 Two citizens, J. H. Fredriey and W. J. Baker, have been victims of the epidemic of hemorrhage that has been prevailing at Pacific coast points. After several days of decided discomfort both men have recovered. Mr. Baker attributes his cure to a copious draught of cooking soda dissolved in pure lemon juice.
 Although many orchardists have been raising corn in fair acreage for the past five years, R. W. Butts is the first man ever to advertise sale of surplus corn in the book. The corn was grown on the West Side place of Mr. Butts' father, the late A. Butts, who passed away last summer. The young man, Mr. Butts, here from Chicago, looking after the estate, is offering the corn for sale.

WOOD SHORTAGE PROVES A WORRY

Not only are residents of the city alarmed over the wood and coal shortage, but many valley orchardists are seeking to replenish their fuel piles.
 "We in our neighborhood burn as much coal annually," says G. A. Hoffman, of the Odell district, "as we do wood. We have a supply of wood, but it will be gone soon unless we can get coal. I have been trying to buy fuel from Hood River dealers but they cannot supply me."
 Except for slabwood, furnished from the Oregon Lumber Company's plant at Dec, a wood shortage is already prevailing here. The slab supply will end when the lumber concern shuts down. Wood cut in the valley last summer was below the average. However, many ranchers have surplus stocks of fuel, but this will not be available until the growers complete their apple hauling.
Heavy Rains Hit Valley
 A heavy rainfall Sunday and Sunday night, totalling 1.95 inches, put Hood River at flood stage for this season of the year. The river, rising very rapidly, reached the stage of 5.20 feet Monday. Winter frosts, however, have taken the flood crest to nine feet. While a heavy downpour of rain fell on lower levels Monday morning, the precipitation of orchard districts higher up the valley was mixed snow and rain.
 The rain softened orchards and made hauling of fruit from field to packing house a difficult task. Most apples, however, have been transported to shelter.

Report Incorrect, Says Vannier

Tracing a report to the effect that Edward Moore, who died recently in Portland from anthrax, contacted the infection from a horse on the place of a local orchardist, County Health Officer Edgington ascertained that Mr. Moore had been working for H. M. Vannier. The report was to the effect that Mr. Moore had contracted anthrax from a trough where a sick horse had previously drunk.
 Mr. Vannier, here on grand jury service, however, says that he has had no sick horse. He also states that Mr. Moore never used water for shaving from a stock trough.

Circuit Court Postponed

Because of the rush of apple harvest Judge Wilson, here yesterday to convene the grand jury, postponed the regular session of trial court, called for next Monday, until Monday, December 1.
 The jury yesterday had for consideration the case of Luther Fagen, charged with an attempt at criminal assault.

Big Aeroplane Seen

A huge bi-plane, the largest aircraft ever seen by local folk, passed over Hood River at 8 a. m. yesterday. The machine, at an elevation estimated by former aircraft army men at 4,000 feet, was presumably that of an aviator bound from Canada to the Mexican border, who landed Sunday at The Dalles.

Red Cross Will Drive for 1920

The Hood River county drive for 1920 Red Cross membership will probably be postponed until the first week in December.
 "We believe it would be very inadvisable to start a drive for 1920 members now," says E. G. Hancher, "but as soon as the apple harvest is out of the way we feel that we can raise our quota without any trouble."

Major Carroll Returns

Phillip H. Carroll, former Portland man, who owns an Oak Grove Hood River valley orchard, has returned from overseas duty. Mr. Carroll, who had had a West Point training, was awarded a captaincy at a Fort Ord training camp for officers. He was promoted to a majority. Because of his knowledge of French, having attended school in France, Maj. Carroll was early sent abroad. After the armistice he was sent to Nice to look after officers and men of the expeditionary forces in southern France on leave.

SPORTSMEN EAT CHINA PHEASANTS

Weather conditions eliminated bear steak and fried trout from the menu of the banquet held last night by members of the Game Protective Association in honor of the State Fish and Game Commissioners Jack, Stone, Warren and Fleishner. State Game Warden Shoemaker, State Master Fish Warden Clanton, State Biologist Finley and Game Warden Hadley. China pheasants, however, were served in plentiful number, and the 75 guests present had their fill of the delicious young birds.
 For the past several days enthusiastic hunters, members of the association, had visited the valley's favorite pheasant haunts, and a fair deluge of handsome Mongolians were poured in on Chas. Gunn, Chinese chef at the Mount Hood hotel, who prepared the feast. Pheasants were killed for the occasion by Alva L. Day, J. H. Fredriey, Sol. J. Spear, F. G. Lindsay, G. H. Rhoades, Ivan T. Scheer, A. R. Cruikshank, E. A. Earl and Edgar Franz and W. D. Ellis. Geo. L. Slocum was in charge of the banquet. Rev. W. H. Boddy was toastmaster. Addresses were delivered by the visitors and J. H. Fredriey paid a tribute to the late D. McDonald, continuously president of the organization from the time of its founding until his death recently.
Ditch Company Prepares
 The directorate of the Farmers' Irrigating Co., the system of which waters a large section of the West Side orchard district, held a preparedness meeting Monday completing plans for bringing the fumes laterals and ditches to a high state of efficiency for next season. The ditch company has just completed piers for a steel bridge spanning Hood river near their headquarters. The new structure has been shipped and will be in place within the next two weeks. The bridge work and added steel flumes will cost approximately $5,000.
Motor Trucks Mash Up Roads
 With the increased use of motor trucks for transporting apples, county officials see the need for greater permanency in highway construction. While the valley roads held up well during the dry season, the heavy travel of big motor trucks is cutting them up very badly.
 The weight of the motor trucks also requires the building of better culverts and bridge approaches than were necessary for the former lighter traffic.
School Children Increase
 M. H. Nickelsen, veteran school clerk here, has just completed his census of school children in the town. He reports a total of 931. The report indicates a gain of 49 over the census of last year.
