OAK GROVE

Mr. and Mrs. A. Ellis, of Caney, Kans., are here on a summer visit to their son, Guy S. Ellis. This is the elder Ellis' first visit of Oregon and the Hood River region. He reports having left genuine hot weather in the Sunflower state—the kind that is warm 'til next morning, and makes corn and melons, and parboils humanity. They were cutting a bumper crop of wheat in-law, R. B. Lindsay, leaving for home on Saturday. His sons, Fred and Arthur, who have been helping their father, John Lindsay, through the berry season, remain to enjoy a season of camping in this delightful spot.

Charles Potter, of Myrtle Creek, southern Oregon, spent last week here at the Maples, the home of his brother-in-law, R. B. Lindsay, leaving for home on Saturday. His sons, Fred and Arthur, who have been helping their father, John Lindsay, through the berry season, remain to enjoy a season of camping in this delightful spot.

James S. King, of South Dakota, who has been making his home with his daughter, Mrs. A. O. Anderson, at the Deep Dale ranch, has returned from Newburg, where he enjoyed the state encampment of the G. A. R. Mr. King served in a Minnesota regiment during the Civil war.

The increase in the planting of field crops is a noticeable feature this season in this part of the valley. The cool season and occasional rains have been favorable to an especially fine growth. Joe Hall and number of other ranchers have harvested the first cutting of alfalfa and are noting the upward climb of the second growth. A clover crop that G. A. McCurdy chopped down in his old orchard the other day was a sight for joy. A passerby thought McC. would have to do like that corn grower in the middle west—pile all he could outdoors and crowd the balance into the barn.

A number hereabouts enjoyed a pleasant call the other day from E. G. Walthor, who is working up an acquaintance route and incidentally saying a good word for the Glacier.

It is probable that this section will be well represented and have a grand time at the chautauqua festival, and many rigs and faces will be turned toward the head of Hood River valley the latter part of July.

Fortunate conditions combined to make this the most satisfactory berry season as to yield, that has favored strawberry growers here in many years. The uniformly cool weather with skies frequently overcast, brought the berries to full growth and furnished steady picking. Old timers say this has been the coolest June since 1888, a number of 25 years. The worst drawback on the growers has been the scarcity of pickers and packers. All ranchers were short handed and eagerly gave a job to any sort of a being who could move perceptibly. The Indians never visited us this year. Old chiefs Rutabaga and Opodeloc and their squaws had been plenty of jobs down the valley and near their beloved hunting ground, Hood River city. Still, our ranchers contrived to make a good pick, and of excellent quality. One of them informed the writer that out of 950 crates that he packed and marketed, less than 50 crates had to go as field pick. As the prevailing price has all along been over $2 a crate, you can easily figure that berry culture is a paying enterprise in Hood River valley if conditions are good, even if help happens to be scarce.

As to other fruit crops, the peaches and pears are looking well. Cherries will give a scant yield. Apples a fair yield. Some orchardists inform the writer that their apple yield will be heavier than last year.

There were the usual busy times at Cummings' store during the berry season, the pickers constantly stringing in after provender and tobacco.

E. A. Miller on Sunday captured a cock Chinese pheasant, by hand. The bird was disabled, probably by striking a wire fence or phone wire and was in Miller's berry field. He will be kept in a cage till he recovers. Is it true that the season for these birds in Hood River county opens in October? If so, it's a pity, as the birds are just nicely started. An open season now would clean them out of the valley.
