One of our customers, temporarily in a small town in a foreign country, was surprised to find that we number among our other facilities for serving the public, a foreign exchange department, through which we can send money to any banking town in most any civilized country in the world.

Our preference, of course, is to help you keep your money in Hood River; but if you must send it to another town, either in this country or in an alien land, let us send it for you. It is interesting to know just how we can do this, and if you want to learn all about it, let Mr. Hershner or Mr. Acheson explain the system to you when you are in the Bank.

WHAT would you think of a person who would plant some seed in the ground and then go out and dig the seed up every day to see if it had sprouted?

We know that you would think that he was very light in the head and ought to have a guardian appointed. Yet that is about the way some people do, who start a bank account. They put the money in the bank but the balance never grows because it is checked out as fast as deposited. In order to get ahead and secure enough funds to make a profitable investment, the deposit should be left alone to grow, like the seed in the ground.

The convention of apple growers last-ed three days, the time being taken up largely in discussing details of the plan of organization submitted by a committee selected for that purpose. Oscar Vanderbilt represented Hood River on the committee, and his intimate knowledge of marketing conditions, together with his varied experience as a grower and seller of apples, was of valuable assistance in framing the document.

It was a convention of big men in the apple business of four states. The 107 delegates represented property of a value of more than two hundred millions of dollars, a business of magni-tude which is in jeopardy through de-moralized marketing conditions. It was with a serious mind that each one present attended the meeting, with the feeling that something must be done, and done at once, to put this immense industry on a paying basis. It was with the hope that something could be accomplished, and a disposition among all delegations that they were willing to "give and take," that a compromise an was unanimously adopted, after
