Mr. and Mrs. Fred Evans and sons started Sunday morning early for Kansas City in the Hippublock. They expect to camp along the way and make a few stops, the first one to be in Utah with a relative.

Mrs. H. H. Neilson returned Friday from The Dalles, where she had been in attendance at the teachers' examination.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Prohaska, of Portland, spent last Saturday and Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ginger.

Robert W. Simpson returned home Friday from a three weeks' visit in Portland, where he enjoyed the Shriner's convalesce and the Rose Festival. He then went with a party to Pacific Beach, Wash. for a couple of days' stay, where they had sport getting clams and crabs. Returning he stopped over one night in Centralia, where he had a pleasant visit with Lee Hunter, who showed him through the automobile plant where he works.

Word recently received from Hans Kollandsrud states that he is now located at Eugene, where he will be employed in the cannery business for the summer.

The new schoolhouse in Mosier is now assuming shape. The cement was poured for the foundation work last week, and at the present time the tilting is being laid for the first story.

Monument Suggestion Made

July 4, 1920.

Editor Glacier: I noticed in the July 2 issue of the Oregonian that the government is donating guns and howitzers to army posts, soldier monuments, etc., throughout the country. Now here is a solution of our war memorial problem. Coupled with a suitably engraved brass plate, what more appropriate memorial could be had? There should even be a balance to donate to the Legion from funds now available.

Yours truly,

P. L. Manser.

Tires and Common Sense

"When you run across a man who has a record of 10,000 miles on one set of tires, the chances are that you have found a man who has common sense in his treatment of the part of his car equipment," said H. R. Field, local Firestone dealer.

"When such a man puts on a tire," says Mr. Field, "you may be sure he scrapes out all the rust and dirt from the rim so that the tire sets properly. He also uses plenty of soapstone or powdered mica on the rims, so that the tire beads slip into the right set."

"POLLYANNA" TO BE PRESENTED

Pauline Lucile Mayo Gives Popular Play at Chautauqua.

No book or play of recent years has won more friends and admirers than Eleanor H. Porter's "Pollyanna." On the fifth afternoon of Chautauqua Pauline Lucile Mayo, one of the foremost readers and dramatic interpreters of the American platform, is to present this story of "the glad game" in monologue, portraying every character with the consummate artistry for which she is noted.

Clipped Here and There

The extent of and very serious consequences bound to come from the Japanese invasion of the Pacific coast states is very forcibly brought to our attention by an article in the Sacramento Bee. After the Japs have secured control of 85 per cent of the bearing orchards and berry acreage in a county, it is too late for the few whites left to do anything except move out and let them have the other 15 per cent.

With the Japs so strongly entrenched already in California and Washington it is only a question of a few years before our grand old state will no longer be what we are proud to call it—"A White Man's Country." The fore-runners of this invasion are already here by the hundreds in the truck and berry patches around Portland and the apple and berry districts of Hood River. Soon there will be thousands where there are now hundreds.

Their recent attempt to colonize in the fertile potato section of Crook and Deschutes counties was frustrated by an awakened public opinion. Hood River is also awake and every other section should be.—The Oregon Grower

One of the great drawbacks to the apple exporting business in this country is the enormous losses shippers have sustained because of smashed packages at time of delivery in the European markets. This is particularly true of boxed apples. The following which is written for The Packer by a representative of the railway interests of the United Kingdom, should be read carefully and thoroughly digested by American boxed apple shippers: During recent years the apples packed and shipped to the British Isles, have in a large number of instances, been received by the railway companies at ports in that territory from trans-Atlantic steamship lines in deplorably bad condition. The consignees, in the absence of full information, naturally turn on the English Railway Company who actually delivers the fruit at destination. The English railway managers during a recent session, October, 1918 to March, 1919, announced that over 1,300 claims amounting to about 1,500 pounds ($6,000) were made upon their companies for alleged damage and short deliveries on apples emanating from box apple territory in California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, New Mexico and Colorado. The English railway managers have announced that while they do not want to curtail the business, they must insist for their own protection on better and stronger packing for this fruit, the consequence of it being unprofitable considering the number of claims that pile up from con-signees. Before taking any drastic action, they are desirous of giving the matter the widest publicity with the view of inducing senders on this side to strengthen the container. They state a packing case from America used in addition to stronger wood for the boxes (a) elimination of the top bulge on the boxes, which usually runs one and one-quarter to one and one-half inches above the ends; the bulge, given to avoid complaints of slack pack hardly serves the same purpose in the case of export shipments as on local trade and is a somewhat costly plan of showing full measure. (b) Boxes should be wired around each end; this has in practice proved beneficial. (c) Boxes should be made of stouter and better seasoned wood, special attention being given to boxing apples intended for export. It hardly can be expected that a box just strong enough to protect goods intended for domestic delivery will be strong enough to hold the goods intact through all the handling incident to ocean conveyance as well as rail haulage on two continents.—The Packer.
