GOV'T OPERATION OUT OF POLITICS

Party Leaders Convinced by Results of National Censuses of Editors.

VINDICATES FORMER POLL.

Washington.—Inner circles of both political parties here are greatly interested in the results of a national poll on the question of government operation among over 5,000 newspaper editors throughout the country. With 80 per cent of these editors, regardless of political faith, giving it as their impartial opinion that the public is more than ever opposed to the government going into business in competition with its citizens, observers here see little chance that either political party will find it a profitable campaign issue.

In the opinion of party leaders this sort of a canvass among newspaper editors is the best possible index of public opinion. They recall a similar questionnaire sent out a year ago in connection with the proposition that the government take over the railroads permanently. Replies at that time from approximately the same number of editors showed 83 per cent against the principle of government operation. They recall also that within ten days from publication of the result of the former questionnaire the sentiment for return of the railroads to their owners had definitely crystallized.

Comparison of present results in detail with those of a year ago convinces the political student not only that these editors have been accurate in their judgment, but that party considerations played no part in forming it. From Democratic and supposedly radical Texas, for example, the present questionnaire brought replies from editors of 24 papers, only three of which are Republican. Yet the percentage against government operation was 92, which is exactly the same as that given by 200 editors from Republican Michigan, among whom were representatives of only three Democratic papers. Other states that pair percentages significantly are Massachusetts and Nevada, with 100; Connecticut and South Carolina, with 97; Maine and West Virginia, with 95; Kentucky and New York, with 91; Missouri and Pennsylvania, with 89; Ohio and Oklahoma, with 87.

The result of the present poll as to government operation in each state are graphically shown by the following chart:

ORCHESTRA WILL FEATURE INDIAN MUSIC

No one ever dreamed there was any real music in the American Indian until Turlow Lieurance began to study the tribal melodies of the Red Man. During the past few years Mr. Lieurance has convinced the musical public that in the old Indian chants, war songs and dances of the first Americans there is not only an alluring charm, but a real musical background as well. Upon this setting Mr. Lieurance has contributed some modern music, among them being his famous "Waters of Minnetonka" and "Indian Love Songs," favorites of Alice Neilson, Alma Gluck and others.

FIAS, FURN AND FEATHERS

The other morning A. F. Davenport on arising, found that his recently purchased Irish setter pup had escaped from his backyard and was lost. He hastened down town, thinking the dog might have returned to the Franz hardware store, where he had been on display for a time. He met Earl Franz and enquired for his dog.

"That's a funny coincidence," said Mr. Franz, "my dog ran away from home this morning, too. I just caught him on the street and put him in the basement."

Mr. Davenport started to leave and just then a puppy set-up barked merrily in the store cellar. Mr. Davenport listened. Then turning to Mr. Franz he said:

"You sure that was your dog you found? That sounds mighty like my pup."

They then went down cellar. Mr. Davenport cited that the puppies had been of different sex. Sure enough they discovered that Mr. Franz had mistakenly tied up the Davenport pup. Mr. Davenport had recognized his setter by its merrily howl, with which he had grown familiar for several nights previously.

To avoid embarrassment and probable arrest of hunters who wish to retain pheasants shot from day to day, J. J. Craig and W. A. Cornell, deputy state game wardens, stationed here during the open season on China pheasants, will furnish hunters with tags. Tags, too, will be furnished out-of-town hunters who wish to ship their bags. The tags may be obtained at the Franz store.

"Suppose a man up from Portland wishes to remain for two days' hunting," says Mr. Craig. "If on the second day we happen to find him with more than five birds, naturally we are going to arrest him, unless the birds killed on the first day show tags."

Ranchers continue to display indignation over the influx of Portland hunters, who, it is claimed, swarm into the valley and create serious annoyance by trespassing into the very yard of ranch homes. Orchardists declare that their children and livestock are not safe from the careless hunters. Scores of automobiles of Portland hunters have visited here. One car carried five negro hunters.

While a few orchardists profess such an aversion for China pheasants that they would prohibit shooting of them at any season of the year, growers for the most part declare the handsome birds a pest for farmers. H. S. Galligan says the pheasants are very destructive. He planted a large block of peas seeds. These young seedlings sell for a very high price. When he went to cultivate the seedlings he discovered that pheasants had pulled up at least 81,000 of them. The birds had uprooted the little trees to get at the sprouted seeds. They are also very fond of sprouted corn.

Robins, free from attack since spring and early summer, when berry gardeners were aroused because of alleged depredations on their fruit, are again in bail. W. F. Laraway declared Tuesday that a flock of robins, apparently assembled for their southward flight, dined on the berries of his mountain ash trees before their departure.

LOST LAKE PICTURE APPEALS TO ALL

For a week recently P. W. Donnerberg, scenic photographer at Slocum & Canfield's, lingered through rainstorm and drizzle in the Lost Lake country awaiting the atmospheric condition that would result in a good picture of Lost Lake and Mount Hood. That he was successful and that his week's sojourn in the forest wilderness had its reward is evidenced today by the handsome pictures of Lost Lake that are being shown at the book store.

The picture that is valued most highly and which appeals to all who look upon it, shows Mount Hood from across the ripple of the forest jewel. One looks through a natural frame of giants of the forest. One immediately wants to possess one of the handsome pictures.

McNarys Have Adventure

While motoring up from Portland, accompanied by his wife and two weeks' old son, Robert G. McNary experienced a thrilling adventure Sunday when he was forced to steer his car in a roadside depression in order to avoid colliding with another automobile. A motorist had stopped at the roadside to replace a tire. Two machines were approaching the motionless car from the east as Mr. McNary approached from the west. The first would pass the man replacing his tire, but instead it darted in and came to a sudden halt. The driver of the rear car was confused by this action and applying his brakes suddenly skidded entirely around in the road, placing his car squarely in Mr. McNary's path.

"I went down into the bushes about ten feet," says Mr. McNary, "and I was never so scared in my life. Fortunately we came to a halt easily, and the baby, asleep in a suspended basket in the rear of the car, was not even awakened. It was some job to pull us out of that hole."
