Your correspondent has heard many expressions of approval of the conduct of officers and men and admiration and sympathy for the man who skill as a marksman brought to him the task of removing the central figure in a tragedy and solving a problem which we are glad to say is of rare occurrence.

Of the few who are inclined to criticize we would say that had conditions been reversed and had they been in the power and subject to the whim of the outlaw they would have been glad indeed that there were red blooded men who did not fail.

Traffic Officers Report Arrests

Traffic Officer Murray and Wood report a record of 27 arrests for violation of state laws and city ordinances the past week. The reports show that many motorists persist in parking on the Columbia River Highway paying at the Columbia Point tunnel and at bad curves. Large signs notify the public against such practice.

The following Highway speeders were apprehended: A. E. Duri, of Bull Run; P. M. Shaffer, of Portland, and A. F. Cobb, of Portland. The latter, a short time after he was tagged by an officer for alleged Highway speeding, was arrested a second time on a similar charge in the city.

"We have noticed several minor accidents on the Highway," says Mr. Murray. "The law requires that all traffic accidents should be reported to authorities within 24 hours. Unless this law is complied with, we will have to arrest drivers."

Others of the 27 arrests mentioned in the traffic officers' report were for minor infractions.

The Story of Our States

By JONATHAN BRACE XI.—NEW YORK

THE STORY of New York should rightly begin with 1524, eighty-five years before Henry Hudson's voyage in his little boat, the Half Moon, up the river which now bears his name. For at that early date an Italian navigator, Verrazano, exploring for France, sailed into New York bay. This first visit to New York made little stir and was soon forgotten, and it was Hudson's rediscovery which tempted the Dutch to send over colonists and obtain for the Dutch West India company a monopoly of the Dutch fur trade in America. The new colony which was started in 1623 called its territory New Netherlands, after its mother country, and their principal city New Amsterdam. It is interesting to reflect that Manhattan Island, which is now New York city, was purchased from the Indians for $24 worth of beads and ribbons. Even in its earliest days the settlement on Manhattan Island was cosmopolitan. In 1643 it is reported that eighteen different languages were spoken there. In 1664 the English captured New Netherlands, and King Charles II presented the colony to his brother, the duke of York, who was later King James II, and its name was then changed to New York.

New York played a leading part in the formation of the United States. It was Alexander Hamilton, who was New York's representative in framing the Constitution and it was New York city which was selected as the first capital of the new Union, where Washington was inaugurated the first president. Ever since the Empire state, as New York is sometimes called, has held the deciding voice in presidential elections. Though its size is only 49,204 square miles, not quite half way in the list of states according to area, its great population gives New York forty-five presidential electors, the largest number of any of the states.

The Story of Our States

By JONATHAN BRACE XII.—NORTH CAROLINA

THE CAPITAL of North Carolina is very appropriately named Raleigh, for it was Sir Walter Raleigh who was responsible for North Carolina's first settlement. It was in 1584 that Raleigh obtained permission from Queen Elizabeth to plant an English colony in America, and the expeditions which he sent established a little colony on Roanoke island. There in 1587 was born the first American child of English parents. She was named Virginia Dare, after the virgin queen. This colony, due to England's war with Spain, could not be properly supported, and after a few years perished. It was not until over a century later that permanent settlements were made. Daring pioneers from Virginia pressed south into the new territory, and these, augmented by a large company of Huguenots from France and a greater number of Germans from the Palatinate, founded the first North Carolina town of Newburn in 1710. By the time of the Revolution the population in North Carolina had increased to such an extent with an influx of Scotch-Irish and Scotch Highlanders who settled chiefly in the western counties, that it ranked fourth among the original thirteen colonies. Today its population entitles it to twelve electoral votes for president. In area it stands about half way among the states with 52,429 square miles. North Carolina was the twelfth state to adopt the Constitution, the formal ratification taking place in November, 1789. The derivation of the name Carolina, as in the case of South Carolina, came from the Latin Carolina, meaning Charles, and was given originally in honor of King Charles IX of France and retained by King Charles II of England. North Carolina is also known as the Old North state.

Crankshaft Penetrates Standpipe

The automobile of C. A. Bell played the principal role Sunday in a thrilling runaway down First street. The brakes of the car became loosened as it stood at a curb. Spectators on the porch of the Mt. Hood Hotel, saw the pilotless car start. Although it had traveled only a short distance, not over 300 feet, it had gained such momentum, when it struck north of the water tanks of locomotives, that the crankshaft of the machine struck the pipe squarely, puncturing it. The hole left was as clean as though bored.

THINKER'S LOT ONE OF JOY

But He Has to Travel a Long and Weary and Rough Road to Attain It.

Your education begins when what is called your education is over—when you no longer are stringing together the pregnant thoughts, the "jewels five-words-long" which great men have given their lives to cut from the raw material, but have begun yourself to work upon the raw material for results which you do not see, cannot predict, and which may be long in coming, when you take the fact which life offers you for your appointed task.

No man has earned the right to intellectual ambition until he has learned to lay his course by a star which he has never seen—to dig by the divining rod for springs which he may never reach. In saying this, I point to that which will make your study heroic. For I say to you in all sadness of conviction that to think great thoughts you must be heroes as well as idealists.

Only when you have worked alone—when you have felt proud of a black gulf of solitude more boiling than that which surrounds the dying man, and in hope and in despair have trusted to your own unshaken will—then only will you have achieved. Thus only can you gain the secret isolated joy of the thinker, who knows that a hundred years after he is dead and forgotten, men who never heard of him will be moving to the measure of his thought—the subtle rapture of a postponed power, which the world knows not because it has no external trophies, but which to his prophetic vision is more real than that which commands an army.

And if this joy should not be yours still it is only that you can know that you have done what it lay in you to do—can say that you have lived, and be ready for the end.

Teak Wood Highly Valued.

Teak, for some purposes the most valuable of all woods, is chiefly produced commercially by Burma, although it is also supplied by India, Siam and Java. As a plant, teak is remarkable for its large leaves, which reach ten to twenty inches in length and eight to fifteen in breadth, and are so rough that they are used for sandpaper. The trees often grow 80 to 100 feet tall, with a circumference of six to ten feet, the largest recorded log cut in Upper Burma in 1898, having measured 87 1/2 feet in length and yielded over twelve tons of timber. The wood varies from yellow or straw color to a rich brown when first cut, darkening on exposure; sometimes it has dark and almost black streaks or veins. It is hard, and very durable.

Mystery of Egg Lines.

Why are some birds' eggs pure white and unmarked and others variously and highly colored, with all sorts of marks upon them, from minute dots to scraggly lines? asks the American Forestry Magazine. How are these spots and markings produced? Nests of birds run all the way from the bare rock on the coast, to those laying ten or more eggs in a very elaborate nest built in very different localities.
