MEMORIAL MONUMENTS

The Saturday Evening Post boasts of several millions of subscribers. We believe the national publication has its full quota of readers here.

Within the past week we have had no less than 19 citizens call our attention to a recent Post editorial touching on the question of memorial monuments to our noble dead, those men who made the supreme sacrifice in putting an end to kaiserism.

WHY NOT?

Under the above caption Otis B. Tout, vice president of the California Press Association, according to the Pacific Printer, puts the question of advertising up to the railroads very forcibly and directly.

"In pre-war days the railroads were one of the newspapers' best advertisers."

"Under the government operation railroad advertising in newspapers is cut off."

"Now, in the director-general's information for the press," which of course, is for free publication, newspapers are advised of railroad excursion rates to different parts of the country in order to build up traffic.

"Freight and passenger rates have been increased 25 per cent—more than private management ever thought of asking."

"The newspapers are wondering how long it will be before the director-general uses legitimate advertising to build up the trade the roads now need."

"Why not advertise a little? The war is over and the newspapers have advertising space for sale and advertising is a legitimate expense of any up-to-date business."

THE ASSOCIATION AND THE INDEPENDENT APPLE SHIPPER

The other day we heard an independent apple shipper, so called, make the statement that he was a strong Association man.

We were a little in doubt at first as to whether he was sarcastic or crazy. It developed that he was only a little bonedhead.

"I believe the Association with its strength of cooperation is the best thing the Hood River valley has. It is one of my best assets. The Association, eliminating chaotic conditions that would otherwise surely prevail, holds an umbrella over me. I am an Association booster. And the Association should welcome the cooperation of bona fide independent interests, for it is likely always to be the case that a few growers are going to ship outside the cooperative institution. Legitimate independent sales agencies, while of course they expect to profit, can be of service to the valley by offering these outside shippers an outlet for their product."

We have with us now in the Saturday Evening Post Col. Henry Watterson, dean of American editors, who made the Louisville Courier-Journal famous. We have not read in recent years more interesting reminiscences. The Colonel, however, is rather frank, and it is likely that some of us, in these days of prohibition, may read with a little trepidation, fearing revelations about our forebears.

And Colonel Watterson almost came to Oregon at one time. He wonders what difference that might have made in his life. We wonder too.

Gardens may be late, but they will be better. You can not beat the weather now being given us for Hood River valley crop conditions. Snow at the Newell place, in the Upper Valley, is reported 12 inches deep. That early scare about a water famine has gone the way of nearly all such scares.

About the worst thing that can be said about the experiment station is that it has been largely the cause of many orchardists paying income taxes this year.

That the people of Hood River county may be correctly informed—County-Superintendent Gibson's salary has not been increased.

Working weather is on us. We will now hear less of talking and see more of doing.

The last call for income tax reports. Federal authorities will get you if you do not have it in by Saturday.

ROBERT BRUCE IS MAKING GOOD

As the result of perseverance and the development of an idea, Robert Bruce, former White Salmon orchardist, has become a leader in the motion picture world.

In letters to local friends Mr. Bruce states that he expects to leave soon for Europe, where he will direct the filming of scenic movies.

Mr. Bruce, a college man and a popular member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity, like many young orchardists who were unfamiliar with the work of developing an orchard, failed, and it was then that he got his big idea. He was inspired to transfer the lure and romance of the mountain to the screen.

When he had realized that he was not born as a rancher, Mr. Bruce used to visit this city and White Salmon and spend a week studying the moving pictures shown. After a winter spent in this manner and in studying the little moving picture literature then published, he hired a camera man and a cook and started out to secure scenic films according to his ideas.

After a few months he had finished photographing several thousand feet of Mount Adams and Columbia river scenery, found himself in Portland with but $50 to his name. He spent four months working his way across the continent with the pictures. He had hopes of interesting the Pathe company, but Chas. Pathe, after a glimpse, remarked that Americans did not know anything about the business, and ordered the reel to stop and remove the reel. Then Mr. Bruce spent two months getting a hearing with S. L. Rothapel, manager of the Strand Theatre. That interview made him, according to recent letters. In the past five years Mr. Bruce has filmed nearly 75 scenic pictures on the North American Continent. Because America's interest is going to be centered to a large extent on Europe following the great war, Mr. Bruce will leave for abroad soon.

Attesting the popularity and prominence of the young man, whose death resulted from a tragic accident last Thursday night, when the automobile in which she and her husband were motoring home from Portland, Oregon, on the Sandy river near the Portland Automobile club, all places of business were closed Tuesday afternoon during the hour of the funeral at the Anderson chapel, where the funeral services of Mrs. John R. Norton were held.

The news of the sad accident left a pall of grief over Hood River. Mr. Norton was returning home from an evening at a Portland theatre. It is not known how the accident occurred, but it is believed that the steering apparatus became disarranged. Mr. Norton felt the wheel turn in his grasp. He came to his senses swimming in the deep water. He was unable to find his wife and turned in an alarm for help. The body of Mrs. Norton was discovered the next morning. Mr. Norton sustained a number of painful bruises.

The very name of Sidney's "Arcadia" is romantic in the imagination, and its traditional place in our literature is unquestioned, writes George W. Curtis. In our day it is little read, nor is it a very interesting story. But under its quaint and courtly conceit its tone is so pure and lofty, its courtesy, and appreciation of women so hearty and honorable; it has so fine a moral atmosphere, such noble thoughts, such stately and beautiful descriptions, that to read it is like conversing with a hero. So there is no better reading than the "Defense of Poesy," that hymn of loyalty to intellectual beauty. Hallam well calls Sidney "the first good prose writer" in our language, and scarcely had he finished in his "Defense" an exquisite criticism of English poetry to that time than the full choir of Elizabethan poets burst into:

The songs that fill The spacious times of great Elizabeth With sounds that echo still.

In order to stimulate an interest in some of the live topics of the day among the pupils of our public schools the Women's club has appropriated a sum of $20, to be divided into six prizes for the best essays on the following subjects. In the high school the pupils are asked to write on one of the following questions:

"What Should be the Curriculum of the Future School Inclusive?"

"Should Immigration in the United States be Restricted?"

"Do Labor Organizations Solve the Problems of the Laboring Man?"

These essays are to contain not less than 800 nor more than 1000 words. They are to be written on legal paper and handed to teachers not later than two weeks after topic has been assigned. Prizes are to be awarded as follows: Five dollars for the first, three for the second and two for the third.

Three judges will be appointed and will be asked to grade 50 per cent on originality. In the seventh and eighth grades the topics will be:

"Roosevelt, the Ideal American."

"Wild Flowers of Hood River Valley."

"Foch, the World's Hero."

Prize money will be divided the same as in high school and the essays should contain not less than 600 nor more than 800 words. When work is completed teachers are asked to send essays to County Superintendent Gibson who will deliver them to the judges and report the decisions.

EARLY QUAKE RECALLED BY SMITH

While he professes no knowledge of Oregon earthquakes, E. L. Smith is reminded by an appeal of Dr. John Branner, geologist of Stanford University, for information on early day quakes in the Beaver state, of an interesting tremor at Olympia, Wash., more than 40 years ago.

"It was the most severe earthquake shock I ever felt," says Mr. Smith, who resided at Olympia with his family while secretary of Washington territory. "In fact there were two distinct heavy shocks."

"I was master of the Masonic lodge there at the time. E. P. Ferry, prominent in Washington history, was senior warden. We were initiating a candidate, who was at the altar when the first shock came. It startled us so that we ceased our work, and then in a few seconds the second shock rattled the building until I thought it would certainly fall. My home was only a few blocks away. It was built on high underpinning, and I was afraid that the quake might have shaken the building off its foundation. Hastily requesting the lodge to be at ease, I rushed from the building with my fellows and en route home overtook Mrs. Smith, who had been attending a choir practice nearby. We found our daughter, Jessie, now Mrs. J. E. Watt, with the other children gathered around her out in the middle of the street, all safe. Finding no damage I hurried back to the hall to close the lodge."

"In our alarm and hurry we forgot our candidate. He had been left all this time hoodwinked. I'll never forget when we gathered around him."

"You thought you'd scare me," he remarked, "but you didn't." He thought the earthquake shook a part of his initiation.

DR. RICHTER TO SPEAK HERE SOON

Dr. Louise Richter, until March 1 government lecturer to the women and girls of the country, speaks here under the auspices of the Oregon Social Hygiene Society Saturday at 3 p. m. in library hall and Sunday at 8 p. m. in the high school auditorium.

The army has been clean because of the educational program carried on by the medical department of the U. S. army. Every boy who entered the service was thoroughly instructed in the dangers of licentiousness and the benefits of clean living.

But the government felt that in educating these millions of young men it was doing only half of what it might do to mitigate the social evil. In order to obtain the greatest possible results in clean lives and happy homes the women must be educated equally with the men.

Therefore, the government organized a corps of 150 of the country's leading women physicians to take a social hygiene message to women and girls. These physicians were specially instructed in their work by the best authorities and they came before the country as the most competent group that could be obtained for the delivery of their message.

Oregon has had three of these physicians at different times during the past few months, but the influenza epidemic has prevented their reaching a very large proportion of the women and girls of the state. On March first the commission to which they were attached went out of existence and it seemed that the message they have would never be brought to many who would wish to hear it.

Very fortunately, however, the Oregon Social Hygiene Society has been able to arrange for Dr. Richter to remain in the state long enough to speak in the principal centers of population that have not previously had the benefits of her lectures.

There is no fact connected with the war of which Oregonians may feel more justly proud than of the record of her manhood and of the foresight that made such a result possible.

But with our pride comes a great sense of duty—the duty to keep Oregon in the proud position she holds—to keep her standing as a beacon to the rest of the world in its struggle for clean living.

It is hoped that every mother and every woman interested in understanding herself or her children will hear Dr. Richter while she is here.

Dr. Richter is a physician with 23 years' practice. She has been specially prepared by the war department to bring her message to women and girls and she speaks under the auspices of the Oregon Social Hygiene Society.

There will be no admission charge to the lecture and no collection will be taken.

In Some Town Over There is a Baby Who Can Live If You Say the Word. I sometimes picture it to myself this way. Suppose that somewhere down town in New York, or in Chicago or St. Louis, there were a huge auction room, where the lives of men and of little children were on sale. Suppose that every day the auctioneer's red flag hung out as a sign that on that day so many men were to be allowed to die; so many women; and so many little ones. Allowed to die, just for the lack of a few dollars. Just for the want of the little sum that would ransom them. Suppose that were the case, I say to myself; could I possibly stay away? Is there any argument I could give to myself that would keep me from going there day after day, and buying with all my power? Buying men and women and children, at that auctioneer's block, with the dollars that would mean life to them? It's not a very pretty picture; yet compared to the pictures that I have seen from stricken Armenia and Syria, it is almost beautiful. For men and women and children are dying over there—dying for the lack of sums that seem pitifully, miserably small. I am not rich, and I have all the little worries that are common to us middle class folks. Worries about next year's income tax; and about the future of business, and where my income will go to if such and such things take place. But I have a worse worry than that. The worry for what my conscience will say to me, if in this hour of the world's tribulation I do not do my share. The worry lest in my ears for the rest of my life there should be the cry of a man, or a woman, or a little child whose life I might have saved. For they are crying over there today, stretching out their weak, tired arms. And it's a marvellous thought to me, that modest as my income is, it's big enough to let me save the life of one of them—big enough to give me a man, or a woman, or a child who will never cease to be thankful that I did my part. They are waiting for our answer over there: yours and mine: A poor stricken man broken by the war; and a woman, weak from her struggle and terror; and a baby who can live and grow up into useful manhood or womanhood, if only you say the word.
