthens the lungs. E. D. Rountree, Stillmore, Ore., says: "Foggy left me a deep-seated, hacking, painful cough. Foley's Honey and Tar completely cured." Chas. N. Clarke

LET DITCH ALONE
MCDONALD'S ADVICE

"If the patrons of the East Fork bonded district will allow the operation of the ditch to remain absolutely in the hands of the superintendent, the service will be bettered and all patrons be enabled to realize the greatest benefits," is the advice of J. W. McDonald, superintendent of the district. Mr. McDonald states that he does not make this criticism in any spirit of unfriendliness, but that he may call to the attention of some of the patrons that they are thoughtless in interfering with the operation of the ditch. Recently a small quantity of water was turned into the ditch for the benefit of orchardists who were spraying. Some one diverted the flow and used it on the United States, with the result that sprayers and their crews were stopped from work for more than a half a day while the superintendent was found.

WHY SHOULDN'T WE EAT APPLES IN PUBLIC

(From Cashmere Bulletin.)
The Portland Ad Club recently passed the following resolution, a copy of which was sent to each club in the United States, with the request that it concur in the resolution:
"Whereas, it is good on all occasions, therefore be it
"Resolved, that the Portland Ad Club, other clubs concurring, hereby amend the social code to permit of the eating of apples in public at any time or place."

Why shouldn't a person eat an apple when he thinks it would taste good? He smokes when he thinks a cigar would taste good and gives one to his friend. Why should he be squeamish about biting into a blushing, odoriferous bunch of goodness called an apple? The gallery god takes his sack of peanuts with him to eat during the play. Did you ever see one take an apple? Why not? Is not an apple as good as a peanut? James and Marjorie sit on the park bench and dip their hands into the same bag of popcorn. Did anyone ever see them courting between bites of an apple? Why not? Don't fresh cut popcorn feed two young 'dream better than apples?"

Even in Cashmere where the best apples in the world are grown, you seldom see an apple eaten. You may see it was an occasion in the store, in the real estate office and a few sometimes in stores, but whoever saw a Cashmerite actually eating an apple on the street? Of course we eat our apples, we can't help it; but we eat them behind closed doors, surreptitiously, as it were, as if they were ashamed of the appetite. To eat some apples is a disgrace, we grant, but to eat a Cashmerite apple at any time or in any place is an act of merit.

We want the whole United States to eat apples; to eat them in season and out of season; to eat them in public and in private and to eat lots of them. The Portland Ad club's resolution is all right. Let the Cashmerite people set the fashion. If it were good form lots of us would keep our side pockets bulging with apples where they would be handy to get at whenever the apple hunger struck us, and that would be several times a day. All of which would help to make apples sell better.

Canning Has Valuable Cow

No one in the valley, perhaps, has a more valuable milk cow than H. A. Canning, of the Oak Grove district. The animal is pure bred Jersey, and her owner sells on an average a two-pound roll of butter each day in addition to keeping his family of wife and six children supplied with all the milk and butter needed. "I was offered $125 cash for the cow several days ago," says Mr. Canning, but I think I would make a poor deal to sell her, for she returns me about $24 per month. The cow has received as payment for a day's work with a team by Mr. Canning when she was a tiny calf. "The neighbors laughed at me when I drove home with the tiny animal," he says, "but now she has won the admiration of all the neighborhood."

Coughs and Consumption

Coughs and colds, when neglected, always lead to serious trouble of the lungs. The wisest thing to do when you have a cold that troubles you is to get a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery. You will get relief from the first dose, and finally the cough will disappear. O. H. Brown, of Muscadine, Ala., writes: "My wife was down in bed with an obstinate cough, and I honestly believe had it not been for Dr. King's New Discovery, she would not be living today." Known for forty-three years as the best remedy for coughs and colds. Price 50c and $1.00. Recommended by Chas. N. Clarke.

Hood River Woman Takes Prize

Mrs. Mabel E. Shrane, of the Seven Oaks ranch, who entered a contest conducted by the Armour Packing Co. for recipes for preparing new dishes, won a prize offered by the packing concern. The recipe of Mrs. Shrane is given below:
A Simple Devil's Food—Two ounces of chocolate, one half cup of boiling water; boil smooth and thick, cool and add one teaspoon of vanilla; cream one cup of sugar and one fourth of Armour's Simon Pure Leaf Lard; add one fourth cup of sour milk in which one level teaspoon of soda has been dissolved, two well beaten eggs, one and one half cups of flour sifted twice with bake in moderate oven; frost with white or chocolate icing.

For Burns, Bruises and Sores

The quickest and surest cure for burns, bruises, boils, sores, inflammation and all skin diseases is Bucklen's Arnica Salve. In four days it cured L. B. Hallin, of Iredell, Tex., of a sore on his ankle which pained him so he could hardly walk. Should be in every house. Only 25c. Recommended by Chas. N. Clarke.

Wind Storm Hurts Fruit

A terrific hot windstorm, which occurred in Tasmania January 13, did incalculable damage to the fruit crop of that colony. In some districts the crop was entirely wiped out, while elsewhere the orchards lost from 40 to 50 per cent of their fruit.

About Substitution

If you wanted to buy oak lumber and the man delivered yellow pine, you would know the difference.
If you wanted to buy silk and they sent you calico, you would have no trouble in seeing the substitution.
It is not so easy, however, with medicine. A great many medicines look alike and taste alike, BUT THEY DON'T ACT ALIKE. Just think this over the next time you want medicines. Remember that at our store you can absolutely rely on every drug we sell. The difference between buying medicines and merchandise is the difference between knowledge and belief. You know the one but you have to believe in the other. You will be absolutely safe when you put your belief in us.
