SAUTE THE FLAG

Even though it was out of ignorance that practically 90 per cent of those viewing the parade Monday failed to uncover the passing of the flag, it is hard to excuse the action. On numerous occasions, instructions on proper greeting of the flag on parade have been printed, but Monday paraders and spectators appealed that people uncover during the passing of the flag, and still a large part of those viewing the parade remained with their hats on. Revere and respect the flag. Teach it to the children. One of the most impressive sights we saw Monday was a little 3-year old boy removing his hat when the flag passed.

THE CRAWFORD CASE

Perhaps in all the annals of Oregon courts there has never been a more peculiar case than that of R. C. Crawford, who was released Tuesday by act of the grand jury from charges brought for alleged misappropriation of funds from his fellow faculty member, W. R. Bailey, of the high school. It is not our purpose to go into the intricacies of the case, for there would be too many, for one thing. It is interesting, however, to consider how people, grown suspicious, will accept rumors as facts. Mr. Crawford himself, by a failure to communicate with local folk after he had left here last February, left a doubt that grew wholesome. Practically all who had discussed his case, taking for granted all the stories of defenses that were circulated, concluded that he must be guilty. It was only on his return that the charges began to collapse.

It is human nature to feel a soreness at those who may have wronged us, even though the acts may have resulted innocently. We feel that all in Hood River who drew erroneous conclusions about Mr. Crawford will be glad to render him aid in reestablishing himself. He must remember that he himself as a result of his own negligence in a failure to communicate with Hood River people left wide the doors for the suspicious that attached. "All's well that ends well." In such a philosophic strain should he consider his case and strive to forget the unpleasant months just past, and others will do likewise.

K. OF P. BAND

Let it be emphasized as powerfully as possible that the K. of P. band did its bit in making the Fourth celebration a real one. The Knights of Pythias deserve public thanks of Hood River county for their zeal and perseverance in establishing their band.

Hood River is in the class of fools and drunk men. They escape disaster when others would meet it face on. Firecrackers were burned indiscriminately here Sunday and Monday. Many expected the sounding of the fire alarm momentarily, but luck was with us, and, except for a grass fire on the Serpentine road Monday morning, not a fire occurred during the celebration.

Some of our Oregon towns are snorting loudly over the census report. The Dalles is in a huff and contemplates calling for a recount. Medford, losing several thousand residents since 1910, according to the federal census, is in a great stew. We hope none of our citizens have to join the rank of grumblers when our census is announced.

To those who may have a little ready cash and may be tempted to fall for the alluring tales of oilstock or mining promoters we offer this little advice: Buy Liberty or Victory bonds instead. The bonds are now selling at a price that offers a safe and handsome return.

The members of the Legion committee who had charge of the celebration Sunday and Monday are to be congratulated.

We have seen larger parades than that last Monday, but none better.

The eyes of the nation are certainly on Ohio.

Don't forget the Chautauqua. It will open with a rush today.

Negroes Plead Not Guilty

Ole Brown, charged with the murder of Otis Mayes, O. W. R. & N. Irwin, sometime ago, and Council Oliver, held as an accessory after the fact, were arraigned before Judge Wilson Friday afternoon at The Dalles and pleaded not guilty. The men will be arraigned Tuesday, July 20, before Judge Wilson.

When the men were arraigned they waived preliminary hearings and pleaded not guilty to the crime of murder with which they were charged.

R. K. Butler appeared as counsel for Brown, while Carlton L. Pepper handled the interests of Oliver.

The trial will be one of the most important held in the county for some months as the murder of Mayes has attracted much attention. A large number of witnesses will be subpoenaed and give testimony for the prosecution.

C. I. Yeoman's Mother Passes

Funeral services for Agnes Ellen Yeoman, native of Indiana, aged 72, who died Tuesday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. S. M. Hill, of Dukes Valley, will be held tomorrow 10 a. m. at the Anderson chapel. Interment will follow at Idleville cemetery.

RECREATIONISTS GO TO SEE MOUNTAIN

The largest crowd ever at Cloud Cap Inn at one time visited the mile high resort Monday. Heat Rogers reports that 60 automobiles negotiated the steep forest road. Recreationists visited forest points, picked wild flowers and explored the glaciers. But two visitors, L. J. Merrill, Mosier banker, and a brother from Camas, Wash., ascended the mountain. They made a successful ascent with George Miller as guide. Mr. Miller says that climbing conditions are good, and frequent ascents will be made from now on.

A party of 15, chiefly University of Oregon students, the first of the season to reach the summit from the north side, climbed the mountain Sunday with Mark Weygandt as guide. The party consisted of the following: Mr. Minnie J. Vonder Ahe, Misses Louise Vonder Ahe, Ardis Callison, Catherine Carter, Margaret Berry, Ellen McCurdy, Betty Epping, and Howard Cooper, Frank and Carl Vonder Ahe, Roy Miller, Neal Nunamaker, Edwin Sonnichsen and Charles Higgins.

Mr. Rogers reports that numerous parties are visiting Elk Meadows. Floyd Hess, professional packer of the district, escorted a party of Portland folk to the spot, east of the snow peak for a recreation Sunday and Monday. The outing party returned to Mount Hood Lodge by way of Newton Clark and Elliot Glaciers.

FIFTY-SIX LETTERS DELIVERED BY AIR

The first aerial mail of this city arrived on schedule time Monday morning. The pilot of an Oregon, Washington and Idaho Aeroplane Co. dipped to an improvised landing field just west of the city, handing a bag, containing letters from the Portland Chamber of Commerce to 56 local merchants, to John Volstorff, and was off again heading to The Dalles and other eastern Oregon and Washington cities. Mr. Volstorff, who received the mail for Postmaster Reavis, hurried to his postoffice by automobile.

The letters carried invitations to Portland's eighth annual Buyers' Week, to be held August 9 to 14, inclusive.

COUNCIL IGNORES OWNERS' PROTEST

The city council has declined to observe a remonstrance of a majority of the property owners on the west end of Oak street, which connects with the Columbia highway, and has declined on paving the street. It is said that 85 per cent of the owners signed a remonstrance. Others who failed to sign are protesting the proposed improvement, which is declared unnecessary. The property owners are appealing to the city to postpone the improvement until labor and material return to normal costs.

The action of the council, it is said, may lead to litigation.

Street Improvement Protested

Hood River, Or., July 7, 1920. Hood River has not grown in proportion to other Oregon towns in the last six years, in spite of its acknowledged attractions and advantages of climate and scenery. While several explanations might be given for this situation, the primary reason has been high taxes and increased expenditures for public improvements at a time when labor and material are at almost prohibitive cost. Other towns are doing without, just as sensible individuals, until normal times return. Hood River would do well to follow this same and safe course.

The pushing of street improvements onto property owners under existing economic conditions is very shortsighted, for it frightens away possible investors and seriously affects home building, which is the basis of city building. All indirectly affects local lumber situation, which is one of our assets.

When some small property owners freely confess that it will be cheaper to let the city take their homes than to continue to pay taxes and for unnecessary street improvements, it is a condition not very hopeful of the future. A little waiting may be wise for the best business interests of Hood River.

Two Arrests Monday

But two arrests marred the peace of the celebration Monday. Jack Price and his cousin, "Blondie" Price, were arrested for alleged intoxication. Marshals Frazier and Hart found the former at the open air dancing pavilion, maddened, but harmless. They had scarcely escorted him a half block to the city lockup and returned when Mr. Frazier met the cousin, called Blondie.

He was in the climactic stages of a jag, it is stated, and he was inquiring for his cousin. Mr. Frazier took him at once to join Jack. He states that the aroma of the boys' breath indicated that they had secured their jags from heavy draughts of hard cider.

Miss Davidson Lost Lake Booster

So enthusiastic was Miss Mae Davidson on her return from a visit to the forested area over the Fourth that she immediately tendered a check for $5 to the Hood River Game Protective Association for developing the Lost Lake road.

"We need this road for our own recreation," says Miss Davidson. "The highway is congested on week ends usually. There is no reason why we should not go for our outing to our own beautiful spot. The country is now wonderful with rhododendron blooms."

City Acquires Heat Cubes

The city now has enough alcohol heat cubes to cook numerous dinners. The preparation was taken from Indians here engaged in berry harvest, who used the cubes for making cocktails. Scores of Indians secured hot jags from the cubes. Physicians and authorities consider it a miracle that no fatalities resulted. No whites, as yet, it is reported, have attempted any of the heat cubes as potent beverages.

Abandoned Car Found

West Side residents last week reported to Deputy Sheriff Hughes that a '20 automobile had been abandoned near the home of R. H. Wallace. The car carried Oregon license tag No. 44700. This, however, was issued to the owner of a Chevrolet automobile.

Mr. Hughes reported the find to authorities of neighboring towns in an effort to locate the owner of the abandoned machine.

B. H. CONKLE IS NEW H. R. H. S. PRINCIPAL

A. M. Cannon, formerly of Portland schools, who arrived the first of the week to assume his duties as superintendent of city schools, has announced that B. H. Conkle, who for the past several years has been principal of the Enterprise high school, has been appointed principal of the local school. Conkle succeeds R. H. Bailey, Mr. Cannon's predecessor in E. T. Robinson. Both these educators will leave for Centralia, where they have accepted positions with the city school board. Other high school teachers named are: Evangeline Husbands, Celia Hunnery, Edna Wiseman, Mrs. C. H. Henne and R. V. Wright, present incumbents, and Maybelle Phillips, former Parkdale teacher, who will have charge of mathematics; Earl E. Fleischman, Latin and athletics, of Pendleton; R. C. Goodman, manual training, of Portland. Three places, assistant commercial, science and domestic arts, are to be filled.

Mr. Cannon, who secured temporary quarters at the home of Mrs. Wiseman, on Pine street, is now busy trying to locate a home. He and Mrs. Cannon have a family of four children. Mr. Cannon, a native of Alabama, came to Hood River highly recommended. He had valuable experience in Portland schools. During and immediately after the war he was in charge of community war work at Camp Lewis.

OUTING PARTY SEES SIX SNOW PEAKS

An outing party visiting Wahtum Lake Monday reports sighting Mount Baker. The recreationists left here Saturday, going to Herman creek on the Highway by automobile. They spent the first night at Eight Mile camp. Sunday night was spent on the shores of the lake.

"It was magically clear Monday morning," says Harry Farrell, a member of the party, "and we got a fine view of six snow peaks. The fourth distant peak of the north between Rainier and St. Helena puzzled us. We could only suppose that it was Mount Baker. Mount Adams and Mount Hood loomed up like giants so clear was the atmosphere. We returned down Eagle creek taking a train home. The mountains were beautiful. We found plenty of snow on Indian Mountain.

The personnel of the party was: Mr. and Mrs. Van W. Gladden, Mrs. Elizabeth Bell, Misses Freddie Baker, Alta McFarland Katherine Mende, Marjorie Pines, Yvonne Jarrett and Hazel Erchinger and Sidney J. Carnine, Herbert Nichols, William Sylvester, and Harry Farrell. The party carried Peggy, Mr. Gladden's dog, with them in order to prevent the bad luck of 13.
