THRIFT

War Stamps and Savings Certificates, as offered by the government that ever our children may become imbued with the war consciousness, are going to leave an imprint that will last throughout future generations. As a result of the lesson of thrift that these baby securities will bring, America will arise from the old ashes of waste and indifference a new nation, made strong and virile because her men and women have been drawn together as they have been awakened to the responsibility of their citizenship.

The aim of the War Stamp is twofold. Not only does it offer the individual with small means an opportunity to avail the government of his funds, but it has been offered with a view of preparing boys and girls of today for the period of reconstruction that will follow the war when these boys and girls will have become men and women.

For the beneficial effect that these little stamps and certificates will have on the plastic minds of our children, let us hasten to and heed the appeal that is made to us to buy. Do not go, however, to the savings bank and draw out enough to purchase several of the certificates and think your duty is ended. That is not thrift. Buy those stamps by sacrifices and daily savings.

Perhaps your little one on your arrival at noon or in the evening is accustomed to search her daddy's pockets and to kiss the money. "What did my daddy bring me today?" Perhaps you have been accustomed to buy for the child occasionally some trifling toy or a bag of sweets. Buy that baby a thrift stamp booklet. It will cost you but 25 cents, and then from day to day carry it to him or her another of those little green stamps. Convey to the child the meaning of those stamps. At first the little one may not comprehend, but as the days pass, you will see the little fellow taking a keener interest in the stamp book. Wasteful toys will be forgotten, and your child will have grown into a habit that is a great and wonderful blessing to the one so addicted. And better still, while you have been teaching the child, you will have taught yourself also.

Every bit of the energy of labor and the purchasing power of pennies, dimes and dollars at this critical time in our national history should be made available for the government in winning the war. It is reasonable, really, when you purchase articles that you do not need, when you create a demand for articles that are extravagances or luxuries, for thereby you deduct so much from labor, all of which should be working on war supplies and munitions. For this reason, cease the purchase of all those articles of luxury and divert those two bit pieces that you have formerly felt burning holes in your pockets to little green savings stamps.

You may have said in the past, oh, what's the use of me trying to buy war bonds or savings stamps? Let the big capitalist do that. But the government wants you to turn capitalist; it wants your child to learn how to be a capitalist. You become a capitalist on a small scale when you have become the possessor of a war savings certificate, and when all of our ordinary individuals become capitalists the great total of funds that will have been afforded the government by such means passes almost beyond our comprehension. If every man, woman and child buys four of the certificates, worth $20—and this is the aim of the government—the huge sum of $2,000,000 will be raised.

If every man, woman and child of the nation made an average daily purchase of two thrift stamps, 50 cents worth, each day's war debt would be met as it matured.

All Hood River people will soon receive literature explaining the war savings stamps and certificates. When they come, study those pamphlets. They are interesting and become much more so when you better understand them and grasp the broad scope of this wonderful plan of thrift that has been devised to save us from the recent-year American tendency to blow all the earnings of today without a thought of the morrow.

LINCOLN'S GETTYSBURG ADDRESS

Now that the principles of our great nation are on trial just as truly as they were a half century ago, when men were offering their lives in a supreme sacrifice for their country, when women cheerfully submitted to hardships as they engaged in work that would aid their boys at the front, it will be well for us to read again the memorable words spoken by Lincoln at the field of Gettysburg. Again we are fighting that "government of the people, by the people and for the people shall not perish from the earth."

The great Lincoln, whose birthday we celebrated last Tuesday, said: "Fourscore and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal."

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate—we cannot consecrate—we cannot hallow—this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have so nobly advanced.

It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we are highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom; and that government of the people, by the people and for the people shall not perish from the earth.

All of us have read or heard the great speech many times. Now it should have a new meaning. It should spur us on, each to make ungrudgingly the greatest sacrifice in his power to carry to a successful issue the fight we are now engaged in.

A PINE PLAN

Hereafter all drives for patriotic purposes will be eliminated in Aberdeen, Wash. That city has established a war chest fund. Says a dispatch: "Practically every merchant, wholesaler and manufacturer in the city has pledged himself to give a stipulated sum monthly into this fund and pledges to see secured by the city a total of $75,000 there will be collected $75,000 into this fund for war purposes.

The scheme was designed to eliminate future drives here, except those for the sale of liberty bonds.

Assessments for Y. M. C. A., Red Cross, Y. W. C. A., Armenian, Knights of Columbus and Salvation Army will be met from this fund. The fund will make it possible for Aberdeen to pay spot cash to any of the national committees in charge of drives.

In raising the war chest fund the manufacturers and loggers are pledged to give $40,000 during the year. Merchants will give upwards of $15,000 and professional men and landlords will give an equal amount.

By such a system the citizens of Aberdeen will conserve much energy. At one operation, provided the program is carried out, the work of a dozen drives will be eliminated. But one criticism may be suggested—through the absence of the stimulating effect of the campaigns Aberdeen may drop into a rut of lethargy. Yet the very virility of the original plans, it would seem, precludes such a contingency.

German newspapers express themselves as overjoyed at the sinking of the Lusitania, reciting that the incident will tend to dampen the ardor of the American people. And this is a weak point of Kultur. This atrocity of von Tirpitz' venomous sea serpent has aroused the country from end to end.

In New York, recruiting the day following the disaster reached a record at naval headquarters. With all their efficiency the huns are extremely deficient in psychology. They have become the skunk nation of the earth and the stench of their intrigues and their inhuman atrocities can be smelled from afar.

The United States in one respect was full prepared of the great European war. Through the adoption of the Federal Reserve banking system the financial institutions of the country have been able with dispatch to efficiently serve the nation in the crisis. If it were as easy for the government to assemble materials and munitions as it is to secure the money for the purchase of them, our progress would be little short of phenomenal.

Get out the dictionary and begin to give those difficult words the once over; for as surely as you live you are going to be drafted for the big Red Cross spelling bee, the date of which approaches.

The red tape that delays the arrival of government checks of soldiers' dependent wives and families should be cut and cut quickly.

Get ready your contribution for Saturday's campaign of the school children in behalf of the Armenian war sufferers.

Now let everybody cooperate with the food administration and keep Lent strictly.

Note the smiles of little boys and girls today. They have just received their valentines.

Coulter, of the Upper Valley, has won a pony, having been decided the best contributor of grade school pupils to the essay contest just held by State Superintendent of Education Churchill. Chas. Johnson Gets Appointed

Chas. F. Johnson, son of Sheriff Johnson, has received a telegram from Representative Sinnott announcing the young man's appointment as first alternate to the United States Military Academy at West Point. The young man, 18 years of age, graduated last spring from the high school and will leave soon for Portland, where he will prepare himself by special study for an examination in case he is called.

Anderson Does Big Business

While away Mr. Anderson also sold his Dodge automobile.

STORY OF THE CAYUSE INDIAN WAR

USE INDIAN WAR

(This is the second installment of the personal reminiscences of the late Amos Underwood on the Cayuse war of 1855. The third will follow in a future issue.)

We went three or four or five miles around and came to the Indian camp on the creek above the canyon. There were some 200 butts and the same number of fire, but no beef and no Indians, except on the high points above us. We asked old Pepe where the roast beef and breakfast was. He shook his head and said: "Kionas has quash tillikum my people are scared." Some of the boys from the Dalles (they were called the Forty Thieves) could beat the Indians at their own game. They said: "We will have breakfast soon. Taking an old silver cup and the first arrow, we went down a foot or two and found a cache under every one of those fires—brass kettles and all kinds of utensils and clothing, wheat, peas, camas, coarse and all other kinds of Indian grub. We fed our horses, and all we wanted took what we wanted and then threw the rest into the fire and burnt it up.

We then started south and east of south, and traveled all day. Indians had been seen on slides on the high points, except on the high points above us. Some of the boys would occasionally get a shot, but the old muzzle-loaders would not reach them.

We struck the Walla Walla road about dark; could see the train had not yet got to the station. We followed the train, camped on a small stream, and all well. We could smell the supper and were not long getting alongside. The camp was about 500 yards from the station. The train was in charge for the commissary.

When bedtime came Corporal A. Underwood was called to take charge of the prisoners. We had six Indians and had six men from the army with us. Of the guard I can only remember the names of Warren Keith, Sam Warfield and Doctor Bates. When we put the Indians to bed, one big fellow who said his name was Champego Jim, complained that he was sick under him, and he raised upon his hands and knees and asked Bates to remove it. As Bates stooped to get the stick, the Indian jumped out by his side and ran. Some of the boys started to help Bates, but he said: "No, let the other prisoners try to make a break. I jumped out and told the boys each to hold his man. Old man Keith shoved the muzzle of his gun against the breast of the chief, pushed him over and held him to the ground. Each of the other boys did the same with his prisoner. Doc Bates ran his man about 100 yards and caught him. As luck would have it, Bates was the swiftest man for 100 or 200 yards in the whole regiment. All hands turned out and tied the prisoners hand and foot. Next morning when we started on the march myself and guard were kept in charge of the prisoners.

Before we left camp I could hear the rifles popping around the bend. The advance guard were properly in it. As we marched up the road, our position with the prisoners was about the center of the column. We followed the wagon train, then the advance guard. We could see the boys running along the hillsides and hear them shooting all day, and I did not want to be with them. As we rode along I noticed Ab Addington sitting by the roadside leaning on his elbow. I said: "Ab, are you hurt badly?" "No," he replied, "but those boys have got my race mare."

Ab's mare had run away with him, but he cleared through the main line of the Indians. After being shot through the hip he fell off, and as the Indians passed him they tried to shoot him, but being too closely pressed by our boys they would not risk their lives in firing at him before they could pull the trigger they would be past their mark and the bullets would whistle to one side of his face. The skin was pulled off his face and head in several places where the bullets had struck him. Ab was a Lin county boy.

Next I saw a dead Indian lying on a hillside. I pointed him out to old Pepe, who shook his head. Then Lieutenant Ben Hardin came riding back on his big iron gray horse. The animal had been shot in the withers and the blood streaming down on the light colored horse looked bad. Old Pepe shook his head again. Nat Olney came along going to the front. He said: "Things were getting hot as hell on ahead. Old Pepe asked if Olney was good and smiled when I told him he was.

As we rode along one of the Indians told Keith that he was Neg Perce's 15 year old; that he had come down after some horses, but the Cayuses would not let him return home.

WEDDINGS

Betts-Bartman

When he was unable to establish Hood River as the residence of his bride for the past six months, George W. Betts, formerly a Portland bond broker, was married to Miss Minnie Bartman at the county clerk's office Tuesday morning. City Marshal Carson interceded in behalf of the applicant to wed, and after a visit to the office of District Attorney Derby, the marriage permit was secured. Mr. Carson escorted the couple to the office of Justice of the Peace Onthank and they were made happy.

The bride recently arrived in Canby from Kansas. Mr. and Mrs. Betts say they contemplate making their home in Hood River.

Onthank-Taylor

News has just been received here of the wedding in Portland Saturday evening, February 2, of Donald Onthank, son of Judge and Mrs. A. W. Onthank, and Miss Vera Taylor, a former Albany girl. Dr. Montgomery, pastor of a Portland Presbyterian church, officiated.

Mr. Onthank, a graduate of the University of Oregon and a member of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, is now employed by the Williams and Stead Iron Co. in Ormege. He met his bride while attending college.

Slutz-Douglass

Delbert Slutz, member of Battery E, 60th Artillery Regiment, stationed at Fort Stevens, and Miss Eva Douglass were married Sunday, the young artilleryman having been granted a short furlough for his wedding. He hurried back to Fort Stevens immediately after the ceremony.

Young Slutz was formerly a member of 12th Co., O. C. A.

Lloyd E. Davis and Miss Rhoda Sims were married Monday at the Davidson Hill territorial parsonage. Rev. M. L. Hutton officiating.

CITIZENS ASKED TO BUY SMILEAGE

In accordance with the request of the State Director of the Smileage Book Campaign, I hereby proclaim the four days of February 18-21, inclusive, as Oregon Smileage week. Once more our people, who have always responded with more than their quota, are furnished the opportunity of giving their support to their enlisted men, and I would urge that the people of Hood River cheerfully take full advantage of this worthy opportunity.

Mayor of City of Hood River. The letter from the state director follows: "To the Honorable Mayor: The secretary of war has established by proclamation the four days of February 18 to 21, inclusive, as Oregon Smileage week. The undersigned has issued a call to all the citizens of this state to respond generously during this week to the appeal of the military entertainment council for the purpose of Smileage for soldiers.

"Our state has done nobly thus far in sending her young men into both branches of service. She has freely bought Liberty bonds, with which to provide funds for equipping these young men and sending them to the front. She has also supported the Red Cross. But we can't stop there. "We cannot stop without providing wholesome entertainment for the men of our armies and navies. The boys will need the kindly ministrations of an efficient organization which will insure so far as possible their safe return to us healthy not only in body, but in mind. That organization is the military entertainment council of the commission on training camp activities, officially appointed by the government as the one efficient body to perform this duty.

"The call is compelling and cannot be denied. Oregon's share of the $1,000,000 required for immediate military entertainment needs is $20,000. We can do it, and will do it, wherever every city, town, village and section of the state responds.

"We ask that every mayor by proclamation designate a group of his community to respond to this call."

Little Erma Louise Graham, four year old daughter of W. A. Graham, of Dallas was killed last week in Portland, when an Oregon Hotel bus was struck and overturned by an automobile driven by J. B. Lyons, of Silverton. Pauline, the lately injured child's little sister, was injured, and her aunt, Miss Margaret Graham, sustained painfully lacerated hands and other wounds made by flying glass.

Miss Graham was en route to Hood River with her mother, whose mother disappeared last September with E. E. Viers, of Portland. It was believed that the couple was drowned by the sinking of a small boat off Garibaldi, Ore., but later it was virtually established that they were not, but had probably eloped.

New Minister Here From Elmira

J. D. Lewellen, formerly pastor of the Methodist church at Elmira, Wn., has accepted a call to the Asbury Methodist church of this city. Mr. Lewellen succeeds Rev. E. H. Longbrake, who recently resigned the local pastorate to accept the call from a church in Wisconsin.

Mr. Lewellen has already arrived here, having preached his first sermon last Sunday.

Hill's Auto in Smash

M. M. Hill stopped his automobile at Union avenue and Broadway, in Portland, Sunday, according to an item in the Journal, because he saw a machine coming down the cross street at a fast clip. Another machine coming toward Hill had a collision with the fast moving machine and both of them crashed into Hill's machine and injured Mrs. George A. Bone, a passenger in Hill's car. The drivers of the other two cars were Arthur H. Schuller and David C. Wax.

Goldendale Defeated

In perhaps the most sensational game of basketball ever played here, the high school team last Saturday night defeated the Goldendale high school, score 36 to 32. Two weeks ago the local team was defeated by the Goldendale quintet by 105 to 2. The local girls' team also defeated the Goldendale girls 16 to 9.
