THE EUROPEAN RELIEF FUND

The campaign that has been under way here this week in behalf of the starving children of Europe is not a drive in the sense that we came to know the meaning during days of the war. It has been rather an appeal to those who can afford to share their funds with Europe's starving children. Nobody will be asked to contribute other than those who can afford to add their proportion of the $23,000,000 that America hopes to raise for relieving the distress and misery that is beyond description of those who have witnessed it.

The spirit of Christmas will come with renewed glorification to those who give in the cause of charity for little children's sake. And there is another feature of the campaign of solicitation that should not be overlooked. Members of committees have been asked to use diligence in observing their communities and determining if any at home need help. It would be wrong and shameful to raise a fund for foreign sufferers and allow help to go hungry in cheerless huts.

We note that more Oregon grape is being used this year than ordinarily for Christmas decoration. Intertwined with sprigs of a prepared red flower, the glistening green and purple leaves of the Oregon evergreen surpass even holly boughs for beauty. The Oregon grape wreaths are symbolic of Christmas cheer at many homes and places of business.

If President-elect Harding will close his ears to the pleas of the sectionally and politically selfish and appoint to his cabinet men of sufficient caliber to consider national issues from a national viewpoint, the great problems that will be handed down to his administration will be solved.

The holiday number of the Portland Spectator is especially interesting. Of course it has Hugh Hume's usual decorated editorials. The publication breathes a Christmas spirit. It is filled with many special articles that are instructive and interesting.

With the weather so mild the horde of rats down on the Columbia lowlands will probably have a merry Christmas. In case of a freeze the rats would probably make it merry for many families. Already, it is said, they are invading basements of homes for food.

With only today and tomorrow left the tardy shopper will have to hurry to assemble his Christmas presents.

Labor and capital should remember that a third party, whose numbers are in a large majority, is always interested. When labor and capital fall out, the public always pays. The public has been paying too heavily for these difficulties.

Uncle Sam is still selling War Savings Stamps. They make a fine Christmas present for the kiddies. If you prefer, a savings bank account is just as good.

If only bootleg is available, turn down the Christmas toddy. Let the undertaker enjoy the day with his family.

Portland is getting ready for her "Beauty" auto show. If the weather remains open Hood River folk will be able to motor down for the event.

With state taxes boosted far beyond anticipations, the budget committee will find it necessary today to sharpen the pruning shears.

Light the Christmas candle and place it in the window tomorrow night. The old custom is a very beautiful one.

For Christmas fruit, nothing is better than your own Hood River apples.

We wish you a Merry Christmas!

Chevrolet Co. Makes Statement

The Portland office of the Chevrolet Co. has just sent the following statement to dealers:

"There has come to our attention a number of statements which, it is claimed, were made by other manufacturers to the effect that the Chevrolet Motor Company were going to discontinue the Model 'F' cars. We do not know how this originated, as it is absolutely without foundation. It is the intention of this company to manufacture, we hope, Model 'F's' for many years to come; in fact, as long as we have a demand for that particular model. This information is sent to you so that should the question be asked you can assure your customers that the elimination of the Model 'F' is not contemplated in any way—that it is a permanent feature in our line."

Wildroot keeps my hair healthy

"By using Wildroot regularly, I keep my hair healthy and glossy. I have lost a great deal of hair, but I have regained it by using Wildroot. I have no hair trouble. I love my hair and I love Wildroot. I have tried many other hair tonics, but Wildroot is the only one that has done for me what I needed."
