Scandal

When you call for a line which is in use or "busy" you are notified of this condition, as the directory makes by an interrupted "buzz" which your imagination, without undue stretching, should interpret easily as "line busy, line busy, line busy."

A subscriber tells us that to him it seems to say "Go to, go to, go to." We think the profanity was in his mind rather than in the apparatus. When next time on attempting a connection you get the "busy buzz" stop, think. Do not be in a hurry to call the office and damn the operator, the system and all corporations in general. Before you blame others ask yourself "do I ever visit over the telephone?" While you are retailing at length the latest gossip a neighbor may be in a foaming hurry to summon the veterinary to a hundred dollar cow. Thoughtful consideration will save other subscribers the annoyance of the busy signal and this office valuable time.

Courtesy and a spirit prompt to oblige are enjoined upon all our employees. We ask you to believe that we are doing our best to serve you. A telephone system is a public utility, peculiarly public. It is essential to the efficient existence of a modern community. And without the support and cooperation of the public it is impossible for us to give the best of service.

Remember our last letter. When in trouble call the office promptly. Do not wait several days and then report in anger. Unless you report we may not know you are in trouble. Explain your trouble carefully. Unless you report fully we cannot intelligently apply the remedy. Most of the tribulations of the "busy signal" you may save yourselves, if you will.

CITY MARSHAL ASKS FOR DOG POUND

At the Monday night meeting of the city council, City Marshal Carson asked the city to make some provision for a place in which to impound dogs, on which no licenses have been paid. The license in the city is respectively $3 and $5 for male and female dogs. Many owners fail to pay the license, according to Mr. Carson. According to the ordinance it is necessary to impound the animals for three days and then advertise them for sale for a length of time before they can be killed.

A communication was received from W. Marzolis, asking that the city make ready to arbitrate the difference between himself and the city relative to damage done by the Tucker spring pipe line passing over his place. The right of way deed held by the city provides for such settlement and the matter was referred to the judiciary committee for action.

Francis Sealey, a Portland merchant, across whose West Side orchard the pipe line also crosses, has also written the council about the damage of the line.

A communication was received from Murray Kay, who asked the position of supervising the proposed work of laying bituminous surfacing on Twelfth street. Mr. Kay's communication was referred to the street committee.

A communication was received from Albert Hodge, who alleges that he is suffering from injuries received when he fell in a hole in the sidewalk on Fourth street opposite the Gilbert Implement Co. Mr. Hodge asks that the city pay his doctor's bill and expenses incidental to his injury. The injury of Mr. Hodge has caused a number of such holes in the sidewalks to be plugged.

The fire and water committee recommended that the council purchase additional hose for the fire department.

The street committee reported that the road oiling machine, recently purchased, had been loaded on a boat in Portland Monday afternoon, and that the work of repairing the oilband machine streets would begin the first of the week.

E. B. Clark, whose property is needed for sewer rights of way on the Heights, will be asked to come here at the expense of the city to confer with the council relative to the sewer, which is badly needed by Heights people.

The council ordered warrants drawn for the payment of the $300 interest on the $95,000 water bond, and the sum of $2200 on the $90,000 issue.

FINS, FURS AND FEATHERS

Alleging that rats infest many restaurants in Portland and other cities of the state, J. D. Mickle, state dairy and food commissioner, announces in his bulletin for June that he will wage war on the vermin. He declares that unless his requests that the proprietors rid their places of the rodents are heeded he will make a ruling that all food prepared in places where there are rats be labeled "Rat Infested," and if that is not done he will see to it that a placard containing the words "Rat Infested" shall be posted at the entrance of each restaurant where there are rats.

A woodsman recently, while traversing the forests of the Rogue River Valley, discovered a deer and large cougar dead, side by side. An inspection of the body of the latter revealed a puncture in the skull, where the deer had struck the animal in the death fight. The deer was evidently so mangled that it died soon after killing its foe.

Cougars are the worst enemies of deer and kill hundreds of them throughout the state every year. However, several instances have been reported in which the ordinarily timid animals have killed their adversaries.

The St. Louis authorities, if they knew of the Hood River city council's experience with bees, would undoubtedly ask for advice. Traffic on the Belleville public square in St. Louis, came to a halt last week and citizens hurried for sheltering doors when a swarm of bees suddenly appeared over the square and filled it with a droning that could be heard for a block. The swarm alighted on a tree in front of the National hotel.

Henry Funk, a Belleville man, who knows something about bees, got a ladder and a saw and sawed off the limb holding the swarm. Next Funk got a big box and set it on a bed sheet, laying the limbs in front of a hole he had cut. Presently there was a rush as the bees discovered the box and precipitated it for their new home.

There are several apiaries to the south of Belleville and it is believed the bees came from one of these. Funk handled the swarm like an expert, and although at times he was almost covered by the bees he did not get a single sting.

B. E. Duncan, a member of the State Fish Commission, who returned Saturday from a two weeks' outing on the Mackenzie and Blue rivers, states that the Mackenzie hatchery will be enlarged and used for rearing brook trout.

"We enjoyed our trip very much," says Mr. Duncan, who was accompanied by Geo. H. Kelly and R. E. Clanton, other members of the board. "However, we were not able to do much fishing, striking the region while storms were on. It snowed furiously for several days, and the hills were white. I was surprised at the proximity of the source of the Mackenzie river and that of the Deschutes. We saw many teams and wagons that were traveling over the divide from Bend to Eugene. Many fishermen were already in the region, for when the weather is right, the sport on the Mackenzie cannot be beaten."

Judge A. J. Derby and J. H. Fredrick spent Sunday on the Hood river fishing. They started in at Winans and fished down stream to Tucker's bridge. On account of the brilliancy of the day the and clearness of the stream, the fish hit poorly. Judge Derby landed eleven trout, while Mr. Fredrick secured but nine.

Harry Farrell, who was in the Green Point district Sunday attending to business, spent a portion of the day fishing. He caught a basket of 45 fine trout.

Trap shooting enthusiasts of the city are getting busy in hopes of creating enough interest for a tournament. All who are interested in such a movement or who are any way interested in shooting pigeons are urged to attend a meeting to be held Sunday between 9:30 and 10 o'clock at the Mount Hood hotel.

Just Little Stories

A West Side rancher, who raises chickens and strawberries, is a thorough believer in witch dogs. His berries were being harvested by Indians. One day, shortly after he had heard a commotion in his chicken yard and had found the next morning a portion of a red shawl, where some one had beat a hasty retreat over the wire fence around the yard, a squaw engaged in picking limped severely. He asked her the trouble. "Oh, Indian's dog bite," she replied. "Why not kill Indian dog?" he asked. "Indian no like um kill dog," she said.

Finally, by presenting her with the evidence of the torn shawl and close questioning, he secured a confession. "I never have had any more trouble with Indians in my chicken house," says the rancher.

Dain Vertical Lift Mower

The Mower of Superior Design

Every now and then, a man comes along who proceeds to destroy some established standard and set up a new one by the simple process of presenting something better.

He has no new elements to work with, but he has been able to form a new combination of these elements that is superior.

This is exactly what happened when the Dain Vertical Lift Mower was created. The designer saw a way to recombine the essential elements of a mowing machine and leave out a lot of unnecessary parts. At the same time he actually increased its efficiency.

For instance, by simply turning a bevel gear end for end on its shaft, he overcame the thrust on this shaft and discarded the thrust collars and thrust bearings others had found necessary. Thus, the power formerly wasted in friction is saved and the construction simplified besides.

Then, again, by arranging the two sets of gears, used on mowers generally, so that the pressure of one pair counteracts the pressure of the other, all the power consuming strain with its consequent wear, is avoided.

So on throughout the machine, the investigator will find improvements that make the Dain Mower worthy to be called "The mower of superior design."

And the John Deere-Dain Rake is just as up to date as the mower. It is built for service--and lots of it.
