Reward for Lost Ram

Somewhere between the Columbia river and the wilds of Mount Hood there is roaming at will one fine yearling Australian ram; the lost sheep from the flock of one of my clients. Like some people, this ram is also rather different from most rams, i. e., he cares not for the society of his kind, but prefers to roam, rove, ramble about in the night season, stopping wherever it may please his ramship to abide for a little while, usually till the following night, then he departeth for pastures new.

This ram is a marked ram. You will know him by his very long fine tresses. You must not think him an ordinary sheep. His value lieth not so much in his Samson-like hair as in his prospective grandchildren. His owner has been far out on the hills, searching the thorny paths, but he leaveth not. If, perchance, he should breakfast at your back door, please capture him, lock him in your kitchen and immediately notify me by phone and a suitable reward is yours for the asking.

Washington to Fight Codling Moth

Codling moth can be eliminated from the commercial orchards of Washington in four years, according to a bulletin issued to the growers of White Salmon by M. L. Dean, chief of the state's division of horticulture. Mr. Dean states that demonstrative work in the Wenatchee district the past year leads him to believe that, if his department gets sufficient funds to put men in the fields, he can rid the tracts of the neighboring state of the destructive pest.

The subject will be discussed at a fruitgrowers' congress at Spokane December 1-5.

Mr. Blackman Reports Roads Good

County Commissioner Blackman, who arrived Thursday from Salem, piloting a Nash Quad truck the second of its kind allotted to Hood River county for highway work, declares that the worst stretch of highway between here and Salem was encountered between Cascade Locks and Hood River.

"And this short stretch is not what one would call bad road," says Mr. Blackman. "Altogether a drive up to Hood River from Salem isn't a bad day's outing. The good highways of Oregon are going to result in a closer acquaintanceship between the citizens of different communities."

Mrs. Lamont Praises Valley

Mrs. Elizabeth Lamont, of Portland, state inspector for the Woman's Relief Corps, was here Saturday on an official visit to Canby Corps. It was her first visit to Hood River. Mrs. Lamont, taken for a motor trip over the orchard district by Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Bartmess, lauded the autumntime scenery.

Mrs. Bentley was present at the Saturday meeting for the first time since attending the Columbus, O., national convention.

Gresham Ag. Students Here

C. P. Moffitt, in charge of Smith-Hughes agricultural work at the Gresham high school, accompanied by 27 of his students, spent Saturday with R. V. Wright, local Hughes-Smith man, on a tour of inspection of Hood River orchards, packing plants and storage plants and cider manufactories. Mr. Moffitt expects the trip here to fit his students to better care for their Willamette valley home orchards, he says.

Snow Last Week Extra Early

Apples of the Upper Valley and the heights of Underwood remaining unpecked Wednesday night of last week were covered with snow. While rain fell on the lower levels a heavy blanket of snow struck the fruit tracts of higher altitudes. Oldtime growers say the snow, which reached far down the lower levels, was one of the earliest on record here.

Ehreck Grows Big Carrots

Chas. Ehreck exhibited record large carrots last week. Some of the carrots, of the Chateaux variety, weighed 56 ounces. Mr. Ehreck says the roots are uniformly large and from a few rows he will secure enough to feed his cows and horses this winter. He states that he purchased the seed at the Franz hardware store.

Mrs. Larson Passes

The body of Mrs. Christina Larson, native of Denmark, who died last Thursday night at the home of her son, O. H. Larson, near Woodworth in the Upper Valley, was shipped to Madras Monday, where another son, T. W. Larson, resides, for interment. Mrs. Larson was 73 years old. The body was shipped by C. C. Anderson.

Auto Thefts Become Common

The thefts of automobiles here are on the increase, becoming weekly occurrences. Sunday night a touring car, the property of R. H. Weber, was stolen from in front of a hotel. Last week a roadster belonging to Walter R. Woolpert was stolen from a garage.

PEAR TREES WILL BE VERY SCARCE

F. A. Masee, nurseryman of the Central Vale district, states that the demand for Bose and d'Anjou pear trees will clean up the available supplies of Northwestern nurserymen before the first of the coming year.

"It seems that everybody who has any available land in fruit belts," says Mr. Masee, "is eager to plant it to Bose and d'Anjou pears. There is also a healthy demand for Bartlett's and stocks of this variety will be gone by spring."

Growers here have realized heavy profits from Bose and d'Anjou pears the past two years. The former variety will probably bring more than $1 per box this season.

Edward Moore Was Houston's Uncle

Edward Moore, who died last week in Portland from anthrax infection, was an uncle of E. E. Houston, of this city, it has just been learned. Mr. Moore was never a local restaurant man, but had retired from this business in California and was here engaged in the apple harvest on the East Side ranch of H. M. Vannier.

Press reports stated that Mr. Moore had contracted the fatal disease at a local barbershop. Mrs. Houston, however, says the infection must have come from a brush purchased at a 10 and 15 cent store.

"My husband's uncle was not accustomed to shave himself," says Mrs. Houston, "but when he went out to pick apples he bought a safety razor and a cheap brush. His face had already begun to swell when he came here and was shaved at a local barbershop."

Storm's Hurt Lingers

The Oregon-Washington Telephone Company's local and Odell exchanges have not recovered from the effects of a thunder storm last July that put a large number of telephones out of commission. Following a rain, since that date, many phones work erratically. The snow of Sunday interrupted the telephone system, even worse than rains.
