

Expense Stops When Your Cooking Stops

That is one of the big advantages of the

New Perfection Oil Cook-stove

When you are through cooking you simply turn out the flame. There is no waste of fuel. And yet you can have full heat again when it is wanted, by merely striking a match.

The NEW PERFECTION COOK STOVE is much neater and cleaner than an ordinary range; no dirty fuel; no ashes. Ask your dealer for the New Perfection Stove. It bakes, broils, roasts or toasts.

WASHINGTON SCENERY LURES LOCAL FOLK

Each summer the communities of northwestern Klickitat county become more and more attractive and more and more the goals of Hood River valley motorists, seeking outings in spots made delightful because of their scenic beauties. Many local orchardists and business men having been led to the Camas Prairie country and the Trout Lake valley at the south base of Mount Adams have purchased hay and stock ranches in the district.

One of the favorite routes of the automobile owner is to take the road to Glenwood. On this highway, one is enabled to see the huge fir, thirty-nine feet in circumference, that towers above its fellows about a mile south of Gilmer valley. However, before passing Husum, where the road to Trout Lake turns to the left and leads up the west side of the White Salmon river, the autoist has a wonderful view of the Hood River valley to the south and the Underwood orchard district off to the west. For several miles out of the city of White Salmon the road winds through the most beautiful of the orchards in this district and the many tracts of strawberries, where at this season of the year hundreds of pickers are engaged.

The Gilmer valley corresponds in a way, although it is smaller and less watered, to the Middle Valley of the Hood River district. Here the Mount Adams Orchard Co. has already planted a tract of several hundred acres to apples. The earlier residents devoted their energies, as did those in the Middle Valley, to the raising of hay and stock. Leaving Gilmer the car threads through a dense fir forest and rises to the summit of the divide of the watershed of the White Salmon river. Then the descent into the Camas Prairie country is begun. After one has become accustomed to the rolling lands of the Hood River valley and its rugged border of mountain ranges and forests he is amazed at the great tract of level land that spreads out beneath him, when the Camas valley is first sighted. Hood River people have been going into the Camas Prairie country for years. For the past two years until at present a large acreage of the fertile soil that once formed the bottom of Conboy Lake is owned by local people. B. E. Duncan, of this city, was one of the first of the Hood River men to become attracted to the new region. He saw the possibilities of reclaiming the great area of land that formerly remained under water a great part of the year and he urged the completion of the Camas Prairie drainage system, which has now been completed, its main canal extending across the prairie and laterals reaching off to gather up the waters of the four creeks that formerly spread over the entire area.

Formerly the ranchers there were able to harvest only one crop of wild grass hay each year. Now they can cultivate the fields and plant grain or hay crops which produce bountifully. The wild hay lacked nutriment. It grew so fast in the wet soil that stock failed to fatten on it. Now, however, the grain and hay raised lack none of the qualities that go toward producing excellent beef and butter.

Since the canals of the drainage system were cut the country has shown marked improvement. New houses have been built and new tracts put under the plow. A number of years ago the cream had dropped to such an extent that the ranchers decided to install a cooperative creamery. The valley has more than 400 cows and the creamery is now in operation. The Portland dealers have felt the need of the cream and are again offering inducements in an effort to secure some of the rich product. However, the ranchers do not care to pass through the same experience, resulting from the closing of the cheese factory, and have decided to stick by their creamery.

The Camas valley, as is the Trout Lake valley, is a half mile or more from the big barns. The ranchers store huge quantities of hay each winter, and the hay mows are very large.

No stranger is ever allowed to leave the Camas district, or for that matter the Trout Lake valley, without bearing the plea of the residents for a railroad. A branch line leading out from White Salmon to the district has long been proposed. However, the construction work, because of the steep range of hills that must be crossed, would make the task expensive. It is thought by many that not many years will pass before a branch of one of the main lines of the transcontinental systems will be extended down from the Yakima valley.

The motorist to the Camas country should never fail to travel to the brink of the Klickitat gorge about seven and a half miles northeast of Glenwood. Here the waters of the turbid mountain stream have cut a chasm almost a thousand feet deep. In places the canyon's sides are almost perpendicular. On every hand they are very precipitous. The Klickitat forks at the bottom of this wild gorge into two branches of the cleft extend off in different directions through the forest land. The top of the promontory in the fork of the cleft is jagged and sharp like a teeth for a long distance. A short distance back from the confluence of the streams a giant hole pierces the promontory, reminding one of a window that might have been cut by nature for a Titan monster of prehistoric days.

The road, leading over a new route, from Glenwood to Trout Lake is a little more than 16 miles in length. It has been carefully surveyed and in no place does the grade exceed ten per cent. The stranger is filled with admiration for this wonderful little valley set like a veritable fairyland between the ranges of hills at its feet as he begins to drop down from the summit and as the car, if he is in an automobile, and begins to wind around the graceful curves of the road. No more beautiful journey can be imagined. On every hand appears a galaxy of blossoms of wild flowers. The pink blossoms of wild phlox and the yellow Paint Brush make patches of vivid color. Wild currants shake their deep pink petals in the breezes and Dogwood trees stand everywhere, their boughs glistening white in the sun. And down below stretches the roads of the Trout Lake valley, its fields of wheat, barley, clover and alfalfa. Herds of cows may be seen moving across the dark green pastures. The big red barns loom up beside the white dwellings of the home estates, and the traveler realizes that he is in the land of beauty, peace and plenty.

At the north end of the valley is the Guler hotel, usually the goal of those traveling to the district to fish or to view the wonderful scenery there. Chris Guler, who came to this country

Tips On Titles

A MAN came rushing into our office and wanted an Abstract in a hurry. He seemed to think we kept them on hand and could pass the one he wanted right over to him. It was the first time he had ever required an Abstract. He had an opportunity to make an investment which gave a promise of rich returns. It was an unusual chance. He had no ready money so had gone to his bank to get it by placing a mortgage upon his land. The bank, according to its custom, demanded an Abstract and referred him to us. Now the man had lived on this land. He had paid good money for it. He held a Warranty Deed. He thought it was his. It was, but there was a "cloud upon the Title" which had to be cleared before he could obtain any money upon his land. There were defects in the instruments as recorded which could be remedied only by a decree of the Court. They were necessary, meanwhile the opportunity for the promising investment had passed.

This is not fiction. It is not even exceptional. It is the sort of thing that is occurring repeatedly.

You own land in Hood River County. You intend, some day, to have it covered by an Abstract. Why Not Now? There is nothing to be gained by delay and may be much to lose. It matters not what you think about your land, your title is only as good as the records show. The business of the Abstractor is to give you the record of your title.

Some people seem afraid to enquire into the title to their land. They prefer to play "strich" and try to think there can be nothing the trouble with it. When the day comes, as it surely will, that they must have an Abstract they are disappointed that they have to wait for the Abstractor to do his work. But they can't blame the Abstractor. It takes time to prepare a correct and complete Abstract. Besides there are always other hurry orders ahead which must be finished before new work is begun. It is even more annoying to learn that the title you thought good is imperfect. The trouble may be slight and of a nature which could be readily removed, but still sufficient to cause an exasperating delay at a time when one wishes to make a quick sale or raise money upon a mortgage.

Be wise enough to have your Abstract made NOW, while there is no urgent need for prompt action.

Come in and talk to us about it, we may be able to make a few suggestions of benefit to you.

We have been searching Hood River titles since 1868, and if there is a flaw in the Title we can find it.
