WESTWARD HO!

The land of the setting sun, the land of the West, is coming into its own...

We clip the following, from the pen of C. J. Blanchard...

Unless all signs fall and all prophecies are wrong, the west this year is to be the stalking ground of a mighty army of our people...

The title that today is sweeping so strongly westward will elb eastward with diminished force...

The abundant knowledge which the tourist will gain concerning the resources and riches of our great west...

Our ears are filled daily with the praises of the travelers who come to our desk...

The epidemic of grip that has caused so much discomfort to local people during the past few weeks has been by no means local...

From collisions between automobiles and sleds of children in Portland fearful accidents have resulted...

Business is looking up. Reports from California indicate a gratifying revival in lumber...

Keep the snow shovel where you can use it before breakfast. The work will give you a fine appetite...

December Rain Heavy

The total rainfall for December, according to the statistical report made by Co-operative Weather Observer Caughey, was 7.72 inches.

A MODEL'S SORROW

It would obtrude itself in spite of all precautions. A magazine illustrator possessed the services of a model which were highly valued on account of the man's ability to wear evening clothes...

"You will pardon me, sir—I regret to say—I am overwhelmed with confusion, but—but, sir, if you will excuse me, I was obliged, absolutely obliged to—er—hypocritize—in short, to pawn my evening clothes for $3. If you will kindly redeem them I am quite at your service, sir. Here is the ticket."

Now, this sort of thing continued for a long time, until finally the illustrator hit upon the plan of hiding the model's business suit while he was out of the room, sending him home in his evening garb, confident that he had no other and that he would return the day after today to pose.

The hour arrived, but instead of the model there came a messenger boy with this note: "Dear Sir—I cannot find words—I do not know how to convey to you—I am lacking in—but, alas, sir, that fatal 'but' I was driven, forced, compelled, again to pledge my evening garments as collateral security for the sum of $3. Redeem them, and I am at your service. I am at the pawnbroker's, in bed in a back room. I enclose the ticket."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Poverty's Graduates. No men living are more worthy to be trusted than those who toil up from poverty; none less inclined to take or touch aught which they have not honestly earned.—Lincoln.

He Knew What He Was Asking. "Is there any mail for John or me?" inquired the general delivery patron. "You're strangers to me," retorted the postal clerk. "Do you suppose I can tell people's names by looking at them?" "I don't see that it makes any difference if I am a stranger. Look and see if there is any mail for John or me?"—John O'Rourke.

Picking Him Out. "The poet Tennyson," said an English writer, "was often rude. Tennyson was so widely loved it turned his head a little. At any rate, he was often guilty of rudeness. Once he more than met his match. He made a rude and scornful remark about the dress of a certain dandy. Now, dandies can generally take care of themselves, and this one was no exception by the rule. The dandy happening to be in the presence of a crowd of people when the remark was repeated to him by a mutual friend, screwed his glass into his eye and drawled calmly: 'Oh, really! Who Tennyson was it—the dirty one?' Everybody smiled, for of the Tennyson brothers Alfred was undoubtedly the more careless."

An Awkward Mistake. When Lord Dalhousie was commander in chief of the British Indian forces he visited the king of Oude at Lucknow and made a point of presenting Lady Dalhousie. The king of Oude, glittering with diamonds, sat in his gold chair and narrowly watched Lady Dalhousie advance across the marble floor of the great hall. He did not understand Lord Dalhousie's presentation. He thought Lord Dalhousie wanted to sell this withered woman to him, and, shaking his head, twisting his black moustache and smiling scornfully, he said as the countess courted low before his throne: "Take her away. Take her away. She won't do at all."

"TAKE HER AWAY."

Honi Soit Qui Mal y Pense. It was recess. Two small boys were having a somewhat rough struggle, and when one received an unexpected hard blow he exclaimed, "If you don't look out you'll end up in a place that begins with H and ends with L!" A passing teacher, hearing the remark, scolded the boy severely for what he had said. "Well," replied the boy, after a pause, "I'm sure I don't know what you're talking about. I only meant hospital."—Chicago Herald.

Unexplored Lands. Europe is the only continent which has been completely explored. A large area in North America has never been visited by civilized people. It is in the northwestern part of Alaska, within a short distance of the coast. There are, besides, similar areas in the extreme northern section of the North American continent, in the vicinity of Hudson bay, and again in Labrador.

The interior of Brazil has several large unexplored areas, and there are similar areas to the southward. Africa, as might be expected, contains more unexplored territory than any other continent. The largest lies in the Sahara, while the central part of the dark continent to the southward offers many opportunities for exploration.

Despite the antiquity of civilization in Asia, much remains to be done by the geographer. There are several unexplored areas in Arabia, as well as in China, and especially in northern Siberia. Australia contains several dark spaces in the northern section. Throughout the south seas lie many islands, some of considerable area, which have not yet been placed upon the map.

Getting Away From Land. The question has been asked, Is it possible to sail 1,000 miles from land? This can be done at several points. By leaving San Francisco and sailing northward into the north Pacific a spot is reached where there is no land, not even an islet, for 1,000 miles in any direction. So, too, sailing from the northern point of Kamchatka southward a like reach is attained, a point equally distant from land of any kind, the nearest to the north being the outlying members of the Hawaiian group. In the southern Indian ocean it is possible to sail 1,000 miles out from the southern points of Australia and New Zealand and still be as far from any other land, and the same may be done in a westerly direction from Cape Horn. Indeed, from this point a much longer distance might be reached, for the southern Pacific between the Horn and New Zealand covers a space of 80 degrees of longitude and 40 of latitude of absolutely unbroken sea, making its central point over 1,200 miles from anywhere.

Soiled Furniture. Covered furniture that is soiled can be made to look much fresher if rubbed over with a soft cloth dipped in gasoline. This will not harm the most delicate fabric, and the odor will pass away when exposed to the air. Do not run any risks, however, by using gasoline near fire.—Home Craft.
