

BOYS DISPLAY RARE RESOURCEFULNESS

Although neither of the boys is over 10 years of age, Leslie, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Sherwood, and Embly, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Howard, displayed a resourcefulness last week that might not be equalled by adults. The boys were hauling slabwood to the Howard home from the Ruthton planer, driving the old family horse, Tom, gentle to a fault.

Near the top of the Ruthton grade, the horse refused to budge. Under the weight of the heavy load he was taking intermittent backward steps, and finally the wagon's rear wheels rested against a bank at the roadside. After waiting patiently for the passage of some good Samaritan driver, the boys for a time were nonplussed. Sighting a piece of slabwood that had fallen over the side of a flume that passes by the roadside to the planer, young Leslie was quick to put into execution his thoughts. He was possessed of a stubby pencil. Picking up a piece of paper on the road he wrote:

"Tom has baked."

The note, tied with a handkerchief to the piece of slabwood was soon in the hands of men at the planer receiving lumber from the mill. The quarter of a mile distance was soon traversed by the Howard lad's father, and "Tom" and the load of wood were assisted to the top of the steep hill.

BRUNER OPTIMISTIC OVER APPLE DEAL

Myron Bruner, of Rockford, Ill., who is here with Mrs. Bruner for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Bone and to inspect local orchard holdings, expresses an optimism over the northwestern apple deal the coming fall. "Conditions are such in the Middle West," declares Mr. Bruner, "that the northwestern apple grower should receive a nice price for his product this year. Business is booming in the manufacturing cities of the Middle West and East. As an instance, the Oliver Typewriter Co. of my vicinity is not making so many typewriters perhaps as usual, but the factory, with a few changes made, is turning out thousands of shells for the allied armies."

Mr. Bruner, who has visited Hood River on former banner crop years, declares after a visit to orchard tracts that he has never seen a finer yield of fruit or better quality than of apples now maturing.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruner are accompanied by their niece, Miss Hazel Tobin, also of Rockford.

Exchange Ships D'Anjous

The Fruit Growers' Exchange, shipping its product through the Northwestern Fruit Exchange, shipped its first carload of D'Anjou pears Friday.

The sales concern estimates that the total crop of its members for the season will reach six cars.

While the price for which the entire crop has been sold has not been given out, Manager McKay declares that it will return a high profit to growers.

PEARS COMPARED WITH APPLES

Geary Tells of New York Investigations

During the three years that the writer was in charge of an orchard in southern Oregon, which were 1910-11-12-13, he was impressed with the fact that the net returns on apples were variable and unsatisfactory while the prices received for the pears of the Rogue River valley netted profit and were satisfactory. Year after year, the growers of Comice, Bose, D'Anjou and Winter Nellis pears have received prices varying from $1.75 to $4 f. o. b. shipping point.

This steady scale of remunerative prices has not been due to the fact that these fruits are not grown elsewhere. The Bose is grown extensively in New York, in many other localities.

AT NEW ELECTRIC

Today William Demond and Bessie Barriscale in "Not My Sister," Grace Tyler, the principal character of "Not My Sister," is an artist's model.

Friday and Saturday Hazel Dawn in "The Sales Lady" and Funny Frank Daniel in "In Specting Paris."

Sunday and Monday Triangle features, Mae Marsh and Robert Harrow in "A Child of Paris Streets," and Willie Collier in "Willie's Wobbly Ways," a certain laugh producer.

Tuesday One day only. Pauline Frederick, whose marvelous character impersonations of "Zaza" and "Bella Donna" has indisputably placed her in the position of the screen's foremost emotional artists, departs from her customary roles in this company's picturization of the celebrated novel and play, "Audrey," considered one of the most popular books which Mary Johnston ever wrote.

Wednesday Audrey is a simple, unsophisticated girl of the woods, who has been rescued by the Indians when a child, made the household drudge of a hypocritical minister and his wife, and is finally nearly drowned by an angry man who accuses her to be in the power of a witch, being rescued from the fanatics only by the devotion of young Lord Howard, who alone understands the spirited girl's impulses and emotions.

Thursday The friendship of Lord Howard and Audrey develops into a tender but stirring romance, which, together with the varying action of this Paramount picture, makes of it a thoroughly absorbing and thrilling photoplay.

Wapanitia Good Road Says Hurlburt Back Monday morning from a 360 mile automobile trip begun Saturday morning, County Engineer Hurlburt, who was accompanied to Culver and other Central Oregon points by his father, W. H. Hurlburt, of Portland, reports that the road through the Warm Springs Indian reservation and by way of Wapanitia is in good condition.

"By taking this route," says Mr. Hurlburt, "one cuts off 20 miles when going to and from Central Oregon. From a scenic standpoint I am of the opinion that the Warm Springs road is a little more appealing."

Trade Opposed to Box Apple I found an unsatisfactory spirit among the members of the trade regarding box apples. There was no enthusiasm or speculation in their buying of box apples, as these had to be procured from one of the twelve or thirteen box apple operators. The situation was quite different with the other fruits, as members of the trade were on an equal basis with the big fellows at the daily auction sale. It is inherent that a man dislikes to pay a profit to a rival and that is what happens when "the less than carlot" dealer buys box apples in New York City. All this explains why I went to the auction house and asked them for pictures with which to illustrate a talk to be given among neighbors in the Rogue River valley. I thought that it was time that through personal interest in the orchard business, if through no other, some one should make an expose of the present heartrending situation that confronts the apple growers. There was a time a few years back when the box apples were handled directly by the big apple operators. The output becoming larger, wider and more scientific distribution was necessary. Therefore the association and shipping organization grew up. Instead of taking the "bull by the horns" and eliminating the big operator, except when he pays cash for the products and runs the risk, the shippers have so far been forced to continue to use the big operator and in this way have created a top-heavy machinery of marketing that spells "disaster" in large letters for the apple growers of the northwest. It is not in the nature of things that the box apple grower can support all these institutions, pay high freight rates and the only get narrow distribution. Arthur M. Geary, Northwestern Bank Building, Paid Adv. Portland, Oregon. Dense Haze Monday Although, so far as is known, no forest fire was burning in the mid-Columbia district, a pall of smoke was hanging over Hood River Monday. The haze was heaviest in the Columbia river gorge, and the outlines of the Washington bank of the Columbia were almost obscured.
