PATRIOTISM

The ceremony of presentation of the American flag to the circuit court here last week was a simple one, and yet it was impressive. Similar ceremonies marked the opening of circuit court sessions in all parts of the state. These gift flags, presented by the Sons of the American Revolution, may have a bearing on future history. We have been growing away from a proper reverence of this one of the world's greatest symbols. The Oregon society of the national organization is to be commended for its action.

We publish below the presentation speech of Geo. R. Wilbur. It is well worth reading:

"It is not intended by this gift to add to the worldly properties of the court, for this society is neither a philanthropic nor a charitable institution, but one, as is universally known, whose purpose and excuse for existence is to foster and keep alive the great principles of the conception preceding and the dedication following our national birth."

"While the gift has some intrinsic value, I am asked to present with the material article the hope and wish that it may be used not alone on those ordinary patriotic occasions, but especially at those moments when, in this presence, our brothers from other lands are about to be admitted and received into the full communion and fellowship of American citizenship. May then this emblem of our country be unfurled to view and the heavenly music of the new bond of allegiance shall, like a certain great human heart quality, alike bless him who gives and him who receives. May he then be told this, his rights under and his duties to that flag are reciprocal; that if by his act he has become, in common with his newly found fellow citizens, a king in his own right, he must also bear the heavy weight of the crown."

"And I have to add that what to me seems to be the very commendable thought of this patriotic society may be approved at its full worth and intent, and with its help the sacred ceremony of naturalization be made as beautiful and impressive as it is solemn and far reaching."

HOGS

The residents of the Hood River valley have found it to their benefit, to cooperate in the selling of apples. Unless cooperation is practiced in raising and selling hogs, some dissatisfaction and loss of money is going to result. Orchardists who raise hogs will find it to their interest to cooperate in getting together shipments that can be handled profitably.

The Union Meat Company and Portland Union Stock Yards have been instrumental in increasing hog raising to a large extent. The stockyards company has pointed out the benefits of cooperation. It should follow up the campaign and thoroughly impress the orchardist-swineherd with the absolute necessity of working together.

THANK YOU

The country editor is entitled to his hire and something should be done to raise the rates of pay. He does not get enough now, and he earns more than he ever sees. If affairs could so be arranged that many people would make a practice of paying him money on Monday, his heart would be filled with joy and his purse with gold, for then wealth would flow in all the week. This does not border on superstition; every one of him can attest its truth. When he breaks his mail Monday morning and finds a bunch of land notices, there is ginger and "pep" about the shop all the week and the paper fairly scintillates. The trouble is that patrons do not realize this, hence the trouble. If it will help him any, this paragraph is released for republication as soon as he sees it.—The Oregonian.

JOURNAL EXPANDS

The Portland Journal began last Monday the publication of a midnight-morning rural route and out of town edition. The Journal has made vast strides since July 23, 1912, when the paper passed under the control of C. S. Jackson, who formerly published the East Oregonian in Pendleton. The paper has become an Oregon institution. The evening editions and the Sunday morning editions, it is announced, will be continued as usual.

IDENTIFIED

The Portland Chamber of Commerce News identifies us as follows in an item in that publication last week:

When the St. Paul sailed from New York last week the steamer carried a carload of Hood River apples, destined for the trenches on the front in France. The apples were purchased by the British government.

It might be mentioned that Hood River is at the eastern end of the Columbia river gorge, now pierced by the famous Columbia river highway. Editor Hugh Hume in his Portland Spectator gives the apple a boost in last week's issue of that publication. On the cover page of the Spectator appears a handsome engraving of Hood River Arkansas Blacks advertising the Spokane National apple show. It might be stated that Arkansas Blacks are money makers.

Everything now has its day. Apple day has been celebrated and many communities have celebrated dollar day. Next Thursday the National Bee Keepers' Association has announced that honey day will be observed.

Owners of Hood River pear orchards will not need to stretch a point when they offer thanks next Thursday.

MISS WHITLEY, VISITOR, DIES SUDDENLY

One of the saddest deaths of recent occurrence here was that of Miss Ada Louise Whitley, of Fayette, Ia., who passed away Tuesday afternoon at the Cottage hospital. Miss Whitley arrived last week for a visit with the family of her brother, H. W. Whitley, of Dee. She was suffering from a severe earache. Standing the pain for several days, physicians were finally summoned. Miss Whitley was brought to the hospital Monday. It was found that an abscess had formed in her inner ear, and her brain being affected, her death resulted quickly.

Funeral services were conducted yesterday afternoon at the chapel of the Anderson Undertaking Co. by Rev. A. S. Donat. The remains were shipped last night to Iowa for interment in the family cemetery.

Miss Whitley was a cousin of Mrs. M. E. McAllister, of this city.

THE DALLES HI WINS, SCORE 32 TO 0

With the largest crowd of the season out and the old time rivalry between the two schools prevailing, the most interesting football game of the year was fought out Tuesday afternoon between The Dalles Hi and the team of the local high school. The Dalles winning by a score of 32 to 0.

"While the local players do mightily well as individuals," says Earl Weber, who refereed the game, "the visiting team surpassed them in team work. The local team was very poor also in tackling."

The members of the visiting team were given a banquet at the Hotel Oregon.

Mrs. Aug. Paasch Dies in Portland

News of the death of Mrs. August Paasch, who passed away yesterday morning in a Portland hospital, has thrown a pall of gloom over the East Side, where Mr. and Mrs. Paasch settled as pioneers more than a quarter of a century ago. Mrs. Paasch was taken to Portland several weeks ago. It was found that she was suffering from cancer of the liver, and she had been constantly growing weaker up till the last. The body was shipped from Portland to S. E. Bartness, local undertaker, last night. The funeral will be conducted Friday morning at 10:30 o'clock at the home of Rev. J. L. Hersher, interment at Idlewild cemetery.

In addition to her husband, Mrs. Paasch leaves surviving five children, Fred Paasch, Mrs. J. C. Duckwall, Mrs. Roy Masarik, Hugo Paasch and William Paasch, all of Hood River.

FINN, FURN AND FEATHERS

The early morning reports of the gangs of duck hunters, who frequent the sloughs of the Columbia river just north of the city, are heard here now each day. Ducks are more plentiful than usual here this year, and a number have been killed just outside the city limits.

Fred Rand bagged six large mallards last week.

If a fisherman were to hook a fish similar to the specimen that may be found on exhibition at the Heights meat market of E. M. Holman, he would be profoundly interested. If not surprised out of his wits. The fish, about six inches long, was found in a box of smelt shipped to Mr. Holman from a Portland market. It is principally head, from which protrudes a series of sharp horns. The body is made up of sets of stiff cartilage that are graduated to a point on the end. The fish resembles some peculiar Oriental drake.

"My drink is now filled with hams and lards," says Mr. Holman, but pretty soon I hope to have a bear hanging there. E. C. Owens, of the Mount Hood district, tells me that he has found the den of the bear. As soon as he gets ready to go for the bear he is going to call me and we will have a regular hog killing time."

Bert Stranahan, Emmett Tompkins, Arthur Howell and Ed Button have been in the Arlington district this week in quest of geese.

Ted Pooley and A. W. Peters are goose hunting in eastern Oregon this week.

Bert Head is in eastern Oregon hunting wild geese.

Commodore Dean and Ed Foust are in the Olex region hunting wild geese. They are accompanied by their wives.

APPLE NOTES

A tiny worm found in the last box of Oregon apples examined by the jury of awards at the Panama-Pacific exposition, according to Anne Shannon Munroe, writing in the Oregonian, lost the world's championship for Oregon.

The jury began its work Monday, Nov. 8. Box after box was opened up from every state, and there the arduous work of comparison went on. Every famous apple center in America was represented. Gradually state after state was eliminated until the contest lay between Oregon and Washington. Friday it was a tie. Saturday Oregon was in the lead with a rating of 99 per cent perfect. Saturday afternoon a box was taken at random from each of the two states and the apples were examined and compared apple for apple.

Oregon had all but won when the judge picked up the last Oregon apple, turned it carefully over, and discovered that the bloom end was a shade dark. He adjusted his magnifying glass, then slowly halved the apple, and up perked the head of a tiny worm.

This threw Oregon out and Washington was proclaimed the grand prize winner on perfect Winesaps from Okanagan. This one worm lost Oregon the grand prize.

Apple exports from all ports for the week ending November 6 were 51,207 barrels against 75,941 barrels the same week a year ago. Boxes are figured in the above at three to the barrel. The actual exports of boxes to Europe were 18,684.

I HAVE JUST INSTALLED French burr-stone grist mill at my sawmill on Phelps creek two and half miles west of the city. I will grind for toll, corn, wheat, rye, barley and other grains.

Mill will begin operation on next Saturday, November 20, and will run each Saturday thereafter.
