INTERMARRIAGE OF RACES

George Shima, known as the Japanese potato king, who Monday, before the congressional committee investigating the Japanese problem of California, advocated intermarriage between whites and Japanese, turned water to the wheel of the Pacific Coast Anti-Asiatic Association. In communities where Japanese so far are no more than a novelty, the Association has found it difficult to get people to consider their urging. Shima's suggestion will arouse thought as nothing Senator Phelan or any other anti-Japanese citizen has done or said.

The white race and the Japanese race are entirely different. The very fact that the two cannot intermarry is in our estimation the overshadowing reason why Japanese immigration should be stopped short off. There can be no assimilation of the two. We believe Shima made his suggestion in a facetious mood. But the nation will take him seriously. Indeed, we are glad he made it, for it will hasten a definite settlement of the question of Japanese immigration. We wonder how white mothers would feel if they thought they might some day have Japanese for sons-in-law. The two races are different, as are the whites and negroes, and who would suggest intermarriage of whites and blacks?

From another standpoint Shima's remarks are to be regretted. Japanese in this country should be accorded fair and just treatment. In most instances they have amassed whatever fortunes they may have by industry and frugality. But for that very danger of two peoples of distinctly different racial traits and the impossibility of assimilation we would welcome the Japanese to our land. The Japanese that we now have with us are worthy of our esteem. Such advocacy as that of Shima, however, is liable to create dissension and bring about a racial hostility leading to trouble in some of the sections of California where Japanese have settled thickly.

We do not anticipate any discord between Japanese and whites in Hood River. While we believe it is the predominant feeling among local citizens that Japanese immigration here should cease, Hood River men and women, as has been demonstrated in the recent past, are going to give Japanese just and fair treatment.

ROAD SIGNS

We have heard much of lack of road signs lately. It appears that it is a general Oregon lack of foresight. Klickitat county has provided comprehensive signs at all crossroads. While the homes of that county are far apart, the signs that have been placed preclude any motorist going astray. The Oregonian had some rather interesting comments on this point the other day.

Recent legislation gave to the state highway commission a title of twenty-five cents from every auto license fee, for purpose of establishing adequate road signs. Thus far the commission has not availed itself of the funds provided, and doubtless delays in the program of sign planting until such time as the highway projects are completed and made permanent. The criticism of the motorists toward such a course is that, under existing circumstances, when many roads are not clearly defined as main thoroughfares, the need for guidance is greater than ever. And they ask for sign boards, cheap and transitory, to render the motorist service in this hour of trial.

It is perhaps true that the motoring tourist occasionally challenges adventure by testing strange roads, but in most instances he is lured for some definite point, and his itinerary requires that he reach it on a given day. Instances are plentiful, say the petitioners for sign boards, when California tourists have been lost for hours in the mazes of central Oregon, and have traveled 80 miles or more out of the course. Such incidents do not tend to popularize motoring in Oregon, and tend color to the plaint of those who are asking for immediate installation of a system of road signs.

But signs should not merely be limited to the highways under jurisdiction of the State Highway Commission. A unified state system should be inaugurated for use of all counties in marking all road intersections.

We ask that you recall that it was not so long ago when they burned witches in Massachusetts before you read the following taken from the Dumb Brutes, published in Boston, which almost accuses the Pacific Northwest of being uncivilized:

It seems incredible that a civilized state like Washington will permit the cruelties connected with the "rodeo" and round-up exhibitions. The law of the state, if enforced, would eliminate the brutalities of these performances. The public opinion that sanctions and encourages such shows is a discredit to that great state. Now that the exhibitions have been filmed and are being produced in the east at moving picture houses, the virus of these cruelties must steadily spread from its western source. While no New England state, we believe, would allow these barbarous performances to be given within its borders, it can scarcely prevent their representation on the screen.

The Non-Partisan League, it appears, has won a victory at the polls in North Dakota again. After an analysis, however, it will be seen this was but a national recurrence. The idealistic agriculturists of that region (in plain English a bunch of bonheaded farmers) have not yet been aroused to the fact that they are being milked by the shrewd leaders of the party. It may be some time yet before Non-Partisanism will blow up. Before the end comes it may have fastened its talons into the social fabric of other states. As surely as night follows day, the organization is going to tumble. Its tumble will be hard, for the ingredients of some of its principles are almost like gun cotton. The regrettable part about it is that a lot of innocents are going to be wounded.

THE CHAUTAUQUA

Thanks to the efforts of the progressive body of citizens who made the chautauqua possible and who will bring it here next year. Every program was well worth while. We know of no commodity that is now so cheap as a chautauqua season ticket. The man or woman who didn't get four-fold returns on his $2.50 has something wrong with him. Some of the single entertainments were worth the full price.

It is going to come to pass some morning that the coroner may have to be called to take charge of the remains on Cascade avenue and the Highway. It is very likely a temptation to take to the road when it is not crowded, but some of the early morning cars are being hurried along faster than the makers ever intended them to go. It may come to pass that some bold driver may repeat the performance of the man who went over Niagara Sunday.

The United States has tasted the victory of the Prohibitionists and have found it sweet, according to Pussfoot Johnson, recent Portland visitor. Mr. Johnson is now ambitious to sweeten the world. We predict success, now that Kentucky is in the dry lists.

Charles G. Stephens, of Bristol, Eng., was killed Sunday when he went over Niagara Falls in a barrel. St. Peter was ready with a dunce cap on his arrival at the Pearly Gates.

Shortage of sugar will not prevent the canning of vegetables. String beans are about ready. Fill your shelves with all the jars you can get hold of.

The rain may have split a few cherries, but its benefits cannot be estimated. It has been worth a great deal in ending the beginnings of forest fires.

The chautauqua entertainers this year formed a kind of Kentucky Kick.

The Third Party, it seems, wants to jineyize the nation.

THE GREETERS PAID A VISIT YESTERDAY

The Oregon Hotelmen's Association sent a delegation to Hood River yesterday to glimpse the beauties of scenic points and mingle with local folk. The visitors arrived at the Nickelsen corner on the Highway at 10.30, where they were met by a delegation of local men.

Matrimonial Perseverance

Matrimonial perseverance is the way County Clerk Shoemaker characterizes the wedding Monday of John Armstrong, Yamhill county man, aged 75, and Mrs. Annie Lockwood. When asked by Mrs. Shoemaker if they had ever before been married, Mr. Armstrong stated that yesterday's event was his fourth wedding. Mrs. Lockwood, who has been residing at the hotel where they were married, stated that she had been married twice before.

Liberty Installs Big Fan

Probably the largest electric fan on a motor-driven ventilating system in Oregon has just been installed at the Liberty theatre. The huge fan, placed in the attic of the building is six feet high. It is possible to change the air of the building every 80 seconds, as the fan can pump in or out 60,000 cubic feet a minute. By a system of chutes the ventilating system can secure its fresh air through the basement or from the roof of the structure.

Dynamite to Remove Trees

Orchardists are considering use of dynamite in removing apple trees killed by the hard freeze of last December. S. J. Frank, representative of the Trojan power company, states that a demonstration will be held Monday afternoon on the East Side place of A. L. Mason. An expert will be in charge. Representatives of the experiment station have recommended that trees, absolutely dead or hopelessly injured, be removed from the orchards. Gordon G. Brown says the removal of the trees will have a good psychological effect on growers.

Wheat Grower Seeks Help

J. U. Leonard, wheat rancher of Kent, is here visiting his father, H. B. Leonard, and securing help for his harvest, which, he says, will begin about August 1.

The rain, prevailing over a large part of eastern Oregon and Washington, according to Mr. Leonard, completely missed the Kent section. "I do not fear a labor shortage this season," declared Mr. Leonard. "Help is already coming in in fair numbers."

Complaint Dismissed

On motion of Judge Derby, a complaint that had remained on the docket of Justice of the Peace Onthank against R. C. Crawford was dismissed Saturday.

Pan Car Agency

An agency for the famous Pan Car for Hood River and vicinity will be established at once. Responsible parties interested in same, communicate by wire with Pan Sales Company, 48 East 3rd St., Portland, Oregon.

GASOLINE SHORTAGE PROMOTES WALKING

Without gasoline since Friday, Hood River for the most part began walking Tuesday. The Standard Oil Co. expected the arrival of a tank car Monday night. Garage men tried vainly to buy gasoline from independent dealers in Portland to relieve the local shortage. Eight motoring families from out of the state were stranded without gasoline at the automobile camping park.

A measure relief for the gasoline shortage was given by the Standard Oil Co. yesterday when allotments of 100 gallons each were made to garages and service stations. Car owners lined up at stations and within 30 minutes all allotments had been distributed. Even under the allotment system the 6,000 gallons received Tuesday night by the Standard Oil Co. will last only a few days, and dealers state that they are negotiating with independent oil concerns for a tank car of gasoline to be delivered the latter part of this week.

WEDDINGS

Allen-Brock

Local friends have just received news of the wedding in Seattle, at high noon last Thursday, of Miss Lillian Brock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V. C. Brock, and John W. Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Allen, of this city. Both are graduates of the Hood River high school. The bride attended the University of Oregon, where she was a member of Gamma Phi Beta sorority. Mr. Allen, an overseas veteran, having been a member of the 66th Coast Artillery, was a student at the University of Washington. He is now assistant cashier of the Redmond National Bank. After a short visit in Portland and other places he and his bride have left for Redmond to make their home.

The wedding occurred at the home of the bride's brother, E. C. Brock, in Seattle. The bride and parents formerly resided here but have been making their home in Seattle recently. Mr. Brock having resigned from the assistant cashier of the First National Bank here to become an appraiser for the Spokane Federal Land Bank.

Both Mr. Allen and his bride are popular and held in highest esteem in Hood River. A host of friends, joined by the Glacier, extend congratulations and best wishes for all the joyful events of the matrimonial sea.

Rev. Dr. Miles, of the First Presbyterian church, read the service in the presence of the immediate family and a few close friends. Preceding the ceremony Mrs. R. V. Sprague sang "Because," by Guy D'Ardelet. The bride wore a becoming gown of white georgette and a corsage of orchids and Cecil Bruner roses. The attendants were Miss Alice Denney, maid of honor, and Carl Smith, a fraternity brother of the bridegroom, best man. Mrs. Allen went to Seattle a year ago to continue the study of music, specializing in pipe organ work.

Following the marriage ceremony an informal luncheon was served by the bride's mother, assisted by Mrs. E. C. Brock and Mrs. A. C. Hoodenpye. The dining room was made attractive with large bowls of pink sweet peas and white roses.

Klossner-Hinrichs

Local friends have just received news of the wedding at Pullman, Wash., Wednesday, June 16, of Miss Alma Hinrichs, sister of Ralph Hinrichs, of the Barrett district, and Eric Klossner, of Pullman. A two weeks' honeymoon was spent at the home of the groom's father, Hugo Klossner, of Eureka, Mont. The wedding comes from a war romance begun at the Puget Sound naval hospital, where Mr. Klossner was a member of the naval hospital unit and his bride a Red Cross nurse.

Mr. and Mrs. Klossner will make their home at Pullman, where Mr. Klossner is a forist.

Bailey-Vaughan

Friends have just learned of the wedding at Stevenson July 3, of Miss Ruth Vaughan, and William Bailey, of the post office force. The two young people were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Clapp, of Jamar. Mrs. Clapp is an aunt of the bride. Rev. Ewing, pastor of the Stevenson Presbyterian church, officiated.

Mr. Bailey is an overseas veteran, having been a member of the 65th Coast Artillery. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bailey. Mrs. Bailey, who will continue teaching at the Barrett school this year, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Vaughan. Her father is superintendent of warehouses for the Apple Growers Association.

The wedding of Oliver L. Covey, of Waco county, and Miss Bertha McFarlin occurred here last Thursday. Justice of the Peace Onthank officiated. They will make their home in Waco county.

HOOD RIVER OREGON The PARIS FAIR HOOD RIVER OREGON

FINS, FURS AND FEATHERS

Dr. N. Plyler tells the prize hard luck story of this district. He and a companion, motored to a remote mountain district of southern Oregon for recreation several years ago. As a result of tire trouble they arrived after dark at the camp ground near a big spring.

"We were just about as thirsty mortals as ever existed," says Dr. Plyler, "and were ready to gulp huge cooling swallows out of the spring, when we smelled something. Investigating we found a dead horse partly in the spring. It might not have been so bad if the spring had not plunged underground right away. Running on top of the ground the water would have purified itself after a short distance. As it was underground it was six miles to the nearest water."

"But we set out along a ravine, covered over with underbrush. I held a candle and my friend walking in front searched along the bottom. In little depressions we were able to dip up about a quart of water in a small pail. We kept on up the ravine, hoping that we might find a spring. We turned a corner of corner and my companion jumped right back on my feet, shouting, 'The water is good! I soon knew why. We had run plumb into a skunk. We managed to survive on the water we had found until the next day, when we got out of that region as soon as it was daybreak."

E. E. Goodrich and family, returned last week from an outing on Lost Lake, experienced a comical but near serious accident. Mr. Goodrich, accompanied by his small son, Edward, and the latter's young friend, Arthur Loftis, was fishing. He hooked a giant trout, and after playing it for several minutes was on the point of lifting it into the boat. The boys, unable to hold in their shouts of excitement, were interested spectators. In their eagerness to save the fish both young boys went head foremost into the lake. I was just about to get the boys out before they drowned," says Mr. Goodrich. "They escaped with slight strangling."

The Game Association has been informed by the State Fish and Game Commission that five carloads of trout fry have been allotted the county this season. The Association has notified citizens that fish will be available for stocking private pools if early application is made.

The sportsmen contemplate prosecution of the management of irrigation concerns, it is said, unless screens are kept on irrigation ditches. Despite warnings, the screens have been removed from a number of ditches, it has been stated.

J. H. Fredrick, who spent Sunday on the West Fork at Sandy Flat, reports fishy fishing on the branch good. Mr. Fredrick, who was accompanied by F. H. Stanton, caught 34 trout. The recent warm weather has caused the East and Middle Forks to become milky, which has rendered fly fishing poor. The cool weather that has just begun will cause the river to clear and fishermen are expecting unusually good fishing on the lower river.

Complaints have been laid before the Game Association against boys of the city, who, armed with small calibre rifles, are said to be killing silver gray squirrels. Boys, too, are said to be slaughtering mountain rabbits. Despite warnings, the screens have been removed from a number of ditches, it has been stated.

While July 4 was a pleasantly warm day on the lower levels of the mid-Columbia, L. B. Apin and Hugh G. Ball, who with their wives spent the day on a camping trip on the Lake Branch, declare that the temperature was unpleasantly cold. It was necessary to have a fire in order to keep comfortably warm. The men had fair luck fishing.

The following party, just back from a camping trip on the White Salmon river above Husum, reports the fishing fair: Mr. and Mrs. Earl Franz, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Franz, Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. McNary, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Porter, Miss Edna Jackson and Corbett Alexander. While the fish were not biting eagerly, they caught by the anglers were of good size.

M. B. Webster last week killed a false coyote just east of the city. He collected a bounty on the scalp.

C. H. Castner and Harry Farrell recently bagged the limit of trout on the West Fork and Lake Branch.
