GIBSON DISCUSSES MUNICIPAL PLANT

Hood River, Ore., Feb. 18, 1914.
To the Public: Should Hood River valley construct a community light plant? No. Why not? Some community light plants have failed. Wreckage of such plants is far flung. Factional strife, faulty financing and selfish management have made ruins of some community electrical plants. Hood River valley already has one-and-one light plants. They are able to supply sufficient energy for all purposes. If the rates are unjust let the citizen tell his woes to the Public Utilities Commission, and this commission will put the excessive tolls through a process of shrinkage.
The local electrical companies are in a position to embarrass and antagonize the community power. Corporations have men skilled in combative opposition. They have strong men able to wield injunctions, mandamus, and other legal clubs. There is an element of our people who would sincerely oppose a community plant. Among the friends of community lighting are a few wobbly brothers who would topple over to an offer of temporary lower rates from a corporation even though such surrender endangered the success of a community plant. Cooperative lighting is not all cream and toast.
Should Hood River valley have a cooperative light plant? Emphatically YES! Capital is readily attracted to private electrical plants. The rate of interest with which water power is being absorbed, the ease with which money is secured for electrical developments, the fact that the Hood River Gas & Electric and Hood Electric companies were able to float such large bonds while they were supplying a small field and fighting each other--as they once did--all these things indicate that the profits in selling electric energy are large. Palo Alto, a community with a population of 4500 people, sells current from a municipal steam plant at a maximum of seven cents per K-H. Five years ago a private corporation was supplying electric energy at a maximum of 15 cents per K-H; three years ago Eugene began the construction of a municipal plant; today the municipal plant and the corporation are both selling energy at a maximum of nine cents per K-H. What must have been the profits of the private company under the 15 cent rate? Exortion is the word that fits. For the six months ending December 31, the municipal plant has saved all interest and operating expenses, had a net profit of $17,959.
Hood River valley has many advantages over most other communities in attempting cooperative lighting. This community has densely populated rural sections, a citizenship many of whom are wide awake, a people in whom the get-together spirit is strongly developed by cooperative marketing. Through our valley a river flows with rapid fall, narrow channel and high banks, making the building of a dam comparatively easy. The water tumbling down over the rocks in Hood River shouts to the heavens to be wakened up. Now is the time for the people in Hood River valley to get control of power at a point in the river which will admit of large development--2000 horsepower or more. Then, as soon as possible, build a dam to supply both country and city. The city and country love each other; the course of true love never did run quite smooth. Marry the city and the country in the holy bonds of electric matrimony. Why not?
Sincerely,
L. Braden Gibson.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

(This column is conducted by Mrs. J. B. Gill, local press representative of the W. C. T. U.)
The following is a joint resolution introduced in the house of representatives, December 19, 1913, by Congressman Richmond P. Hobson, proposing an amendment to the constitution of the United States:
Whereas, exact scientific research demonstrated that alcohol is a narcotic poison, destructive and degenerating to the human organism, and that its distribution as a beverage or contained in foods lays a staggering economic burden upon the shoulders of the people, lowers to an appalling degree the average standard of character of our citizenship, thereby undermining the public morals and the foundation of free institutions, produces widespread crime, pauperism, and insanity, inflicts disease and untimely death upon hundreds of thousands of citizens and blights with degeneracy their children unborn, threatening the future integrity and the very life of the nation;
Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of the House concurring therein), That the following amendment of the constitution be and hereby is proposed to the states, to become valid as a part of the constitution when ratified by the legislatures of the several states as provided by the constitution.
Section 1. The sale, manufacture, sale, transportation for sale, importation for sale, and exportation for sale of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes in the United States and all territories subject to the jurisdiction thereof are forever prohibited.
Section 2. Congress shall have power to regulate the manufacture, sale, importation and transportation of intoxicating liquors for sacramental, medicinal, mechanical, pharmaceutical or scientific purposes or for use in the arts and shall have power to enforce this article by all needful legislation.
Much interest is being taken in eugenics in Oregon and the whole land. It is well to take every precaution to secure better children, and first to secure or develop better parents. But are not the devoted ones beginning at the wrong end of matters?
The parents, and the consequent debility of children is due more to drink than to all other causes put together. If drink were exterminated, there should be a gradual increase in vital powers of parents and children.
If one were to raise the best blooded colts, he would see first that the land on which he was to raise them was free from snakes, bogs, and swamps. He would not try to counteract the dire influence of these enemies of colt life by extra care that the dam and sires were virile and perfect.
If we showed that we care for children as much as we do for colts, we would first rid our land of the snakes, swamps and bogs caused by the liquor traffic, and then our work of eugenics would be more than half done.
Under the present arrangements one of the great benefits (7) of the faithful following of eugenics would be a race of men stronger, better developed, and so better able to drink gigantic potions of booze. When scientific investigation tells us that only six per cent of the children of drinking parents are normal, as against 96 per cent of the children of abstaining parents, it would seem that a rigid following of the science of eugenics would call, first, for the annihilation of all traffic in drink.--Exchange.

Batchelder Urges Cooperation

Hood River, Feb. 23, 1914.
Editor Glacier: Believing that the time has come to stop the great waste of fruit in the Hood River valley, beginning with the strawberry and ending with the apple, I wish to call the attention of the growers to the following statements of prominent people in the northwest who have given this subject careful consideration. These parties are not speaking from selfish motives, but have the best interests of the growers and the communities at large in view.
Robt. E. Strahorn, of the Portland, Eugene & Eastern Ry., after the close of his speech at Spokane last November said, "If I had time I would burn the Pacific northwest from one end to the other in the interest of by-products from fruit; that shows my interest in by-products." Mr. Strahorn gives a great deal of his time to this subject, and has been in the by-products plants of that state for the Cooperative by-product business in the Pacific northwest, of which he is an active member.
Prof. C. I. Lewis, O. A. C., in a very able paper read at Spokane last November, said in part, "If we develop the by-products business in the northwest in a way that will mean the most to us as fruit growers, it is going to be necessary for us to organize and cooperate in every way. Organization and cooperation will be the key note of our success."
In an exhaustive paper that every grower in the Hood River valley should read, Walter S. Brown, O. A. C., said at the Fruit Products Congress, at Spokane, last November: "In fact, it seems difficult to set a limit to what intelligent cooperation may accomplish. Judging from what the farmers of Denmark and the working men of England have done, we should be able, through cooperation, to bring the producer and the consumer closer together to their mutual advantage. The elimination of waste by means of the by-products factory run upon cooperative plan should be a substantial step in this direction."
Space will not permit of further quotations, at this time; however, these should be sufficient to lead the growers of the Hood River valley to give careful consideration to the question of establishing a cooperative by-products plant in Hood River. I will be pleased to hear from all of the growers who are interested in this subject and will gladly give anyone interested all the information in my power, if they will see me or write me on the subject.
J. F. Batchelder.

Hall Has Fine Chickens

C. A. Hall, one of the valley's poultry breeders, has just secured a pair of fine cockerels of the Bushman-Piece strain. The blue blooded chickens, which have just been brought into the valley, are the sons of the famous cockerel which headed the first prize pen at the great Illinois state fair in 1912. The grandfather of the handsome birds, Red Cloud IV, was awarded first prize at the Illinois state fair.

Cow Dies After Swallowing Wire

One of the herd of fine dairy cows of J. F. Thompson, after suffering terribly, died recently. Veterinarian Simms, of the Oregon Agricultural College declared that it seemed that the animal's death had been caused from an internal wound. A post mortem examination revealed a piece of baling wire about four inches long imbedded in one of the cow's lungs.
