THE PIONEERS

Last week was a gala one for the state's early pioneers, and yet the minds of the old men and women, who enjoyed "the early day beauties of the vigrin districts and suffered the priva-tions of the frontier at the same time, were saddened, when the broken ranks were viewed. The pioneer is fast passing. The evening time of their lives is gladdened, as they look back over lives well lived, and they are reaping the rewards of strenuous toil and courageous hearts. All honor to the pioneers who were the precursors of a period when happy thousands inhabit the commonwealth of plenty, who broke the bonds of a fettering nature and made it possible for that same nature to assist with the yield of abundance of fruits and grains of the fields and the products of the forests for themselves and us who follow.
