LABOR UNION PLANS BIG MASS MEETING

The labor union is planning a mass meeting at an early date when the public will be invited to participate. A. O. Young, state organizer for the American Federation, and Otto Hartwig, state president, according to J. H. McRae, president of the local union, will be here to deliver addresses.

Expressing the general principles of organized labor, the local union has presented the following for publication:

Organized labor, a creature of necessity, has grown and developed as man has grown in understanding down through the ages. It represents the struggle of the past. Its struggles have been the birth pain of civilization. Its principles are as stable and fundamental as the law of gravity; and as permanent as time. It is as vital to humanity as life itself. Without it man will become a slave, a degenerate. Destroy it and decline in mortality and citizenship will follow. A Christian nation cannot be developed upon long hours and low wages. Men with bowed backs will not look up. The labor movement is governed by natural law, a legitimate growth cannot be forced any more than you can force the growth of an oak tree.

It cannot be turned out of its natural course any more than the great Columbia can be turned out of its course without destruction of the country about it. It is a defense in defense of human liberty; it gives hope and aspiration and it builds a better manhood, a sweeter and better womanhood. It brings into the world a childhood that has greater possibilities of life. Child life and development greatly depends upon the conditions of toil of the father and mother before it, the kind of house they live in, their food and raiment. The life and development of future citizen, a future father or mother, depends upon the house they live in, the food they have and the manner in which they are dressed.

Hours, wages and conditions of employment, what do they mean? How have shorter hours and better wages been secured? What is the ultimate goal of the trade union movement? Are you concerned in a better citizenship? Are you your brother's keeper? Do you care for the happiness of others? Does the happiness, health and the moral surroundings of others affect you? Does it affect home life? Is the striving for better things for naught? Betterment in life has been the yearning, the hope and prayer of all generations. He that would deny you the right to organize to associate with your fellow men in the pursuit of these blessings, denies you your greatest fundamental right. He that denies you the right to organize, the right to have someone to say as to your chosen representative, as to the conditions of employment denies you life. Your labor is your life. To protect life we organize; to protect life we ask that we have something to say as to hours, wages and working conditions. For, as we said before, these things vitally affect the life and all human things, affect the very life of our great nation.

This is the anniversary of our great Lincoln, who said that capital was created by labor; that labor existed before capital; without labor capital would never have been created; hence labor must, or should, have the greatest consideration. He could have added that labor is not a commodity, but a human being, while capital is an inert thing labor has life, a living, breathing being, whose condition depicts the standard of mankind of the nation in which he lives. The progress, the standard of morals, the intellect of those human beings is wrapped up in the great labor movement.

Tread the way carefully, though you progress slowly, do not become discouraged. Human advancement to be permanent must not be attempted by vicious propaganda or action.

HOOD RIVER ODELL

THE HAYES PAYS

Hood River county has a new fruit inspector. His work is going to result in inestimable benefits if all growers give him the measure of co-operation he deserves.

Every grower of the Valley can afford to give this co-operation. Indeed, he cannot afford not to. The future prosperity of the Valley depends on careful, consistent application of spray materials.

The Hayes Sprayer will help along with the campaign outlined, if growers will only give it a chance. You do not have to "bust the bank" when you buy a Hayes and yet you get equipment for as thorough and effective work as though you paid out a large sum for mechanical elaboration and complication.

We mean it, when we say the HAYES PAYS. It pays from the standpoint of original investment and by the results obtained.

POULTRY RAISERS ATTEND MEETING

With about 50 poultry raisers from various points of the county present, Prof. Brewster, formerly of the Oregon Agricultural College, last Friday at the Commercial Club delivered a lecture on incubation, the care of small chicks and methods of feeding. The meeting was held under auspices of the Hood River County Poultry Association. This organization, according to the president, E. M. White, is making a constant growth. Six new members were added at the meeting.

The affiliated members of the association are now pooling their eggs for sale. Most of the eggs are shipped away, although sufficient are kept at home to supply the local trade. Eight years ago Hood River county shipped in 75 per cent of the eggs used.

Grand Jury Meets Today

The grand jury, impaneled the first of the year, has been called to reassemble today by Judge Wilson. The jury will pass on several cases that have come up from justice's court, in order that they may be disposed of with dispatch at the regular session of court next week. J. H. Dunn, former principal of the Cascade Locks school, was bound over to the grand jury on a statutory charge involving a young girl student. Kesar, Bryan, aged 18, is held on a charge of burglarizing a shanty occupied by woodcutters near Wyeth. J. H. McNutt, Barrett rancher, is held in jail, unable to post $1,500 bonds, on a charge of beating his wife and daughter.
