Johnson and daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Howard, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Tompkins and daughter, Miss Dorothy.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Ferguson returned home from Portland Tuesday. They went down for a short business visit.

Work on the concrete road through Odell is on and the village is off the map so far as through motor traffic goes. All are looking forward to the time when this bit of road is complete.

The Association warehouse is undergoing repairs and improvements necessary to make the building a place in which apples may be safely held until shipped out from this point.

Last week we unintentionally omitted mention of the very pleasant evening arranged by Misses Olga and Edna Plog, assisted by Mrs. Duto, at the Plog home in Hood River in honor of Miss Alice Clark. We also failed to note the children's party given by Mrs. A. L. Benefiel in honor of the birthday anniversary of her daughter, little Miss Evelyn. Miss Dorothy Tompkins and Miss Miriam Clark helped, make the afternoon a jolly one for the little folks.

Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Welch and their daughter, Florence, of Portland, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Weber last week. Mr. Welch is an official of the O.-W. R. & N. Co. He has traveled extensively and after seeing Hood River valley and the scenic features of the Mount Hood region, he declared that this section will become one of the country's greatest and most popular playgrounds. Roads and hotels are the only things lacking, he said.

The Methodist Sunday school will hold its second annual picnic Wednesday, August 25. The committee in charge, composed of Allison Fletcher, J. C. Duckwall and G. A. Weber, will select the site this week, and the location will be announced next Sunday.

The usual services will be held at the Methodist church next Sunday.

In response to a request from E. E. Brodie, vice president of the National Editorial Association, Albert Tozier, a past president, attended the annual meeting of the Washington Press Association at Yakima last Friday and Saturday, to officially represent the national body.

One hundred and twenty-seven machines were counted headed for the Lost Lake section Sunday.

Campers report a big hazel nut crop.

Numbers of mountain springs are reported as showing a decrease in flow of water as the snow disappears from Mount Hood.

There are dozens of inquiries from strangers similar to the following asked Sunday by a man in a Marion, Ind., car: "What is the matter with the Hood River valley? Are the people discouraged? All along the road right out of Hood River to here the orchards seem neglected and there are weeds, by measurement six feet high, in the orchards, and no attempt to keep them down. A good recommendation for a valley so extensively advertised."

Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Evans, their son, Forrest, and daughter, M. Wilcox, and J. R. Wilcox returned last week from a tour of 1,089 miles, going via Seaside and Salem to Crater Lake, where they spent two days and nights. They came home by way of Bend, finding some very bad stretches of road en route. At Salem they were joined by Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Shinn, who accompanied them to Crater Lake, thus adding to the pleasure of the party.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Locke, whose home is in Fort Angeles, Wash., have been located in Mosier the last week or so, where Mr. Locke is doing some of the concrete work on the new school house. They have traveled about a good deal the last year. Since leaving their home in Washington, coming to The Dalles, they stayed five weeks on a job of work, then to Portland and Corvallis, where Mr. Locke worked five weeks on a bank building; then on to Grant's Pass, where they spent five months on concrete work. Leaving there in their Franklin they crossed the mountains into California, February 10, being told that that was the first car to succeed in making the trip over the mountains at that time of the season. They passed over roads that had been deserted for three years in going to some places in the Coos Bay country. They went to San Juan, Calif.; then to Pacific Grove, where they stayed a few months. In going from San Juan to Pacific Grove, a distance of 96 miles, they left winter and found summer time. Passing over the mountains they traveled through snow. En route to Los Angeles they camped three days on the beach at Venice, where they paid $1.50 for the privilege of camping on the sand space between the tidewater and the fence around a man's yard. Leaving there they went to San Diego, where they looked across the line into Mexico. Looking was enough, they did not venture over. On the return trip they came up the coast route to Bureka, Calif., visiting the old missions en route. Coming over this route they encountered more difficulties and had not a very exciting thrills. They declare that parts of the roads are not fit for travel for man or beast. One place they found a corduroy road for a distance of 15 miles; very rough, the boards in and out, mostly out. The road on each side of Crescent City is a series of very dangerous curves. One called Death Curve, seven miles south of Crescent City, was the worst. Here the road is on steep grade and around a sharp curve directly above the ocean, and in order to make this curve one must proceed very cautiously and go forward a few feet, then back up. Imagine this within a very limited space, the view of the ocean hundreds of feet below, down a perpendicular wall of rock. The curve derived its name from the many accidents that have happened passing travelers. Leaving Eureka they climbed over the mountains again to Grants Pass. Here they turned into the road to Crater Lake, paying $2.50 toll to pass. They came on to Bend and Maupin, where they visited a few days with Mr. Locke's brother. Here they left their car about five miles from the brother's house, walking the intervening distance over the rough road and through the timber. They arrived here about August 1. After this work is completed they will return to their home in Fort Angeles.
